Hibbard one of the membership committee; Walter B. Trowbridge and C. S. Denison, members of the regatta committee; and H. S. Crowell on the house committee.

—Yesterday afternoon the storekeepers and their clerks enjoyed the last half holiday off of the summer. It has always been the custom, at any rate for the past few years, to close the grocery and provision stores each Thursday afternoon during July and August. Busy as these merchants and their helpers are, they are such needed opportunity for recreation.

—The Boston Herald refers as follows to a match race which will be run off on the Walworth track next Monday: "Joe Downey and Arthur W. Porter have been matched to ride a relay match race of 25 miles against Harry Elkes, at Waltham, next Monday afternoon. This will be one of the hardest tasks that the clever Elkes has undertaken, for both Downey and Porter are excellent pace followers. It will be Porter's first appearance behind motor pace, his recent match with Gibson having fallen through on account of an injury which Porter met with in training."

—An enjoyable affair Wednesday evening was the lawn party given by Miss Annie L. Marshman and Mr. Fred C. Marshman in honor of their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Grant of Hartford, Conn. The grounds about the Marshman residence on Park street were elaborately decorated with vari-colored Chinese lanterns and the interior of the house was beautified with a profusion of cut flowers. About 40 young people made up the company and listened to an informal entertainment program furnished by Prof. George Vezie of Chelsea, Mrs. Grant, Mr. English and Mrs. Beverley. Later refreshments were served.

—The annual Christmas box which the young ladies of Eliot church send to Miss David C. Cavanaugh, must be sent a month earlier than usual this year. Any gifts may be sent before Sept. 11, to Miss Daniels, 15 Church street.

—A collision between a bicycle and a horse and buggy in this place Wednesday evening, was the cause of considerable excitement about 8.30 o'clock. Miss Julia Daley of 373 Eliot street, was riding on Washington street, near the Harvard street bridge, when she came into collision with Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Wright's horse and carriage. The horse became unmanageable and overturned the carriage throwing the occupants to the ground. They received severe cuts and bruises but fortunately escaped serious injury. Miss Daley was injured. Mr. Wright's horse appeared badly used up, and the carriage was considerably damaged. The horse freed itself from the vehicle in the middle of the excitement, but was later captured by Patrolman S. Z. Burke.

Mr. Stanley Climbs Mt. Washington.

The first horseless carriage to ascend Mt. Washington pulled up in front of the stable at Summit at 11.35 yesterday morning, and its passengers, Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Stanley of Newton, alighted to receive congratulations on being the first to climb the mountain by the power of steam over the carriage road.

The summit colony had been notified by telephone the night before of the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley at Darbyfield Cottage. Then the wire stopped working, and it could not be learned just what time they were coming up.

In the morning word came that the horseless vehicle was on the way, having made the Half Way house in an hour and a quarter. Then all was excitement, and every view point was thronged with watchers.

At 11.30, the little vehicle with its two passengers was seen rounding the curve by the gulf. Swiftly and almost noiselessly it sped up the "home stretch" and made the last sharp rise in front of the upper stable.

"We left Newton Saturday noon," said Mr. Stanley, "stopped at Newburyport, Portsmouth, West Ossipee and North Conway, and on Wednesday morning we ran to Darbyfield Cottage, remaining there during the afternoon and night. We learned there that it would be necessary to make the ascent of the mountain in the morning, to avoid meeting teams which go down in the afternoon. The cyclometer at the base of the mountain (the site of the old Glen house) registered 197 miles, which is the distance from Newton to the base of Mt. Washington.

"We had averaged to that point 11-10 miles per hour during the run from Newton. This we regarded, considering the condition of the road, quite remarkable. We found the ascent more difficult than we anticipated, although we had no trouble in climbing the steepest grades. The day was perfect, being practically cloudless, with no wind. The actual running time from the base to summit was two hours and ten minutes.

"The road from Glen to summit is eight miles long, and the actual ascent is about 4000 feet, making the average grade about 12 per cent. The amount of gasoline required to ascend the mountain was less than two gallons. Thus it will be seen that for a man and his wife to ride up Mt. Washington by such a vehicle will cost less than 25 cents for power. It required the water tank twice full to make the ascent.

"As the Half Way house is well supplied with water it forms a good place for refilling the tank."

Tennis Tournament.

The Hunnewell Club tennis tournament promises to be an interesting affair. Many of the players of the different Newtons and of Brookline have already entered, and others are expected before the drawings are made today, Sept. 1st, at 8 p. m. Play will begin at 2 p. m. on Sept. 2nd, and will be continued Labor Day at 10 a. m., and on each afternoon at 2 p. m. until the finals.

Many enquiries have been made as to the admission of spectators. The tennis committee wish it understood that admission is free, and that all friends of Club members and of the tennis players are cordially invited.

Going to Philadelphia.

There will be many from Newton at the National encampment of the G. A. R. to be held next week in Philadelphia. Among those who will leave Boston next Sunday at 10 a. m., will be Commander John Flood of Charles Ward Post 62, G. A. R., Mrs. Flood, Rev. F. E. McDaniel, H. D. Deagen, J. Cousins, C. C. Patten, E. Gott, J. Graham, D. Hurley, J. Ryan, T. Dolan, S. A. Langley, W. J. Holmes, W. Bowen, A. A. Bradford, A. Thwing, A. H. Leonard, M. C. Laffie, R. T. Laffie and W. A. Wetherbee.

Special Meeting of Aldermen.

This afternoon at 3 there will be a special meeting of the board of aldermen. It is expected that the session will occupy but a short time as the only business on the docket is the drawing of two jurors.

AUBURNDALE.

—Lasell Seminary opens Sept. 14th.

—Mrs. Guiney of Vista avenue has moved to Boston.

—Mr. William Lomax is spending his vacation at Newport.

—Rev. and Mrs. H. A. Hazen are at the Fairview, Intervale, N. H.

—Mrs. D. Frank Guilford of Melrose street is visiting friends in Somerville.

—Mr. Charles Higgins of Woodbine street has returned from a brief outing.

—Miss H. M. Childs will return the first of next week from her summer's outing.

—Mr. and Mrs. John Johnson are to be congratulated upon the birth of a daughter.

—Mr. George Johnson of Grove street has returned from an outing at Nantasket.

—George A. Freeman, formerly of this place, is rejoicing over the arrival of a son.

—Dr. Hall and mother of Central street will return from New Hampshire, Monday, Sept. 4th.

—Miss Mabel Pluta of Rowe street has returned from a few weeks' outing in New Hampshire.

—Mr. Wallace Nicholson is in the employ of the New England Automatic Machine Co. of Boston.

—Mr. Leonard D. Goodnough enters the Worcester Polytechnic Institute this fall as a sophomore.

—Miss Lizzie Hathaway of Crescent street has returned from her summer vacation at Medway.

—Mrs. Talcey of Charles street has returned from the Newton Hospital, and is slowly improving.

—Mr. C. H. Sprague and family of Central street are spending a few weeks at the White Mountains.

—Mr. E. P. Allen and family of Hancock street have returned from a summer vacation spent in Maine.

—Mr. J. S. Hunt and family of Woodbine street have returned from a summer's outing in New Hampshire.

—Mr. Michael McCarthy of the Adams Express is still confined to his home with a severe attack of rheumatism.

—Mr. Bragdon of Lasell Seminary gave all his servants a very enjoyable outing at Nantasket one day last week.

—Miss Kate M. Plummer of Woodbine street has returned from a few weeks' sojourn at South Harswell, Me.

—Mr. Charles Tucker of Bourne street is visiting his sister in Norton, and his brother in Providence, R. I.

—Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Bell of Natick, and formerly of Auburndale, are receiving congratulations on the birth of a baby girl.

—Miss Bessie Martin, who has been visiting Mrs. G. B. H. Griffin of Vista avenue, has returned to her home in Dorchester.

—Mrs. Cassie Severy and niece, Lizzie Dunbar of Bourne street, have returned after a week's absence in Rockland, Me.

—P. A. McKie, Frank Washburn and D. J. O'Donnell went on a fishing trip Tuesday, down the harbor. They report good luck.

—Miss Helen Childs, proprietor of the dry goods emporium in Haskins' block, is at Salem Willows for a few weeks for her health.

—Work is rapidly progressing on Taylor's new block, and it will probably be ready for occupancy about the last of this month or the first of next.

—Mr. George Johnson has let one of the stores of his new block to an Italian fruit dealer, and the one on the opposite corner to Bernard, the baker of Waltham.

—Gorman's Cosmopolitans have proved immensely popular during the last week at Norumbega Park, and the crowds have hardly been equaled before this summer.

—Mrs. Linda Cook Freeman, who has been visiting among relatives and friends in this place, was called by telegram to her home in Auburndale, Ohio, by the illness of her son.

—Auburndale Lodge of Good Templars had two propositions for membership last Thursday evening. A very enjoyable good of the order with ice-cream and cake was provided by the committee.

—The Newton Boat Club has arranged to give a series of band concerts at the Riverside clubhouse on Saturday evenings, Sept. 9, 16, and 23. They will last from 7.30 to 10.45 o'clock, and will be provided by Harry Daggett's orchestra.

—Already the management of the Riverside Recreation grounds have arranged for some very interesting foot ball games for the coming season. The grounds are in excellent condition and everything points toward a good series for the fall campaign.

—A pocket book containing $65 was either lost or stolen at the Riverside Recreation grounds last Saturday during the progress of the athletic meet of the Amateur Athletic Union. It was the property of Johnson Bicelew, who has reported his loss to the police.

—The services will be resumed with a prayer meeting at the Methodist church, Friday evening, Sept. 1st, at 7.45. Next Sunday morning the pastor will preach, after which the Lord's Supper will be administered. Sunday school at 12. Evening services with special address by the pastor at 7.30.

—Mr. Raymond L. Bridgman's new book, "The Master Idea," has just been issued by The Pilgrim Press of Boston and Chicago. The book has four parts, God in Nature, God in Mind, God in Political Life, and God in Personal Life. The book will be read with great interest by the author's friends here.

—Never has the Riverside Recreation grounds witnessed such crowds as those who watched the National A. U. games on Saturday last. Although special provision had been made for reserved seats the number of applicants for them exceeded the seating capacity of the stands. Undoubtedly since the reputation of the grounds has been established and as there will be many such athletic meets, the management will provide new and larger grand stands.

FINE APARTMENT HOUSES.

NOW BEING ERRECTED ON THE BOULEVARD NEAR THE SUMMIT OF WABAN HILL, THE ENTERPRISE OF MR. DANA ESTES.

For a number of years land owners and syndicates have been active in forwarding the movement of suburban apartment houses. Until the past year this movement had not extended as far as Newton, but had been confined to Boston's direct suburbs and to Brookline. There has been a constant demand for this class of houses, and Mr. Dana Estes anticipating this demand, and appreciating the fact that Boston's suburbs contained no more beautiful or attractive spot than Chestnut Hill for starting this movement in the Newtons, proposes building at once six apartment houses, high grade both in architecture and construction, and furnished with all the modern comforts obtainable. The site selected is a central one fronting on Commonwealth avenue, near Hammond street, and at its intersection with Mallet road, South and Ward streets. These roads afford direct communication with Boston on the east, Brookline, Chestnut Hill, and West Roxbury on the south and Newton on the west and north.

The location is ideal, being on the slope of Waban Hill, which is especially adapted to terracing. It overlooks the reservoir of the Metropolitan Water Board on the west, and the Chestnut Hill reservoir on the north and east. Since all the land adjoining Waban Hill is especially restricted as to building, only first-class dwellings can be erected, and the beauty and attractiveness of the neighborhood cannot be marred by inferior buildings. The buildings will consist of a series of apartment houses on three sides of a square, with ample space for light and air between all of them, and so arranged that every suite will be open to the sunshine and extended views. They will contain all the latest and best improvements, including bath, steam heat and open fires, or electric heaters for emergencies, gas ranges, hot water from central plant, latest forms of electric appliances, soap stone wash tubs, set ventilated outlets for refrigerators, etc. In addition there will be extensive roof gardens and terraces with facilities for awnings, hammocks and benches not elsewhere obtainable. A portion will be space for room suites with over 2300 feet of floor space, and others of seven, eight and nine rooms with bicycle and storage rooms. Extensive plans have been made to combine out-of-door and social life, and at the end in view the additional luxuries of pleasure grounds, terraces, roof gardens and facilities in connection with the neighborhood. Commonwealth Club for out of door games, such as golf, tennis, croquet in summer, and skating, coasting and tobogganing in winter. A casino will also be provided in which dancing parties, lectures and concerts can be given. A stable will also be erected in connection with the Commonwealth Club.

Mr. Arthur H. Bowditch, the architect, has already had marked success in his work and the "Waverley Hotel," "The Hotel," "The Waban Hotel," "The Monument," "The Wachusett," and "The Norumbega." The "Chestnut Hill" is now in the process of construction and will be ready for occupancy about the first of November. The architecture is of the early English style and finished with a composite of Flemish bond brick work and other materials. A new experiment has been tried which has worked successfully in other apartment houses. Mr. James McNamee of Boston has built, instead of the common brick and asbestos partitions between the suites, a new quality of concrete walls, which is made of ash, cement and coarse gravel. With his new method of constructing these walls, they cost about the same as a one layer brick partition without foundation. As these walls are their own support, there can be absolutely no shrinkage, they are practical, and from their composition both fire and water proof. These walls form a very strong safeguard against fire in the portion of the building cannot spread. Great danger can thus be avoided as the family or families in the burning section have simply to take refuge in another part and the fire cannot spread, and with this absolutely no wood-work for it to destroy. The buildings are very attractive both outside and inside, being four and one half stories high, having five floors, counting the basements and large storage attics.

Such a movement cannot help being successful, and should the present standard be maintained, Newton may well be proud of her homes and her apartment dwellings.

called Grain-O. It is a delicious, appetizing, nourishing food drink to take the place of coffee. Sold by all grocers and liked by all who have used it because when properly prepared it tastes like the finest coffee but is free from all its injurious properties. Grain-O aids digestion and strengthens the nerves. It is not a stimulant but a health builder, and children, as well as adults, can drink it with great benefit. Costs about 1-4 as much as coffee. 15 and 25c.

Obituary.

Died in Concord, Aug. 22, Thatcher, son of the Rev. H. P. and Elizabeth T. Dewey, who was born Jan. 5, 1801.

Funeral services held at the home, 3 Pine street, Thursday afternoon, Aug. 24, at 1 o'clock. Burial at Mount Auburn.

The sudden death of this child of rare promise aroused grief which is shared by all who knew him and who saw in him those many qualities of vigorous frankness and genuine courtesy which shone so plainly in his daily conduct. His alert and graceful carriage was an indicative characteristic of his nature, and his sunny disposition and winsome presence endeared him even to those who knew him only cursorily. He was born into an ever widening circle of loving associations and his sudden death brings a keen and sorrowful appreciation of the strength and beauty by which he had attached himself to so many lives, who come now to share, if not to lighten the crowning sorrow which has been so permanently laid upon his stricken parents and family.

The services were beautifully simple and were conducted by the Rev. F. D. Ayer, D. D., pastor emeritus of the North church, and the Rev. L. H. Thayer of Boston. Mrs. Frank E. Brown and Mr. Frank P. Andrews rendered two musical selections, one of them, the "Children's Evening Prayer," being among Thatcher's favorite verses.

The remembrances of flowers were most numerous, and mutually and beautifully expressed the large place which this child held in the hearts of the community. Mr. William F. Thayer superintended the arrangements. The bearers were Dr. C. P. Bancroft, Mr. Willis D. Thompson, Mr. Louis C. Merrill, the Rev. John Vannevar, Mr. B. C. White, Mr. J. C. Derby, Mr. James H. Holland and Mr. Harley B. Roby, whose children were Thatcher's neighbors and playmates.

The casket was taken by an afternoon train to Mount Auburn for burial in the Thatcher family lot, where rest the lady's great grandparents. The committal service was performed by the Rev. Mr. Thayer. A small group of Dr. Dewey's parishioners accompanied the funeral party to Mount Auburn, where the loving hands of friends performed with tenderness the last offices for a sweet personality which had endeared itself to all.

FIGHTING THE MEAT TRUST.

THE SECRETARY OF THE BOARD OF AGRICULTURE TRIES TO HELP THE FARMERS—THE RISE IN PRICE OF MEAT WHOLLY UNNECESSARY.

(Boston Dispatch to the Springfield Republican.)

In the interest of farmers, Secretary Stockwell of the state board of agriculture is giving publicity to some opinions regarding the recent rise in the price of meat. For himself he says that his belief, from what he can gather on the situation, is that the increase is wholly unnecessary, and is made solely for the benefit of the great Chicago meat trust. If there is to be any increase in the price, it should go to the farmers, but they are getting no more than before. The secretary is giving some circulation to the reason for the meat extortion, as published in the New York World, as the farmers will not generally see it. The paper says:—

With a candor so extraordinary that it might justly be characterized as insolent, a representative of a meat packing firm has explained to the World the disastrous and inevitable rise in the price of meat. There is no scarcity of cattle, he says, and hogs are selling at the Chicago stock-yards at lower prices than they brought a year ago. But the meat trust desires to control the British market and drive out Australian competition. To that end it is selling enormous quantities of meat to England at a loss and it has decided to make the American people pay the loss. By shipping large quantities of meat to England it creates an appearance of scarcity here and with that for excuse it has raised prices here from 30 to 50 per cent, so that its dividends may not be impaired by its losses abroad. As for the retailers, this packer's representative coolly says, they must protect themselves by advancing retail prices. As for the hungry people, the trust is not concerned about them. The name of the United States attorney-general is John W. Griggs, and he is that sort of attorney-general who thinks it would be "superfluous" for him to try to enforce the law of the land against trusts.

There is also printed in typewriter on the same slip as the above the following from the Boston Herald:—The retailers are advancing the price of meat because the wholesalers have done so, and the wholesalers point to the action of the great beef packers in Chicago to justify their marking up of prices. "These packers in turn are still advancing their quotations, and they coolly say that there is no prospect of a return to lower prices, but that further advances may be expected. Meanwhile the supply of cattle from the great ranches is reported larger than ever, and we hear of no similar advance paid to the men who sell cattle and sheep to the combine. It looks very much like a clear case of extortion on the part of the big packers who control the beef supply of the country."

All this business has its bearing on the political situation. Already many republicans have said that they will not vote the republican ticket at the next presidential election on account of the rapid growth of trusts, which are fostered by the republican party and whose beneficiaries are largely republicans. The Chicago packers are evidently making votes against McKinley, and it seems that some republicans are ready to use their influence in the same direction as a means of punishing the trusts.

Mr. Myers's Republicanism.

Those who are opposing Mr. Myers for the speakership are spreading it broadcast that his affiliation with the republican party is much too weak to permit him to be selected to fill the chair of the House of Representatives. Replying to such a charge Mr. Myers could do no better than refer to his speech nominating Governor Wood for lieutenant governor three years ago. It was as follows:—

Mr. Chairman, the Republican party is ever proud of the illustrious names that adorn its ranks. Believing in its principles with all the intensity of a devoted patriotism, determined that those principles shall prevail at whatever cost the Republican party will make full well that it can accomplish its high aim under the leadership of honest, courageous and intrepid men, men of high character, of stainless lives and high purpose. Such men the Republican party has ever delighted to honor. Such a man, I believe, the Republicans of Massachusetts, assembled in convention today are to summon once more to take his place before the people with whom he has marched for the last two years to victory. (Applause.)

Mr. President and gentlemen of the convention, your thoughts have already outrun my words, and the name I shall soon speak is on all your lips. The Republican party has honored him before, and in honoring him, it has honored itself, and it has gained the support of those among our fellow-citizens who most prize high patriotism, devoted worth and patriotic devotion. He is known and admired from the Cape to the Berkshire Hills, and he is trusted and honored wherever he is known. He has brought strength to our party because men believed in him, and they knew that the party was worthy of all trust that was placed in the leadership of such men; a public official of unblemished record, free from all entanglements of pure life, the highest type of American manhood and high citizenship, a gentleman without guile, and without pretense—I name him as the choice of this convention for the second place on the ticket we are to nominate to-day—Roger Wolcott of Boston (great applause), the present and next lieutenant governor of the commonwealth; I move that he be nominated by acclamation. (Great applause.)

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., 111 N. 4th St., Oreg., is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollar reward for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. THIS MAN OBJECTS

TO THE LEASE OF THE ALBANY ROAD TO THE NEW YORK CENTRAL.

A Springfield man who signs himself F. S. J. has written to the Republican about the lease of the Boston & Albany railroad to the N. Y. Central.

This man evidently travels. He appears to know a thing or two about railroads, and his letter is well worth reading. Here is the letter:—

In your article in Sunday's issue in regard to the lease of the Boston & Albany to the New York Central you say: "They (the public) may find, however, some compensation for this in reduced passenger fares." I do not see the slightest hope for this, as it is a notorious fact that the New York Central people have never done anything for the public but what they have been compelled to do by law. Their charter from the state compels them to carry passengers at two cents per mile, but they do not do this on any of their leased lines, as, for instance, on the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg, where they charge three cents per mile.

"Most of the arguments pro and con in regard to this lease have been based on the amount of interest the stock holders shall receive, and very little has been said on behalf of the traveling public, who furnish the money to pay the interest. It is the duty of the legislature to protect the public and before ratifying the lease their interests should be considered. The New York Central is very arbitrary and conducts its business on the so-called Vanderbilt dictum, 'the public be damned,' and this spirit runs through the system from the president downward. The New York Central gets possession of the Boston and Albany, I think the traveling public will be much disappointed. While the road is leased to the New York Central they be good as any, is not stone ballasted or oiled; their stations, with only two or three exceptions, are tumble-down, dirty and inconvenient. They have a few old express trains, if you can get on them, but their parlor cars, if not, the 'coaches' are poor and few in number, so as to force as many as possible into the parlor cars. Accommodation trains are slow and dirty."

"No stop-overs are allowed on any ticket except at Niagara Falls, and said ticket must be used before midnight of next day after purchase. By this means they make it almost impossible for a tourist to stop over. For example, if you want to stop off three or four times between Albany and Utica, it will cost six or eight cents more than if you go right through, as you must buy a ticket at every stopping place and pay an extra two cents for a fraction of a mile, and also recheck your baggage every time."

"They are compelled by law to issue a mileage book at two cents per mile, but it is not good to bearer. They make you pay five cents for newspapers on the trains and in the stations, or you can go without, and have to pay five cents, Mr. Editor, for a Republican in Albany station. They will not allow hotel omnibuses in their station yards, but try to force you to patronize 'Westcott,' for instance, instead of getting in the hotel 'bus at the station. You must walk a distance like walking from our station to Main street. These are small things, but are of more importance to passengers and freight to carry in the cars of the stockholders getting an additional 1 per cent. The Boston & Albany is a through line of communication between East and West, and as long as there are passengers and freight to carry, they should share if it is not leased to the New York Central. The only complaint I hear about the Boston & Albany is the slowness of its express trains."

On Monday, Labor Day, Sept. 4th, the Great Free Picnic will take place from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m., the air will be filled with mirth, music and merry-making. Twelve teams of ten men each will engage in a great tug-of-war contest for a prize of $50 in gold. Prizes will be given for running, jumping, pole vaulting, egg races, obstacle races, hurdle races, ladies' nail driving matches, throwing the weights and a hundred other sports. The tug-of-war matches have aroused the most widespread enthusiasm, and thousands of the friends of the strong armed and full chested athletes will be on hand to cheer on their favorites to victory. Many regular trains run to Newton Lower Falls from all points during the day and evening.

A Druggist's Duties.

The writer's attention has recently been called to a phase of the druggist's duties, which would lead one to believe that they are the most abused set of men on earth. Aside from being called on for everything from a toothpick to a pint of peanuts, they must at a minute's notice act as a general information bureau, telephone exchange and as a sub-postal station. This latter in particular is the bane of the druggist's life. No matter what time of day or night, no matter what he may be doing, the door opens, in comes one of the gentler sex. "I would like one postal card please," says the fair dame. The clerk has walked the entire length of the store to wait on this customer, and smiling politely he turns and covers his head, captures the card, and lays it before her. She gives him a quarter in payment; he still smiles, but the smile has lost some of its elasticity, for he must now wait for the customer to get down to the cash drawer, makes the change, receives the thanks of his gentle friend if she doesn't forget, and as she walks out of the store he stands very still, thinking, just thinking, "He is not a postal clerk, and this thing happens not only once but perhaps thirty times a day, and not a penny of profit in it. Over in Roxbury a short time ago a young lady who had been doing all of her stamp trading with a certain druggist, called one day, and after purchasing a couple of one-cent stamps, turned to leave the store, when the proprietor asked her, "Don't you ever buy anything else?" "Oh, yes," she replied, "but I go down to Houghton & Dutton's when I do." "Well," said the druggist, "run in sometime when you want a stick of licorice, we have a first rate stock." Whether she ran in or not, we have never learned, but the druggist is still doing business at the old stand, handing out the little red stickers to all who ask, and still wearing a sad sweet smile.

Announcement.

To accommodate those who are partial to the use of atomizers in applying liquids into the nasal passages for catarrhal troubles, the proprietors prepare Cream Balm in liquid form, which will be known as Ely's Liquid Cream Balm. Price including the spraying tube is 75cts. Druggists or by mail. The liquid form embodies the medicinal properties of the solid preparation. Cream Balm is quickly absorbed by the membrane and does not dry up the secretions but changes them to a natural and healthy character. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., N. Y.

"Way Down East" Labor Day.

Visitors to Boston on Labor Day can take a trip "Way Down East" at the Tremont Theatre in the afternoon, as a special matinee of this delightful idyl of New England country life is to be given by the admirable company now fulfilling an engagement at that house. There was not an empty seat in the theatre last Monday evening, when the season began, and the constant applause and laughter of the great audience then, and at succeeding performances, proved that the work still possesses a potent charm for all classes of people. Seats are selling four weeks in advance.

Great Free Labor Day Picnic of Fr. Callanan's Parish, Newton Lower Falls.

For the past eight years, the Great Free Labor Day attraction for Newton, and all the surrounding towns, has been the picnic and athletic sports held on the magnificent grounds of St. John's church, Newton Lower Falls. Some idea of the enormous success of last year's Labor Day Picnic may be judged from the fact that fully ten thousand people attended. Three hundred bicycles were checked during the day.

Situated on the beautiful highway at Lower Falls, just at the border line between Newton Lower Falls and Wellesley Hills, the St. John's church property stands out the most beautiful and prominent spot between Newton and Boston.

This year Fr. Callanan has started out to eclipse all former efforts. On the beautiful lawn surrounded by the dense foliage of hundreds of giant oaks and pines, two great canvas pavilions will be erected, one for the athletic sports and the other for dancing festivities. The athletic pavilion will be 125 feet long, by 55 feet wide, and will easily accommodate 1200 people. The dancing pavilion will accommodate 800 people, and will be entirely separate from the immense tent for the athletic sports.

On Monday, Labor Day, Sept. 4th, the Great Free Picnic will take place from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m., the air will be filled with mirth, music and merry-making.

Twelve teams of ten men each will engage in a great tug-of-war contest for a prize of $50 in gold. Prizes will be given for running, jumping, pole vaulting, egg races, obstacle races, hurdle races, ladies' nail driving matches, throwing the weights and a hundred other sports. The tug-of-war matches have aroused the most widespread enthusiasm, and thousands of the friends of the strong armed and full chested athletes will be on hand to cheer on their favorites to victory. Many regular trains run to Newton Lower Falls from all points during the day and evening.

Three acres of grounds are given over to games, a fine orchestra of six pieces, ten large canvas refreshment booths, a large shooting gallery, an archery gallery, magic rings, ring quoits, game of pitchett and African doddler, and a thousand other attractions will make this a carnival of the like of which has never been attempted before in any parish in the state.

The utmost decorum will prevail and all taxes will be suited in the evening program. Twenty-five special police will see to it that no one will mar the pleasure of the visiting thousands by any unseemly word or act. Fr. Callanan succeeded last year in drawing 10,000 people to the Labor Day Picnic and he confidently expects to double that number this year.

Wellesley Farms station, on the main line of the Albany railroad, is within ten minutes walk of the carnival grounds. Newton Lower Falls station is within two minutes walk of the grounds. Woodland and Waban stations on the circuit road are within fifteen minutes walk of the grounds and will accommodate people from Brookline, Newton Highlands, and Newton Centre, etc.

Electric cars run to the grounds also from all points. The Newton boulevard electric carries people direct to the grounds. A very important feature connected with the entire carnival, Labor Day, is the fact that the two immense pavilions will accommodate fully two thousand people, and the tents are absolutely waterproof, and will shelter all from rain and storm.

The pavilions will be beautifully illuminated at night, and thousands of Chinese lanterns will flicker from the hundreds of trees about the grounds. A famous Irish fiddler will furnish music for the country dances. Admission to the carnival grounds is absolutely free to all.

The comfort of the ladies and children is well considered, and the grounds are placed about the grounds for two thousand people. The phenomenal success of this Labor Day carnival is owing to the fact that Fr. Callanan spares no expense or labor in all his arrangements. No admission is charged to the grounds and no tickets are required to enter.

A Word to Mothers.

Mothers of children affected with croup or a severe cold need not hesitate to administer Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It contains no opiate nor narcotic in any form and may be given as confidently to the babe as to the adult. The grounds line that has attended its use in the treatment of colds and croup has won for it the approval and praise it has received through the United States and in many foreign lands. For sale by A. Hudson, Newton; E. F. Partridge, Newtonville; B. Billings, Newton Upper Falls; J. H. Green, Newton Highlands.

The Usual Way.

[From the Springfield Republican.] The fact that Boston gave about 20 times more money to the Porto Rican sufferers than Chicago did reads curiously in connection with the record of those two towns just prior to the war with Spain. Boston was not a war city; Chicago was furiously belligerent. Nevertheless the Spanish war is over, Boston is feeding the destitute in Porto Rico; Chicago is brandishing her sword in the direction of China and threatening to exterminate a whole population if they do not "come in" and be "good in us."

Change in Police Regulations.

While Newton cannot boast of a sensational shake-up among the police like that of Boston, there was a mild stir in the ranks of the bluecoats last Sunday caused by the issue of the new regulations, copies of which have been posted in all the stations.

Monday evening the new order of things went into effect and were officially recognized in all divisions.

A marked innovation is the roll call at which the night patrolmen will respond at 5.45. The day men who formerly pulled their last duty call at 5.30 p. m., are not relieved until 5.45 p. m.

Regular hours of duty have been defined for the sergeants who will patrol their districts from 5.45 p. m. to 2 a. m. They will be expected to respond to all alarms of fire in their respective districts and be prepared at any time for special duty. Chief Tarbox has paid particular attention to the inspection of uniforms in his recent orders and states that the uniform of each patrolman must meet the critical eye of his sergeant each evening at roll call.

If the condition of a man's uniform does not meet the approval of his superior, he will be ordered to return to his home and make the necessary changes in his dress. Should he fail to comply with the sergeant's orders he will be suspended until a satisfactory explanation is made.

A FRIGHTFUL CONFLICT.

250 Feet High.

"Every time I see a tall chimney," said an ex-Englishman who has lived for many years in Washington, "I am reminded of a thrilling affair that happened when I was a lad in Bradford, England, my birthplace. A 250 foot chimney had just been completed, and two brick masons only were left on the top to put the finishing touches on it. Both of them were big men. One of them, a fellow of gigantic strength, went suddenly insane just as the last bit of work was done on the chimney, and his companion looked on with horror while the maniac deliberately cut away the rope ladder leading from the top of the chimney to the ground.

"The maniac no sooner did this than he turned to his companion and calmly announced that he was going to throw him over the side of the chimney to the ground. They closed, and a terrific protracted struggle ensued. The workmen down below had seen the rope ladder when it struck the ground, and they knew at once that something was wrong with the two men at the top.

"They got away from the chimney at a sufficient distance to see what was going on up at the top, and they witnessed the frightful encounter between the two men. The maniac frequently, by pure strength, got his companion over to the very edge of the chimney. Every time he did this the sane man would muster up all of his force and push the madman back. The hand to hand battle went on for hours, while a company of firemen down below were endeavoring to shoot a line over the chimney by means of a rocket cannon. Finally the sane man got a certain hold on the madman and broke the latter's arm. Then the maniac lay quiet.

"After hours of aiming the firemen managed to get a line over the chimney, which the exhausted brick mason, almost 'all out' from his terrible struggle with the insane man, grabbed. Then he drew up the rope ladder, fastened it and came down to the ground, sinking into a semi-comatose condition, from which he did not emerge for days. His foot touched the last round of the ladder. His hair had been raven black, but when he came out of his stupor it was silvered all over.

"Two firemen volunteered to go up the rope ladder after the maniac. They had nearly reached the top of the chimney when the insane man walked over to the edge, looked around quietly for a minute or so, paying no attention to the cries of his rescuers, and then dived headfirst over the side of the chimney. He was probably dead before he struck the earth, and he was picked up a shapeless mass."—Washington Post.

JOHN R. GENTRY.

How the Famous Pacer Happened to Get His Name.

John R. Gentry, the well known horseman, told this story of how the great pacer came to get his name:

"I have been frequently accused of taking advantage of an opportunity to place my name before the public by naming after myself the great horse that I owned and raced. It is true that the animal was named after me, but I assure you that I was not responsible for having named him. I believe that I have received no little advertising solely on account of the record of the horse. I have never told the true story of how the horse happened to bear my own name.

"When I bought him in Wichita, Kan., he was but a small colt and looked more like a Newfoundland dog than anything else. His hair was long and so uneven that in appearance the colt approached the ridiculous. When I took him down to the farm, near Sedalia, the hired hands laughed at my purchase and declared that they would not allow such an unprepossessing looking animal on the place. The feeling against the ugly duckling reached such a high pitch that he was given but little attention, and I was almost tempted to dispose of him.

"I decided to keep him, however, and that ugly little colt was named John R. in a spirit of fun on the part of my hired hands, and as such action was most uncomplimentary to me I told the men to refrain from jesting with me in that manner. They assured me that the naming of the colt was simply a joke, and as it was all in a spirit of fun I did not name the horse myself, but allowed the men on the place to continue to call him after me.

"The colt grew up and was still quite homely in appearance, but at that time it would have cost me $50 to change the name on the registration books of the association. So he was called after me, and in later years became the most famous of pacers. I campaigned him all through the grand circuit, and as my reputation depended simply on the name of my horse I owe my own personal success to the attempts of my hired men to make fun of me by naming the homely colt John R. Gentry."—Kansas City Journal.

The English Barber.

"I've heard a great deal about the cheapness of things on the other side," said Mr. Jack Geary the other day, relating his experiences abroad, "but about the only thing I found that is cheap in England is a shave and a hair cut. They charge fourpence for hair cutting and tuppence for shaving. They give you a good, honest tuppence worth at that, and you're apt to lose a trifle of skin along with your accumulation of whiskers.

"The hotels? Well, the best of them in all London compared with any of our first class American hotels looks like 30 cents."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Frequent Tests.

"Do you call John Lawson an honest man?" demanded an irate individual who had listened in indignant silence to the praise of a successful ranchman from the lips of a time serving friend.

"Well," said the other in a tone of one who wisely temporizes, "all I can say is that he's been in court three times, accused of stealing, and he's escaped every time. I don't know any man in the state that's had his honesty tested any oftener."—Kansas City Star.

A WONDERFUL CURE OF DIARRHOEA.

(From the Times, Hillsdale, Va.)

I suffered with diarrhoea for a long time and thought I was past being cured. I had spent much time and money and suffered so much misery that I had almost decided to give up all hopes of recovery and await the result, but noticing the advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and also some testimonials stating how some wonderful cures had been wrought by this remedy, I decided to try it. After taking a few doses I was entirely well of that trouble, and I wish to say further to my readers and fellow sufferers that I am a hale and hearty man to-day and feel as well as I ever did in my life.—O. BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

TREMONT THEATRE.—That delightful idyll of New England country life, "Wa' Down East," has entered upon another run, at the Tremont Theatre, Boston, that promises to be in every way as successful and prosperous as the long and phenomenal engagement of last season. It is no unimportant addition, this charming pastoral play, for it has received the outspoken commendation of thousands, and the universal opinion is that its wholesome atmosphere, its absorbing interest, and its tender pathos of its story, the interludes of homely but none the less enjoyable humor, the quaint rustic characters in their homelike environment, and the picturesque realism of the scenic setting, combine to make it one of the strongest and best works of its class ever staged. The acting is thoroughly in keeping with the tone of the piece. There is nothing theatrical about the performance of any part. Miss Phoebe Davies' impersonation of the wronged and persecuted girl whose heart history is the theme of the plot, is natural and unaffected, and she adds strength to her work. Mr. Odell Williams is, rather than assumes to be, the one old country squire, whose bluff manners and speech cannot hide the benevolence and tender heartedness within. All the characters, in fact, to whom the serious interest is entrusted are embodied with the same admirable discretion and force, and the comedy scenes are capably sustained by competent players. The Tremont Theatre is fortunate in again securing a play with so many elements of popularity, and a company so well qualified to interpret it, as the first attraction of the season.

Grain-O Brings Relief

to the coffee drinker. Coffee drinking is a habit that is universally indulged in and almost as universally injurious. Have you tried Grain-O? It is almost like coffee but the effects are just the opposite. Coffee upsets the stomach, ruins the digestion, affects the heart and disturbs the whole nervous system. Grain-O tones up the stomach, aids digestion and strengthens the nerves. There is nothing but nourishment in Grain-O. It can't be otherwise. 15 and 25c. per package.

DUFFY EQUALS WORLD'S RECORD.

COVERS 100 YARDS IN 9.45 SECONDS AT A. A. U. GAMES—WELTERS BEATEN AGAIN—KRAENZLEIN WON—THREE FIRSTS AND TWO SECONDS FOR THE N. Y. A. C.

Like unto the Olympians of the ancient Greeks when the prominent athletes from far and near congregated at the spot, so convened those of the present decade at the cinder track arena at the Riverside Recreation grounds last Saturday, and proceeded to settle supremacy in the standard events authorized by the A. A. U. of North America. This annual affair was held last Saturday in this city for the first time under the auspices of the N. E. A. A. U., and was most successful in every respect, a flattering tribute to the officials of the N. E. A. A. U.

The entire field was surrounded by an admiring throng, the grand stand being taxed to its utmost, and the iron fence around the quarter-mile track being fringed for the whole distance by a human barrier three and four deep.

The crowd numbered fully 2,500 and a more appreciative audience never witnessed an athletic meet.

The N. Y. A. C., with the finest collection of athletes ever seen here, had no difficulty in securing the most number of points and winning the championship with lots to spare. First and foremost in this galaxy of N. Y. A. C. flyers was A. C. Kraenzlein, who justified all predictions by winning in three events in which he was called upon to show his mastery, besides getting a couple of seconds.

Summaries:
100-yard dash (trial heats)—First heat won by A. C. Kraenzlein, N. Y. A. C.; second, B. J. Wefers, N. Y. A. C. Time, 10 2/5 sec. Second heat won by A. F. Duffy, E. B. A. A.; second, F. L. Stephens, Wanderers' A. C., Halifax. Time, 9 4/5 sec. Final heat won by A. F. Duffy, E. B. A. A.; second, A. C. Kraenzlein, N. Y. A. C.; third, L. Stephens, Wanderers' A. C., Halifax. Time, 10 sec.

220-yard dash (trial heats)—First heat won by B. J. Wefers, N. Y. A. C. Time, 24 4/5 sec. Second heat won by N. W. Long, N. Y. A. C.; second, F. L. Stephens, Wanderers' A. C., Halifax. Time, 24 4/5 sec. Final heat won by N. W. Long, N. Y. A. C.; second, F. L. Stephens, Wanderers' A. C.; third, B. J. Wefers, N. Y. A. C. Time, 25 1/5 sec.

440-yard dash—Won by Max W. Long, N. Y. A. C.; second, W. J. Holland, E. B. A. A.; third, J. J. Moyahon, St. Ann's A. A., Worcester. Time, 59 1/5 sec.

880-yard run—Won by H. E. Manvell, N. Y. A. C.; second, John Bray, N. Y. A. C.; third, George F. C. Wood, N. Y. A. C. Time, 2 1/2 min. 4 3/5 sec.

One mile run—Won by Alex. Grant, N. Y. A. C.; second, A. L. Wright, Newton; third, D. J. O'Connell, Stamford, Conn. Time, 4 min. 28 3/5 sec.

Five-mile run—Tie between Alex. Grant, N. Y. A. C. and Alex. Grant, N. Y. A. C. Time, 24 min. 30 4/5 sec. J. B. Maguire, C. G. A. Time, 28 min. 30 4/5 sec.

120-yard hurdles—Won by A. C. Kraenzlein, N. Y. A. C.; second, J. J. Peters, Yale A. C.; third, C. A. O'Rourke, N. Y. A. C. Time, 19 4/5 sec.

220-yard hurdles—Won by A. C. Kraenzlein, N. Y. A. C.; second, J. J. Peters, Yale A. C.; third, T. F. McQueney, C. G. A. Time, 25 1/5 sec.

Running high jump—Won by I. K. Baxter, N. Y. A. C.; height, 6 feet 1 inch; second, A. C. Kraenzlein, N. Y. A. C.; height, 5 feet 11 inches; third, J. F. Powers, N. Y. A. C.; height, 5 feet 11 inches. Reuss, Knickerbocker A. C., height, 5 feet 11 inches. Powers won the place, as Reuss declined to jump off.

Running broad jump—Won by A. C. Kraenzlein, N. Y. A. C.; distance, 2 feet 3 inches; second, E. B. Bliss, N. Y. A. C.; distance, 21 feet 9 1/2 inches; third, J. F. Powers, N. Y. A. C.; distance, 21 feet 3 1/2 inches.

Growing 30 pound weight—Won by John Flanagan, N. Y. A. C.; distance, 33 feet 9 1/2 inches; second, Richard Sheldon, N. Y. A. C.; distance, 32 feet 4 1/2 inches; third, C. C. Coffy, K. A. C.; distance, 28 feet 3 3/8 inches.

Throwing 16 pound hammer—Won by John Flanagan, N. Y. A. C.; distance, 125 feet 1 1/2 inches; second, Charles Chadwick, N. Y. A. C.; distance, 145 feet 10 inches; third, S. C. Coffy, K. A. C.; distance, 145 feet 10 inches.

Putting 16 pound shot—Won by Richard Sheldon, N. Y. A. C.; distance, 44 feet 1 1/2 inches; second, J. F. Powers, N. Y. A. C.; distance, 42 feet 1 1/2 inches; third, John Flanagan, N. Y. A. C.; distance, 38 feet 8 1/4 inches.

Throwing discus—Won by Richard Sheldon, N. Y. A. C.; distance, 122 feet 3 3/8 inches; second, J. F. Powers, N. Y. A. C.; distance, 120 feet 1 1/2 inches; third, R. J. Sheldon, Pastime A. C., New York; distance, 115 feet 5 3/8 inches.

Pole vault—Won by I. K. Baxter, N. Y. A. C.; height, 10 feet 9 inches; second, A. C. Kraenzlein, N. Y. A. C.; height, 10 feet 6 inches; third, D. Reuss, K. A. C.; height, 10 feet 6 inches. Anders, A. C., with a 10 foot 6 inch jump.

A Letter to Mrs. Pinkham Brought Health to Mrs. Archambo.

[LETTER TO MRS. PINKHAM NO. 42,325]
"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—For two years I felt tired and so weak and dizzy that some days I could hardly go around the house. Backache and headache all the time and my food would not digest and had such pains in the womb and troubled with leucorrhoea and kidneys were affected.

"After birth of each child I grew weaker, and hearing so much of the good you had done, I wrote to you and have taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, one box of Lozenges, one box of Liver Pills, one package of Sanative Wash, and today I am feeling as well as I ever did. When I get up in the morning I feel as fresh as I did when a girl and eat and sleep well and do all of my work. If ever I feel weak again shall know where to get my strength. I know your medicine cured me."—MRS. SALINA ARCHAMBO, CHAMBERLAIN, MASS.

The present Mrs. Pinkham's experience in treating female ills is unparalleled; for years she worked side by side with Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, and for sometime past has had sole charge of the correspondence department of her great business, treating by letter as many as a hundred thousand suffering women a year. All women who suffer are invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice, which will be promptly given without charge.

THE fifteenth annual report of the United States civil service commission is a very interesting document, both to those who believe in honesty in the public service and also to those who do not. Judging from its long record of the violations of the civil service laws by this administration, one would infer that the times pictured by Mark Twain in "The Gilded Age," had come again to Washington, when robbery and corruption were rampant in every department of the public service. The report lays bare, as it cannot help doing, the whole shameful record of violations of the law, some open, and others, by far the most, under more or less dishonest pretences. The record fills 150 pages of the report, from which it can be seen how extensive they are. The worst exhibition is made in the treasury department, more in number than in all the others put together, and yet the secretary of the treasury pretends that he has endeavored to uphold the merit system. All attempts by the board to have the violations corrected have been useless, and the law is obeyed only when the officials feel like it. In only one department has there been obedience to the law, and Massachusetts will learn with pride that this is the navy department, presided over by Secretary Long. This is the one bright spot in the report. It can not be said that the report is only a campaign slander as the majority of the board are of the administration's own party and there are the facts to prove all their statements. Evidently there is no one at the head of things who has any sympathy with reform principles, and the spoilsmen are again in the saddle and make no pretence at concealing their exultation over the present condition of things, as has been evident from the state convention recently held in Ohio. It is evident that ground gained only by strenuous effort by those who believe in having the government business honestly conducted, has been lost and that too under a President who made pledges of his devotion to the cause of reform, and his purpose to extend it wherever possible. The pressure has been too strong for him, and perhaps the people are not altogether without blame in electing senators and representatives, who take advantage of his inability to say no, when they are demanding places for their followers, and seeking to pay for services rendered to them out of the public funds. The reform associations throughout the country will have to take up their work anew and strive to create a public sentiment that will not allow of such violations of law. Then the politicians will feel obliged to obey the laws, which they now think can be violated with impunity, because they have somehow got the idea that civil service reform has no friends. Convince them of the contrary and that necessary votes will be lost by not strictly obeying the law, and there will be no more enthusiastic friend of reform than the average politician.

THE vacation season will end with another week and Newton will soon lose the appearance of a deserted city, which has marked some sections for the last two months. Citizens will come home from mountain and shore resorts and Newton will begin to boom. Present indications are that the population will be greatly increased this fall as there are many seekers after homes and the list of unoccupied houses grows smaller daily. Many houses that have been vacant for years are now leased and the early seekers have had their pick. It looks as though the over supply which has been the result of the great amount of building the past few years would soon be a thing of the past and that houses of any kind in Newton would be at a premium. The extension of the electric cars to all the villages has done a great deal to make the city a desirable place of residence, and our new boulevards, our excellent roads, our fine sidewalks and other modern conveniences are not excelled by any suburb of Boston. One great advantage which is often spoken of is the comparative immunity of Newton from any attacks of housebreakers, something which is almost unknown here, and which is in great contrast to other suburbs. This is due to our excellent police system and the careful watch the police keep over the city which renders Newton a safe place to live. The completion of the new Union Station ought to bring many new residents as few towns in the vicinity of Boston have such admirable systems of communication with the Hub by both steam and electric. Our public schools are conceded to be among the best in the state, our free library is also the admiration of cities which have many times our population, and as for social life where could be found more attractions than at the Newton Club, which offers its hospitality to all sections of the city, to say nothing of the handsome local club houses in nearly every village, while here serve as social centers and make it easy for strangers to get acquainted with their neighbors. With all these advantages our tax rate is comparatively low and rents are moderate when compared with what is asked in Brookline, or other places offering as many advantages as Newton. All these things have caused the city to grow rapidly the past few years and this growth is destined to increase as time goes on, and Boston has to spread out more and more over the adjacent country. Strangers who come to Newton to live will never have any cause to regret it.

THE SOUTH FRAMINGHAM EVENING NEWS is booming Henry E. Bullard of Holliston for the Senatorship, and advances an argument that it is time the small towns in the district had their innings and selected a candidate. The locality argument is of some force, but it really ought to be considered only after all the others. The senate would stand better in the estimation of the public if senators were selected more for what they are and less for where they happen to live. Get the best men without regard to the town they hail from, should be the guiding principle of conventions, but it is generally the last thing thought of. This year Natick has two candidates and can reach no agreement. Framingham has a candidate in ex-Senator Geo. A. Reed, who is well known and very popular with voters in all parts of the district. Holliston has Mr. Bullard, and Ashland, Sherborn, Water, town and Weston have yet to be heard from. Why Holliston should have the place any more than any of the other small towns the News does not state. Newton is not specially interested this year as it has had a representative in Senator Harwood for the past three years and so does not expect anything.

NEWTON people who have friends in Brookline complain of the difficulty of getting there on account of the lack of proper electric facilities. Although Newton joins Brookline, and the distance is only half that to Boston, yet the visitor to Brookline has to pay one fare to Harvard street and another fare to Coolidge corner, and one or two more if the destination is any distance beyond that point, besides waiting at every change of cars for an indefinite time. People from the south side of the city have the same trouble and something ought to be done about it. You can go into Boston and to any point in Brookline by buying an eight cent check, going ten or fifteen miles in order to get over the three or four miles that intervenes between the two points. Roxbury and Cambridge have free transfer stations, but these are not granted to Newton or Brookline people although the Boston elevated company has been given the free use of the streets in the two places and is deriving a large and highly profitable income from the gift of these franchises.

It is expected that next week will see some signs of life in Newton politics, and we will have at least an indication of the plans that have been hatched out on the piazzas of the summer resorts where Newton men have been congregating for the past two months. It is certainly about time, as the caucuses will come in less than a month when candidates for senator and representatives will be selected. As far as Newton has any influence in the fight over the lieutenant governorship, we should say that the great majority of the people are for Speaker Bates, but that is no sign that Newton's vote will be cast for him, unless a direct issue is made in the caucuses. The Guild men are working hard and they are aid to have control of the machine, and therefore they may succeed in electing men who will vote for Guild. If the voters could be got out to the caucuses, and the question made a test vote then there would be no opportunity for any charges of unfairness.

THE Boston Herald has made up a table of the tax figures for 31 cities and towns of the state, in the vicinity of Boston. From this it appears that outside of such tax-dodger paradises as the towns of Milton, Manchester, and Cohasset, and the town of Brookline, Newton has the lowest tax-rate of any city except Boston and Waltham. In the latter city the rate is 20 cents less than in Newton. In all the other cities the rate is over $16, and in many of them over $17, the latter including Cambridge, Chelsea, Arlington, Lynn, Marblehead, Melrose, Quincy, Revere, Salem, Wakefield and Woburn. Outside of Boston, Brookline, Cambridge, and Somerville, Newton has the largest value of real estate, and Boston, Brookline, and Cambridge only surpass it in the valuation of personal property, although Milton is very close to Newton. Boston, Brookline, Cambridge and Everett have passed us in the gain in real estate over last year, and Boston, Brookline, Everett, Milton, Somerville and Waltham in the amount added to taxed personal property.

A BEGINNING has been made in the building of handsome apartment houses in Newton, by Mr. Dana Estes, a description of which will be found elsewhere. They are after the style of the well known Terraces in Brookline which have proved such a profitable investment, and Mr. Estes has chosen one of the finest locations to be found in the vicinity of Boston for his enterprise. As Newton is right on the line of such development it is probable that other houses of the kind will follow, if this enterprise proves successful. There are a large class of people who like the freedom from care which apartment houses bring, and who want all the modern conveniences, and are willing to pay for them. Many such would come to Newton if they could find what they want, and it is rather surprising that nothing of the kind has been done here, especially in some of the more thickly settled villages.

IN the Virginia Senatorial fight, the sensational announcement is made that the two candidates have entered into an agreement that they will spend no money in the campaign. This is almost as startling as the Ohio sensation, in which the nomination for congressman was to be auctioned off to the highest bidder. The Virginia plan may work in that state, but it would be a failure in Ohio. In Massachusetts we have had one congressman whose campaign only cost him a postage stamp, and we have not yet ceased to point with pride to that remarkable event. But it will be asked if there are no corporation millionaires in Virginia, who want favors from the government, if such a woeful condition of things is allowed to continue.

THE tin plate trust is another interest that is enjoying great prosperity, it has just run prices up so as to increase its income nearly two and a half millions a year, and users of tin plate can either pay the price or go without, as this trust is in perfect control of the market. It announces advances when it feels like it without any notice in advance, and this trust is enthusiastically in favor of the highest possible tariff.

THERE is a lively fight on for the position of state senator to succeed Mr. Harwood, and more hard work has been done in a quiet way than the average voter has any idea of. Plots and counter plots have been started and the whole district has been gone over by the friends of various candidates, but so far little has appeared in the papers about the matter.

GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT is now attending cattle fairs in New York, and both his admirers and himself evidently think that he was the whole of the war with Spain. On Wednesday he said in the course of his speech, in all seriousness: "Men in your civil war, you fought for years; men in my war fought for months."

THE SOUTH FRAMINGHAM NEWS brings out ex-Representative Sleeper of Winthrop as a candidate for State Treasurer. Nevertheless it does not seem probable that he will be successful. His clerkship campaign has not yet been forgotten.

A Strong Temperance Lesson.

To the Editor of the Graphic:—The editor of the Concordia Kansas tells of a temperance lecture given by Judge Sturges while deciding a divorce case before him. The divorcee was asked for by the wife on the ground of the husband's habitual drunkenness.

The objection raised by the defendant was that the record of the divorce would disgrace him. To this the judge replied by saying that all of the court records or all the newspapers in the world could not possibly add to the disgrace already heaped on the man by his own act of getting drunk. Continuing the judge said: "He claims his financial misfortunes have led him to excess of drink. There is no excuse for a man to get drunk. There is no excuse for drunkenness. If reverses or troubles come, a man needs his best judgment, his best vitality, his brain, his intellect to cope with his misfortune and to try to regain his lost advantage. Why any man of ordinary intellect will place himself in such a condition by his own acts as to merit the contempt of his fellow men, is beyond me, and disgusting his own wife and children, is something I do not understand. The drunken man excites the same feeling in the mind of the average person, as does a snake. We instinctively pounce on a snake and kill it or else flee from it for fear of contamination. The person who voluntarily places himself in the condition more loathsome than a snake, more disgusting than a brute, cannot be disgraced by the record of this court in this case. It was drunkenness that brought about this condition of things in this family, and it is on these grounds the divorce is asked, for on which it will be granted. This man claims he has quit drinking. I hope he has and I hope he will keep steadfast in his determination to abstain from it. When this man is sober he is always a gentleman; when he is drunk he is not, neither is any other man. We are all disgusted with a drunken man—what must be the feelings of a wife, who is compelled to live continually with a drunkard? This woman detests this man because of his own acts. He is to blame and no one else. If she persists in asking the divorce it will be granted."

That's genuine common sense. Why not exercise additional common sense and elect legislators that will lead us to get up the saloons that tempt their dazzling temptations in the face of every weak and detested drunkard, and whose only business is to make drunkards.

W. H. P.

Death of Rev. I. I. Leslie.

On Tuesday night at his home on Washington street, Wellesley Lower Falls, occurred the death of Rev. I. I. Leslie, a prominent traveling missionary. He had been ill but two weeks. Rev. Mr. Leslie was born in Auburn, Me. He received his education in the schools of his own state. He was graduated from the Holliston Academy 38 years ago. The greater part of his life he devoted to missionary work among the colored people of the South, traveling extensively through the middle and southern states. His home at Wellesley Lower Falls, where he lived for 48 years, was always open, although up to ten years ago Rev. Mr. Leslie spent but a portion of each year with his family. As a resident of Wellesley Lower Falls he had never taken an active part in town affairs, although he was well known. He is survived by a wife, a son, Frederick C. Leslie, and a daughter, Mrs. H. A. Priest of Vista avenue, Auburndale. The funeral was held this afternoon.

Norumbega Park.

It is glorious weather once more at Norumbega Park, and after the several days of dampness from showers and fogs that have characterized the days the latter part of August, the foliage, shrubbery and flowers have come out all the brighter. The place never looked so brilliant as it does now. Through the month of September the Park will be richer than ever in all sorts of attractions, while its natural beauty as all know who have visited there during this fall month, will surpass any other period of the season.

The additional attraction for Labor Day, the coming Monday, Sept. 5, will be St. Augustine's band of 32 pieces, which is always such a popular holiday feature at Norumbega. It will be a great day there, and judging from last year's record for the day and the generally increased daily attendance this year, it is fair to presume that it will be the biggest day in the history of the Park. Among other features to amuse the crowds that day as well as every day the coming week, will be the zoological garden, the electric fountain, Indian colony, women's cottage, canoeing and boating on the Charles, the swings and merry-go-round, the restaurant, etc.

In the rustic theatre for the coming week commencing Labor Day afternoon, and continuing with two performances daily, will be an entirely new company of star vaudeville artists, known as J. W. Gorman's comedians. Among the favorites are: The 3 Ours, who do expert juggling on revolving globes; the Craigs, a refined and clever musical team; Chalk Sanders, the unique cartoonist; Frenchell and Lewis, the operatic artists who sing selections from the well known operas, and others.

—About 8.15 last evening a horse attached to a carriage driven by Mrs. John P. Heustis of Adams street became frightened at a bicycle on Eliot street and partially overturned the carriage. Mrs. Heustis was thrown out and slightly injured. She was attended by Dr. Thompson. The bicycle was ridden by John Heal of Lincoln street.

Reception to Rev. Fr. Michael Dolan.

There is much activity among the parishioners of the Church of Our Lady, who are preparing, under the guiding hand of Rev. Fr. Giffether, for a grand reception to their pastor, Rev. Michael Dolan, which is to take place next Thursday evening in the hall of the parochial school building. In the afternoon Rev. Fr. Dolan will be greeted by a number of brother clergymen at a dinner, and the public exercises will follow. The reception will undoubtedly be of a most substantial nature, as every effort is being made by Fr. Giffether and his parishioners to make the affair a success. Rev. Fr. Dolan has been abroad since June, but it is expected he will return home next Thursday. His European trip was chiefly undertaken because of serious eye trouble.

Gymnastics at Lasell.

Frequent application having been made by persons resident in the vicinity, for admission to the classes in Physical Training at Lasell Seminary, arrangements have been completed by which these requests can be granted. Classes, admitting women and children, will be formed Nov. 1st, to meet Tuesday and Friday, and will continue until about May 1st.

The gymnasium is under the supervision of Miss Hanson, a graduate of Dr. Sargent's school for teachers at Cambridge, assisted by Miss Kate Adams, of Brookline, graduate of the same. The system pursued is that known as "The Sargent System," and is based upon individual needs, as ascertained by thorough examination and tests of strength. According to these tests, exercises are carefully prescribed, adapted to strengthen what is weak, and to improve the personal bearing and carriage, as well as the health.

To develop courage and presence of mind, and ready command of the body's powers," is no less essential to women than to men, in the large freedom and responsibility given them in our country. And for whom is it more essential than for mothers that there should be a sound body, and so steady nerves and a sound mind? To this end Lasell Seminary furnishes advantages unexcelled by any girls' school in New England.

The hall is large, sunny, well ventilated, with open fire, and has dressing rooms, shower and swimming baths, and bowling alley attached. The appliances are ample, and were furnished under the direction of Dr. Sargent, of Cambridge. Danger from over-exertion is prevented by constant oversight.

Terms for the season, $20.00. Swimming Lessons, each, $1.00. Those interested in swimming may send for a special circular. The use of the Bowling Alley is free to all pupils.

Application to be made to Miss Hanson, or C. C. BRADGON, Principal.

JOHN LEE, CHINESE LAUNDRY, 10 CENTRE PLACE, NEWTON.

—Miss Amey Barnard has been visiting Miss Blanche Forknall of California street during the past week.

—Messrs. Willard Frye and Edwin Clayton will spend next week in Peterboro, N. H., making the trip on their wheels.

—Mrs. T. P. Jewett of Bridge street returned Friday from Plymouth, N. H., where she had been to attend the funeral of her father.

—The mutual council for the dismissal of the Rev. Daniel Greene, pastor of the North church, will be held Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 6th.

—In spite of the unfavorable weather conditions and lack of rain, the crops in the gardens on Bridge street will be fairly good, and in some cases equal to last year's.

—A number from this place attended the Veteran Firemen's muster in Fall River last Tuesday. Although the "Vets" made a good showing they did not place in the final.

—Leander W. Bennett of this place was complained of in the police court Tuesday morning, by Inspector Fletcher, charged with stealing a ride. He pleaded guilty and was fined $10.

—Work is rapidly progressing on the Watertown side of the Beniah bridge. The contract expires the first of October and in order that the work may be completed within that time, night work has been ordered. It is understood that the town has made extra appropriations to meet the necessary added expense.

A Handsome Sight.

A much handsomer sight than the big illuminated car of the Newton & Boston Street Railway Company filled with the members of Gethsemane Commandery of Newton, going along the tracks of the various street railways in the Newtons on Monday night, could not be found anywhere. The occasion was simply a trolley ride and although it seems little to say it is a good deal to get up. Sir George Breeden of the Commandery did himself proud, and he was ably assisted by the employees of the Newton & Boston road, who take great interest in these pleasurable events, and spend much time in making their cars look beautiful and giving their patrons their money's worth. Upon the car was an enormous photograph and selections from the different operas, recitations, vocal and instrumental solos were all exquisitely rendered. Numerous stops all along the route were made so that the crowds congregated to see the car, and its occupants might have the benefit of the music. The party made the trip to Natick and return, stopping at Newtonville square, West Newton, Wellesley, Lower Falls, and Natick. Stops of half an hour were also made at the Woodland Park Hotel, both going and coming, where light refreshments were served. Every member of the party was in good spirits, and they did not attempt to hold them back. At West Newton a party of ladies greeted the car with cheers, and handfuls of flowers rewarded them while the car also stopped to give them a short concert.

It was nearly 12 o'clock before the party disbanded when the car reached Newton square. The evening was a great success as accented by all who attended. The knights are going to give a ladies' party in September, when no special cars will be at their disposal, and much the same plan will be carried out.

CHAPTER I.

I think it may be taken as one of the most remarkable attributes of Captain Owen Kettle that, whatever circumstances might betide, he was always neat and trim in his personal appearance. I think it must have been this spruceness and nothing else which made him find favor in the eyes of so fastidious a person as Clotilde La Touche. But, be this as it may, it is a fact that Donna Clotilde just saw the man from her carriage as he walked along the Paseo de Colon, promptly asked his name, and, getting no immediate reply, dispatched one of her admirers there and then to make his acquaintance. The envoy was instructed to find out who he was and contrive that Donna Clotilde should meet the little sailor at dinner in the cafe of the Lion d'Or that very evening.

The dinner was given in the patio of the cafe, where palm fronds filtered the moonbeams and fireflies competed with the electric lights, and at a moderate computation the cost of the viands would have kept Captain Kettle supplied with his average rations for ten months or a year. He was quite aware of this and appreciated the entertainment none the worse in consequence.

The conversation during that curious meal ran in phases. With the hors d'œuvres came a course of ordinary civilities; then for a space there rolled out an autobiographical account of some of Kettle's exploits, skillfully and painlessly extracted by Donna Clotilde's naive questions, and then, with the cognac and cigarettes, a spasm of political shooing the diners like an ague. Of a sudden one of the men recollected himself, looked to this side and that with a scared face and rapped the table with his knuckles.

"Ladies," he said imploringly, "and seniors, the heat is great. It may be dangerous."

"Pah!" said Donna Clotilde. "We are talking in English."

"Which other people besides ourselves understand even in Valparaiso?"

"Let them listen," said Captain Kettle. "I hold the same opinion on politics as Miss La Touche here, since she has explained to me how things really are, and I don't care who knows that I think the present government and the whole system rotten. I am not in the habit of putting my opinions in words, Mr. Silva, and being frightened of people hearing them."

"You," said the cautious man dryly, "have little to lose here, captain. Donna Clotilde has much. I should be very sorry to read in my morning paper that she had died from apoplexy, and the arsenical variety, during the course of the preceding night."

"Pooh!" said Kettle. "They could never do that."

"As a resident of Chile," returned Silva, "let me venture to disagree with you, captain. It is a disease to which the opponents of President Quijara are singularly addicted whenever they show any marked political activity. The palm trees in this patio have a reputation, too, for being phenomenally long eared. So, if it pleases you all, suppose we go out on the roof. The moon will afford us a fine prospect, and the air up there is reputed healthy." He picked up Donna Clotilde's fan and mantilla. The other two ladies rose to their feet. Donna Clotilde, with a slight frown of reluctance, did the same, and they all moved off toward the stairway. Silva laid detaining fingers upon Captain Kettle's arm.

"Captain," he said, "if I may give you a friendly hint, slip away now and go to your quarters."

"I fancy sir," said Captain Kettle, "that Miss La Touche has employment to offer me."

"If she has," retorted Silva, "which I doubt, it will not be employment you will care about."

"I am what they call here 'on the beach,'" said Kettle, "and I cannot afford to miss chances. I am a married man, Mr. Silva, with children to think about."

"Ah," the Chilean murmured thoughtfully. "I wonder if she knows he's married? Well, captain, if you will go up, come along, and I'm sure I wish you luck."

One whispered hint did Mr Silva give to Captain Kettle as they made their way together up the white stone steps.

"Do you know who and what our hostess is?" he asked.

"A very nice young lady," replied the mariner promptly, "with a fine taste in suppers."

"She is all that," said Silva. "But she also happens to be the richest woman in Chile. Her father owned mines unnumbered, and when he came by his end in our last revolution he left every dollar he had at Donna Clotilde's entire disposal. By some unfortunate oversight personal fear has been left out of her composition, and she seems anxious to add it to the list of her acquisitions."

Captain Kettle puckered his brows. "I don't seem to understand you," he said.

"I say this," Silva murmured, "because there seems no other way to explain the keenness with which she hunts after personal danger. At present she is intriguing against President Quijara's government. Well, we all know that Quijara is a brigand, just as his successor was before him. The man who succeeds him in the presidency of Chile will be a brigand also. It is the custom of my country. But interfering with brigandage is a ticklish operation, and Quijara is always scrupulous to wring the neck of any one whom he thinks at all likely to interfere with his peculiar methods."

"I should say that from his point of view," said Kettle, "he was acting quite rightly, sir."

"I thought you'd look at it sensibly," said Silva. "Well, captain, here we are at the top of the stair. Don't you think you had better change your mind and slip away now, and go back to your quarters?"

"Why, no, sir," said Captain Kettle. "From what you tell me, it seems possible that Miss La Touche may shortly be seeing trouble, and it would give me pleasure to be near and ready to bear a hand. She is a lady for whom I have got considerable regard. That supper, sir, which we have just eaten and the wine are things which will live in my memory."

He stepped out on to the roof, and Donna Clotilde came to meet him. She linked her fingers upon his arm and led him apart from the rest. At the farther angle of the gardens they leaned their elbows upon the parapet and talked while the glow from the street below faintly lit their faces and the fireflies winked behind their backs.

"I thank you, captain, for your offer," she said at length, "and I accept it as freely as it was given. I have had proposals of similar service before."

They leaned their elbows upon the parapet.

but they came from the wrong sort. I wanted a man, and I found out that you were that before you had been at the dinner table five minutes."

Captain Kettle bowed to the compliment. "But," said he, "if I am that, I have all of a man's failings."

"I like them better," said the lady, "than half a man's virtue. And as a proof I offer you command of my navy."

"Your navy, miss?"

"It has yet to be formed," said Donna Clotilde, "and you must form it. But, once we make the nucleus, other ships of the existing force will desert to us, and with those we must fight and beat the rest. Once we have the navy we can bombard the ports into submission till the country thrusts out President Quijara of its own accord and sets me up in his place."

"Oh!" said Kettle. "I didn't understand. Then you want to be queen of Chile?"

"President."

"But a president is a man, isn't he?"

"Why? Answer me that."

"Because—well, because they always have been, miss."

"Because men up to now have always taken the best things to themselves. Well, captain, all that is changing. The world is moving on, and women are forcing their way in and taking their proper place. You say that no state has yet had a woman president. You are quite right. I shall be the first."

Captain Kettle puckered his brow and looked thoughtfully down into the lighted street beneath. But presently he made up his mind, and spoke again. "I'll accept your offer, miss, to command the navy, and I'll do the work well. You may rely on that. Although I say it myself, you'd find it hard to get a better man. I know the kind of brutes one has to ship as seamen along this South American coast, and I'm the sort of brute to handle them. By James, yes, and you shall see me make them do most things, short of miracles. But there's one other thing, miss. I ought to say, and I must apologize for mentioning it, seeing that you're not a business person. I must have my £12 a month, and all found. I know it's a lot, and I know you'll tell me wages are down just now. But I couldn't do it for less, miss. Commanding a navy's a strong order, and, besides, there's considerable risk to be counted in as well."

Donna Clotilde took his hand in both hers. "I thank you, captain," she said, "for your offer, and I begin to see success ahead from this moment

You need have no fear on the question of remuneration. What you ask is moderation itself, and, believe me, I respect you for it, and will not forget. Knowing who I am, no other man in Chile would have hesitated to ask"—she had on her tongue to say "a hundred times as much," but suppressed that and said "more. But in the meantime," said she, "will you accept this £100 note for any current expenses which may occur to you?"

CHAPTER II.

A little, old, green painted bark lay hove to under sail, disseminating the scent of guano through the sweet tropical air. Under her square counter the name El Almirante Cochrane appeared in clean white lettering. The long south Pacific swells lifted her lazily from bill to valley of the blue water to the accompaniment of squealing gear and a certain growling of fabric. The Chilean coast lay afar off as a white, feathery line against one fragment of the sea rim. A white whaleboat lay astern, riding to a grass rope painter, and Senior Carlos Silva, whom the whaleboat had brought off from the Chilean beach, sat in the bark's deckhouse talking to Captain Kettle.

"The seniorita will be very disappointed," said Silva.

"I can imagine her disappointment," returned the sailor. "I can measure it by my own. I can tell you, sir, when I saw this lousy, stinking old wind jammer waiting for me in Callao, I could have sat down right where I was and cried. I'd got my men together, and I guess I'd talked big about El Almirante Cochrane, the fine new armored cruiser we were to do wonders in. The only thing I knew about her was the name, but Miss La Touche had promised me the finest ship that could be got, and I only described what I thought a really fine ship would be. And then when the agent stuck out his finger and pointed out this foul old vessel I'd tell you that it was a bit of a let-down."

"There's been some desperate robbery somewhere," said Silva.

"It didn't take me long to guess that," said Kettle, "and I concluded the agent was the thief and started in to take it out of him without further talk. He hadn't a pistol, so I only used my hands to him, but I guess I fingered him enough in three minutes to stop his dancing for another month."

"Still that didn't procure you another ship?"

"Hammering the agent couldn't make him do an impossibility, sir. There wasn't such a vessel as I wanted in all the ports of Peru. So I just took this noseyak that was offered, lured my crew aboard and put out past San Lorenzo island and got to sea. It's a bit of a come-down, sir, for a steamer sailor like me, the little man added, with a sigh. "To put an old wind jammer through her gymnastics again. I thought I'd done with 'mainsail haul' and rawhide chafing gear and all the white wings nonsense for good and always."

"But, captain, what did you come out for? What earthly good can you do with an old wreck like this?"

"Why, sir, I shall carry out what was arranged with Miss La Touche. I shall come up with one of President Quijara's government vessels, capture her and then start in to collar the rest. There's no alteration in the programme. It's only made more difficult, that's all."

"I rowed out here to the rendezvous to tell you the Cancellario is at moorings in Tampique bay and that the seniorita would like to see you make your beginning upon her. But what's the good of that news now? The Cancellario is a fine new warship of 3,000 tons. She's fitted with everything modern in guns and machinery. She's 300 men of a crew. And she lies always with steam up and an armed watch set. To go near her in this clumsy little bark would be to make yourself a laughing stock. Why, your English Cochrane wouldn't have done it."

"I know nothing about Lord Cochrane, Mr. Silva. He was dead before my time. But whatever people may have done to him I can tell any one who cares to hear that the man who's talking to you now is a bit of an awkward handful to laugh at. No, sir; I expect there'll be trouble over it, but you may tell Miss La Touche we shall have the Cancellario if she'll stay in Tampique bay till I can drive this old lavender box up to her."

For a minute Silva stared in silent wonder. "Then, captain," said he, "all I can think is you must have enormous trust in your crew."

Captain Kettle bit the end from a fresh cigar. "You should go and look at them for yourself," said he, "and hear their talk, and then you'd know. The beasts are fit to eat me already."

"How did you get them on board?"

"Well, you see, sir, I collected them by promises—fine pay, fine ship, fine cruise, fine chances, and so on—and when I'd only this smelling bottle here to show them they hang back a bit. If there'd been only 20 of them, I don't say but what I could have trusted them on board with a gun and some ugly words, but 60 were too many to tackle. So I just said to them that El Almirante Cochrane was only a ferry to take us across to a fine war steamer that was lying out of sight elsewhere, and they swallowed the yarn and stepped in over the side. I can't say they've behaved like lambs since, but once or twice, when the whole lot of the brutes have been raging against me, I've been very nearly happy. And afterward, when I've got a spell of rest, I've picked up pen and paper and knocked off one or two of the prettiest sonnets a man could wish to see in print. If you like, sir, I'll read you a couple before you go back to your whaleboat."

"I thank you, skipper, but not now. Time is on the move, and Donna Clotilde is waiting for me. What am I to tell her?"

"Say, of course, that her orders are being carried out and her pay being earned."

"My poor fellow," said Silva with a sudden gush of remorse, "you are only sacrificing yourself uselessly! What can you, in a small sailing vessel like this, do with your rifles against a splendidly armed vessel like the Cancellario?"

"Not much in the shooting line, that's certain," said Kettle cheerfully. "That beautiful agent sold us even over the ammunition. There were kegs put on board marked 'cartridges,' but when I came to break one or two, so as to serve out a little ammunition for practice, he hanged if the kegs weren't full of powder! And it wasn't the stuff for guns even. It was blasting powder, same as they used in the mines. Oh, sir, that agent was the holiest kind of a fraud!"

Silva wrung his hands. "Captain," he cried, "you must not go on with this mad cruise! It would be sheer suicide for you to find the Cancellario."

"You shall give me news of it again after I've met her," said Captain Kettle. "For the present, sir, I follow out Miss La Touche's orders and earn my £12 a month. But if you're my friend, Mr. Silva, and want to do me a good turn, you might hint that if things go well I could do with a rise to £14 a month when I'm sailing the Cancellario for her."

CHAPTER III.

The outline of Tampique bay stood out clearly in bright moonshine, and the sea down the path of the moon's rays showed a canal of silver cut through rolling fields of purple. The green painted bark was heading into the bay on the port tack, and at moorings before the town in the curve of the shore the grotesque spars of a modern warship showed in black silhouette against the moonbeams. A slate colored naphtha launch was sliding out over the swells toward the bark. Captain Kettle came up from below and watched the naphtha launch with throbbing interest.

A Jacob's ladder was thrown over the side. The slate colored launch swept up and emitted a woman. Captain Kettle started and went down into the waist to meet her. A minute later he was wondering whether he dreamed or whether he was really walking his quarter deck in company with Donna Clotilde La Touche. But meanwhile the bark held steadily along her course.

"I must beseech you, miss, to go back from where you came," said Kettle. "You must trust me to carry out this business without your supervision."

"Is your method very dangerous?" she asked.

"I couldn't recommend it to any insurance company," said Kettle thoughtfully.

"Tell me your scheme."

Kettle did so in some 40 words. He was pithy, and Donna Clotilde was cool. She heard him without change of color. "Ah," she said, "I think you will do it!"

"You will know one way or another within an hour from now, miss. But I must ask you to take your launch to a distance. As I tell you, I have made all my own boats so that they won't swim, but if your little craft was handy my crew would jump overboard and risk the sharks and try to reach her in spite of all I could do to stop them. They won't be anxious to fight that Cancellario when the time comes if there's any way of wriggling out of it."

"You are quite right, captain; the launch must go, only I do not. I must be your guest here till you can put me on the Cancellario."

Captain Kettle frowned. "What's coming is no job for a woman to be in at, miss."

"You must leave me to my own opinion about that. You see, we differ upon what a woman should do, captain. You say a woman should not be president of a republic; you think a woman should not be a sharer in a fight. I am going to show you how a woman can be both. She leaned her shoulders over the rail and hailed the naphtha launch with a sharp command. A man in the bows cast off the line with which it towed, the man aft put over his tiller and set the engines a-going, and, like a slim gray ghost, the launch slid quietly away into the gloom. "You see," she said, "I'm bound to stay with you now." And she looked upon him with a burning glance.

But Kettle replied coldly: "You are my owner, miss, and can do as you wish. It is not for me now to say that you are foolish. Do I understand you still wish me to carry out my original plan?"

"Yes," she said curtly.

"Very well, miss; then we shall be aboard of that war steamer in less than 15 minutes." He bade his second mate call aft the crew, but instead of remaining to meet them he took a keen glance at the bark's canvas, another at her wake, another at the moored cruiser ahead, and then, after peering thoughtfully at the clouds that sailed in the sky, he went to the companionway and dived below. The crew trooped aft and stood at the break of the quarter deck waiting for him. And in the meanwhile they feasted their eyes on Donna Clotilde La Touche.

Presently Captain Kettle returned to deck, aggressive and cheerful, and faced the men with hands in his jacket pockets. Each pocket bulged with something heavy, and the men, who by this time had come to understand Captain Kettle's ways, began to grow quiet and nervous.

"Now, my lads," said he, "I told you when you shipped aboard this lavender box in Callao that she was merely a ferry to carry you to a fine war steamer which was lying elsewhere. Well, there's the steamer just off the starboard bow yonder. Her name's the Cancellario, and at present she seems to belong to President Quijara's government. But Miss La Touche here, who is employing both you and me, just for the present, intends to set up a government of her own, and as a preliminary she wants that ship. We've got to grab it for her."

Captain Kettle broke off, and for a full minute there was silence. Then some one among the men laughed, and a dozen others joined in.

"That's right," said Kettle. "Cackle away, you scum! You'd be singing a different tune if you knew what was beneath you."

A voice from the gloom—an educated voice—answered him:

"Don't be foolish, skipper. We're not going to ram our heads against a brick wall like that. We set some value on our lives."

"Do you?" said Kettle. "Then pray that this breeze doesn't drop, as it seems likely to do, or you'll lose them. Shall I tell you what I was up to below just now? You remember those kegs of blasting powder? Well, they're in the place where some of you stowed them, but they're all of them unheated, and one of them carries the end of a fuse. That fuse is cut to burn just 20 minutes, and the end's lighted. Wait a bit. It's no use going to try to douse it. There's a pistol fixed to the lazarette hatch, and if you try to lift it that pistol will shoot into the powder and we'll all go up together without further palaver. Steady now, there, and hear me out. You can't lower away boats and get clear that way. The boats' bottoms will tumble away so soon as you try to hoist them off the skids. I saw to that last night. And you can't require any telling to know there are too many sharks about to make a swim healthy exercise."

The men began to rustle and talk.

"Now, don't spoil your only chance," said Kettle, "by singing out. If on the cruiser yonder they think there's anything wrong, they'll run out a gun or two and blow us out of the water before we can come near them. I've got no arms to give you, but you have your knives, and I guess you shouldn't want more. Get in the shadow of the rail there and keep hid till you hear her bump. Then jump on board, knock everybody you see over the side and keep the rest below."

The men crept away, shaking, and Captain Kettle himself took over the wheel and appeared to drowse over it. He gave her half a spoke at a time, and by invisible degrees the bark fell off till she headed dead on for the cruiser. Save for the faint creaking of her gear no sound came from her, and she slunk on through the night like some patched and tattered phantom. Far down in her lazarette the glowing end of the fuse crept nearer to the powder barrels, and in imagination every mind on board was following its race.

Nearer and nearer she drew to the Cancellario and ever nearer. The waiting men felt as though the hearts of them would leap from their breasts. Two of them fainted. Then came a hail from the cruiser: "Bark ahoy! Are you all asleep there?"

Captain Kettle drowsed on over the wheel. Donna Clotilde, from the shadow of the house, could see him nodding like a man in a deep sleep.

"Carrajo, you bark there! Put down your helm. You'll be aboard of us in a minute!"

Kettle made no reply. His hands sawed automatically at the spokes, and the glow from the binnacle fell upon close shut eyes. It was a fine bit of acting.

The Chileans shouted, but they could not prevent the collision, and when it came there broke out a yell as though the gates of the pit had been suddenly unlocked. The bark's crew of human refuse, mad with terror, rose up in a flock from behind the bulwarks. As one man they clambered up the cruiser's side and spread about her decks.

Ill provided with weapons though they might be, the Chileans were scarcely better armed. A sentry squibbed off his rifle, but that was the only shot fired. Knives did the greater part of the work, knives and belaying pins and whatever else came to hand. Kettle made no reply. His hands sawed automatically at the spokes, and the glow from the binnacle fell upon close shut eyes. It was a fine bit of acting.

The Chileans shouted, but they could not prevent the collision, and when it came there broke out a yell as though the gates of the pit had been suddenly unlocked. The bark's crew of human refuse, mad with terror, rose up in a flock from behind the bulwarks. As one man they clambered up the cruiser's side and spread about her decks.

bridge and took Captain Kettle by the hand. "My friend," said she, "I shall never forget this."

"I am earning my pay," said Kettle. "Pah!" she said. "Don't let money come between us. I cannot bear to think of you in connection with sordid things like that. I put you on a higher plane. Captain," she said and turned her head away. "I shall choose a man like you for a husband."

"Heaven mend your taste, miss," said Kettle, "but—there may be others like me."

"There are not."

"Then you must be content with the nearest you can get."

Donna Clotilde stamped her foot upon the plank of the bridge.

"You are dull!" she cried.

"No," he said. "I have my clear eight, miss. Won't you go below, now, and get a spell of sleep? Or will you give me your orders first?"

"No," she answered, "I will not. We must settle this matter first. You have a wife in England, I know, but that is nothing. Divorce is simple here. I have influence with the church. You could be set free in a day. Am I not the woman you would choose?"

"Miss La Touche, you are my employer."

"Answer my question."

"Then, miss, if you will have it, you are not."

"But why? Why? Give me your reasons! You are brave. Surely I have shown courage too. Surely you must admire that?"

"But, you see, miss," said Kettle, "I prefer to be linked to a lady who is my superior—as I am linked at present. If it pleases you, we had better end this talk."

"No," said Donna Clotilde; "it has got to be settled one way or the other. You know what I want. Marry me as soon as you are set free, and there shall be no end of your power. I will make you rich. I will make you famous. Chile shall be at our feet. The world shall bow to us."

"It could be done," said Kettle, with a sigh.

"Then marry me."

"With due respect, I will not," said the little man.

"You know you are speaking to a woman who is not accustomed to be thwarted."

Captain Kettle bowed.

"Then you will either do as I wish or leave this ship. I give you an hour to consider it in."

"You will find my second mate the best navigating officer left," said Kettle, and Donna Clotilde without further words left the bridge.

He waited for a decent interval and then sighed and gave orders. The men on deck obeyed him with quickness. A pair of boat davits were swung outboard and the boat plentifully victualled and its water breakers filled. The Cancellario's engines were stopped, and the tackles screamed as the boat was lowered to the water and rode there at the end of its painter. Captain Kettle left the bridge in charge of his first officer and went below. He found the lady sitting in the commander's cabin with head pillowed upon her arms.

"You still wish me to go, miss?" he said.

"If you will not accept what is offered."

"I am sorry," said the little sailor, "very sorry. If I'd met you, miss, before I saw Mrs. Kettle, and if you'd been a bit different, I believe I could have liked you. But as it is—"

She leaped to her feet, with eyes that blazed. "Go!" she cried. "Go, or I will call upon some of those fellows to shoot you!"

"They will do it cheerfully if you ask them," said Kettle, and he did not budge.

She sank down on the sofa again with a wail. "Oh, go!" she cried. "If you are a man, go and never let me see you again!"

Captain Kettle bowed and went out on deck. A little later he was alone in the quarter boat. The Cancellario was drawing fast away from him into the night, and the boat danced in the cream of her wake.

"Ah, well," he said to himself, "there's another good chance

A RATTLER'S POISON.

IT HAS NO TERRORS FOR THIS JUGGLER OF REPTILES.

He Uses Goleandrina Juice to Charm Away the Venom—One Exciting Occasion When He Thought That His Time Had Surely Come.

"Rattlesnake bites ain't a bit dangerous if you rub a little juice of the goleandrina on them as soon as you are bitten. And I'll stake my life on that."

The speaker was Captain Harry Moore, better known as "Arizona Bill," who was exhibiting a den of snakes and reptiles at the shoos.

By way of illustrating his lack of fear of snake poison Captain Moore picked up a snake that he had just cut from the head of a dead rattler and punched the sharp point deep into the back of his hand. The tooth, or fang, as it is more commonly called, was still dripping with the blood of the reptile from which it had been cut. It penetrated Captain Moore's hand so deeply that a tiny crimson spot marked the place after he had pulled it out.

"Now, there couldn't be enough poison there to kill me," said the captain, "but it would make a mighty ugly sore. If I didn't put this goleandrina on it, my hand would swell up as big as a ham in a few hours. As it is, no harm will come."

And no harm did come, for several hours afterward the spot punctured by the tooth looked no different than from a pin prick.

Captain Moore has not the least fear of rattlesnakes, for he picks them up and handles them as if they were kindling wood. He will even pick up a big wild rattlesnake only a few days off the desert and by inserting a piece of wood between its jaws force them open so as to display the fangs and poisoned glands. Generally the snake will be in a state of frenzy, and the poisoned serum can be seen to fly from the ends of the teeth. The fluid flies out with great force, and if nothing obstructs it it will go several yards. This exhibition will give an idea of how thorough the infection is when a snake bites a human being and drives its fangs in as deep as they will go.

"I often get bitten when I am out catching rattlesnakes," said the captain as he picked up his biggest specimen and caused its tail to rattle loud enough to be heard 100 yards, "but I don't mind it, except for the pain at the moment. That is pretty bad, but cannot be helped."

"The last time I was out 'catching' along the Gila river I had a hard time of it. Somehow, in spite of all the care I could exercise, I got bit about twice a day. Naturally the snakes all struck at my hands just as I was grabbing them to put into my bag, and my hands were a sight. Why, they were all scarred up."

"Nearly all the snakes bit me struck with both teeth, and I had to take my knife and make a cut between the two tiny holes to rub the goleandrina juice into, but with all that I never had the least trouble. The wounds healed up just like ordinary scratches, and that is all there was to it. At the end of a week my hands were as well as ever."

"I came near being 'bit for sure' once while I was out catching about 30 miles from Phenix, A. T., and all because I didn't have any goleandrina with me. The herb saved me in the end, though."

"It was early one morning. I found a fine rattler sunning himself upon a rock. He didn't seem very lively, and I stooped to pick him up, but he was watching me, and before I knew it his fangs were into the end of my first finger."

"All at once I realized that I had no goleandrina and thought of the next best thing. As quick as a flash I cut a big gash in the end of my finger and began to suck it. At the same time I took a big drink of brandy and called to my assistant. He tied a string tightly around the base of my finger and then went out to see if he could not find some of the goleandrina."

"But the fang must have struck an artery, for my finger began to swell, and so did my hand just back of the string. I knew then that the matter was serious. Then my assistant came back and said he couldn't find any goleandrina. It was not the right locality for it."

"I tied the string back around my wrist. But that didn't do any good, and the swelling kept right on increasing. An hour or so my hand was twice its natural size."

"We must get to Phenix, Jack!" I said, and he hitched up like lightning, and we started off as fast as the horses would go."

"We made Phenix in about five hours, and my hand was as big as a ham, and the swelling went clear back to the elbow. I really thought I was a goner."

"We drove straight to the office of a doctor who always kept the stuff on hand, and it didn't take him a second to know what to do."

"He gave me a piece of goleandrina to chew and then jammed a lot of the juice right into the wound on the end of my finger. The swelling stopped right there and inside of an hour commenced to go down. Before it was time to go to bed my hand had gone back to its natural size and didn't hurt a bit. The next morning it was as well as ever, and I started back to finish catching rattlers."

"Everybody who lives in a snake country ought to keep a supply of goleandrina always on hand. It is a kind of a milkweed, with pink flowers. If you can get it fresh, just squeeze some of the juice into the wound. But if you have to keep the herb dry, chew a piece of it to a pulp and put that on. It will cure every time. I will stake my life on it, for I have seen it used any number of times and never knew it to fail."

"Some people say goleandrina is what the Moqui Indians use after a snake dance. Maybe it is, but I am not sure, because the Moquis won't tell anybody. But I do know that it is the only plant growing around their villages that will cure snake bite, and I am pretty sure it is what they use."—San Francisco Call.

Pretty Badly Mixed.

There have been many varied and inconsistent statements in regard to General Jackson, but never was there a more remarkable tribute to his valor than that offered a few days ago by a Vermont orator.

"What this country needs," thundered the speaker, "is men valiant in words and few deeds, like my old hero, General Jackson! General Jackson, who at the glorious battle of New Orleans regained all the former disgrace lost upon the frontiers of Canada!"—Youth's Companion.

WHAT SLIPPERS WILL DO.

Owners of Neatly Turned Ankles Warned to Beware of Them.

"I am afraid," said the girl, "that you'll have to set the buttons over a little."

"Yes," assented the clerk. "I believe I will. You've worn slippers a great deal, haven't you?"

"Certainly," she replied. "Slippers make such large, knobby ankles."

The girl blushed a little at the complimentary allusion to that portion of her foot. "But everybody wants them," she argued.

"Yes, I know," he returned. "But nobody ought to slipper wearing, which indulged in to any great extent, spoils the shape of the foot. Slippers are worn for various reasons. Some women like them because they are comfortable, others because they imagine their feet look better in low, fancy shoes, and still others because they are convenient. The fact of the matter is slippers are not a bit more conducive to ease than high shoes, if the latter are selected judiciously. Indeed, they are less comfortable in the long run, for the woman who is addicted to slippers is bound to have swollen feet a good part of the time, and when she finds it necessary to wear high shoes the inconvenience greatly exceeds the pleasure she has previously derived from slippers. For that reason the beauty is purely imaginary, for there is nothing attractive in bulging, overgrown ankles."

"Convenience is the only good point that can be really urged in favor of slippers. The ankles need support, and if they don't get it they not only become deformed to a certain extent, but their strength is impaired."

"What about the people who go barefoot or wear sandals all the time?" interposed the purchaser with a smile of satisfaction which seemed to imply that she thought she had him there.

"In that case," said the clerk, "the whole foot grows and is strengthened proportionately. But even in sandals you will notice that the straps always fasten tightly around the ankles, thus affording them more support than any other part of the foot. I have had immeasurable wrath called down upon my head for preaching an iconoclastic doctrine that dispels the illusions of a lifetime, but I know my duty to my customers and human kind in general and persevere in the right course in spite of all censure. Here, madam, are the shoes with the buttons so over which will be frank with you and tell you that your foot will not look so well as it would were your ankles the normal size. I think you have grasped the gist of my discourse, which is, 'Don't wear slippers except at odd moments when in perfect repose. Slippers are the natural enemy of pretty ankles.'"—Chicago Times-Herald.

WATCHES IN PAWNSHOPS.

Always the First Article to Be Pledged in Distress.

"Most people suppose," said a down town pawnbroker the other evening, "that when a man 'goes broke' the first thing he thinks of pawning is his dress suit, but that's not so. While there might be some that do this, they are few and far between. By long odds, the great majority of those in distress first put up their watches. In a big city like this, with clocks on every hand, a watch is almost an unnecessary luxury on the street, and so this is the first article pawned. Watches are, so to speak, a drug in the pawnshop. We get so many of them that we often wonder where they come from."

You might think that we never would have occasion to lend money on wedding rings, but you would be wrong, for we have several of them now. A woman must be in distress to pledge her wedding ring, and yet it is often done. We have engagement rings, too, but not so many in number as wedding rings. Sometimes men pawn engagement rings. We simply take that as a sign that they have broken their engagements, but when a woman comes to us with one of them, we know she needs the money."

"I've made quite a study of pawnshops," continued the broker, "and I find that in the majority of cases the dress of the person asking for a loan on some article has a great deal to do with the amount received. If the pawnbroker sees a well-dressed person in front of him, he will naturally assume that he or she is a little short for the time being, but will return and take the article out of pledge in a few days. If, on the contrary, the person asking for a loan be poorly dressed, there is little chance that he or she will get a fair amount on it. In the latter case the pawnbroker usually offers only what he thinks the article will bring at private or public sale with the amount of his interest deducted."—Baltimore News.

His Part In It.

As a well known London clergyman was recently ascending the steps to his church an old lady requested his help. With his usual courtly grace he gave the old woman his arm. On reaching the top step she halted breathlessly and asked him who was to preach.

"The Rev. Mr. —," he replied, giving his own name.

"Oh, dear," exclaimed the lady, "help me down again! I'd rather listen to the endless grating of a windmill. Help me down again. I'll put up with anything but that!"

The minister smiled and gently assisted her down, remarking as he parted with her, "I wouldn't go in either if I weren't the preacher."

Her Judgment Sustained.

In a divorce case where there was evidence that the wife called her husband "an old fool," the court says, "The record sustains the wife's judgment."

And on another point also her conclusion was affirmed. She told him she would have been foolish to have married a man of his age who had no money, and the court says, "Again we think her judgment was correct."—Case and Comment.

Earthquake Travels.

The course which an earthquake runs is usually very rapid. The running earth sound travels at the rate of about 10,000 to 11,000 feet per second and the earth wave on an average about 1,200 feet in the same space of time.

If all the tobacco smoked in the British empire last year were rolled into a rope an inch in diameter, it would form a snake-like roll which, following the line of the equator, would go 30 times around the earth.

The property No. 17 Tarleton road, Newton Centre, has been sold by the Bass River Savings Bank to Charles B. Pear of Boston. It is assessed for $4500.

The Charles Robinson estate has sold a lot of 14,75 square feet of the corner of Berkeley and Temple streets, West Newton Hill, to Edward C. Griffin.

THE FIRST TYPEWRITER.

Invention of 1876 Preserved at the Patent Office.

Hidden away in a dark corner of the model room in the patent office at Washington, with the dust of years giving its brown surface a coat of gray, is an apparently worthless block of wood cut in the shape of a staircase, with small blocks of wood mounted on wires on each of the stairs.

When I happened to see this object while looking through the 400,000 models the other day, I thought it must be some sort of child's plaything. On closer examination my curiosity was aroused, so that I induced one of the busy attendants to look up the matter for me.

It was discovered to be the first typewriter ever made in the United States—perhaps in the world.

If placed by the side of one of our modern typewriters, the first typewriter could not fail to provoke a smile from the spectator. Instead of dainty black and nickel letter keys, with an open framework showing the easy workings of the intricate machinery of the inside, as is usual in the typewriters of today, this first typewriter consisted of a closed wooden box with blocks of wood half an inch square for its letter keys. The paper carriage of the first typewriter is also of wood, and instead of the operator turning the paper carriage by a mere touch or an extension rod, as is done with all typewriters now in use, when one line was finished on the first typewriter the operator had to use both hands to turn the paper carriage—one hand to lift a catch from the cogwheel and the other hand to push the paper around as far as desired.

However, much as the first typewriter differs from its grandchildren, close examination shows that it has all the essentials of typewriters as we know them today. The inventor of the typewriter was R. T. P. Allen of Farmdale, Ky., who secured his patent in 1876. There were other so called typewriters invented before this date, but the Allen invention is the first machine that bore fruit, and it is that machine which may be looked upon as the parent of the 5,000,000 or more typewriters in use in the United States today.—Atlanta Constitution.

He Saw Himself.

Albert Chevalier, the king of coster song singers, was once asked what was the most unpleasant experience of his stage life.

"Well," he said, "I will tell you. It happened in a very handsome house in the Midlands. The whole of the back and the sides were covered with immense plate glass mirrors. I knew nothing about it until I walked on the stage, and then, for the first time in my life, I saw myself as others, as my audiences, see me. The effect was weird in the extreme. It unnerved me. It was positively terrifying. Instead of concentrating my attention upon my work, I found myself watching, studying Chevalier. Never again. No, thank you. I avoid halls that are glittering masses of plate glass mirrors."

Burma Civilization.

The march of civilization in Burma is full of interest and amusement, even to the most casual observer. Young Burma cannot now go forth as his father did, in loose but comfortable sandals. He must have fancy colored socks, held in rigid order by fancy garters worn about the swell of the calf, while Cromwellian shoes with large steel buckles have caught on famously. A young student who purchased his first pair on a Saturday wore them to church on Sunday, but took them back to the store on Monday to be changed because they did not creak!

Peculiar Punishment.

Wife benders in Germany are punished in a peculiar and yet sensible way. They are not imprisoned, as in this country, but are arrested every Saturday after their week's work is over and kept in durance until Monday.

This is done regularly every week until their sentence has expired, the object, of course, being that the delinquents may during the week earn money for the support of their families.

Carpets.

Our business has been the selling of Carpets and Rugs for considerably more than three-quarters of a century—since 1817, to be exact.

Our stock is at all times by far the largest in New England—including many choice private patterns which we control exclusively.

summer vacation abroad, returned on the same steamer.

—John Scott, aged 12, was riding a bicycle on Centre street, Wednesday morning, about 11.20, when he was struck by a piece of iron which fell from an electric wire overhead. Young Scott received a bad scalp wound. He was later taken to his home at 147 Newtonville avenue.

—Rev. Mr. Hornbrooke and family arrived home on Sunday from their European trip, and Mr. Hornbrooke was met by the pleasing intelligence that he had been honored with the degree of D. D., by Ohio University, so that now he can properly be called Dr. Hornbrooke.

—Louis D. Cronin, 18, was in court yesterday morning, for stealing a bicycle owned by Mr. L. P. Bowers, and ridden by his son. In court, Cronin admitted taking the wheel from in front of the public library, last Friday, and later trying to pawn it in Boston when he was arrested by Boston officers. Judge Kennedy imposed a sentence of two months in the house of correction.

—Circuit breakers have been put in this week by the Boston Elevated, one on the pole at the corner of Jefferson and Centre streets, and another on a pole opposite the engine house. These are so arranged that the wheel from in front of the public library, last Friday, and later trying to pawn it in Boston when he was arrested by Boston officers. Judge Kennedy imposed a sentence of two months in the house of correction.

—A pleasant event took place Tuesday afternoon, at the office of the electrical department of the Newton & Watertown Gas Light Company, when Supt. W. E. Holmes was presented with a handsome silver pitcher suitably engraved, by the engineers and firemen in the employ of the trolley.

—Mr. Holmes is very popular with the employees as will be seen by this testimonial of good will on their part.

—Mrs. Helen E. H. (Carter) Wright resumes teaching at Boston Conservatory of Music, 154 Tremont street, Boston, Tuesday, and Fridays commencing Sept. 25th, also at her residence 287 Tremont street, Newton. The teaching and placing of young voices has been a specialty with Mrs. Wright for a number of years. Her long and successful career as soloist of ballads, songs, arias, quartet singing, oratorios and operatic music, has made her eminently successful as a teacher. Another specialty is the rendering and phrasing by example, thereby enabling the pupil to grasp intelligently a correct method in singing.

—There is a good deal of dissatisfaction over the decision of the school committee to send the Bigelow school scholars to the new Adams school building in Newtonville, while the new schoolhouse is being built. To be sure free transportation is to be given on the trolley, but the railway is some distance from the building, and carrying so many pupils such a long distance will result in much confusion on the cars. It would seem as if better arrangements could have been made, especially as there is an abundance of room in Eliot street, which could have been hired at a reasonable rate and this would have avoided sending the pupils out of town. As the Underwood building is to be used for the lower grades, and the pupils belonging thereto sent elsewhere, it would have seemed the easier method to have found some place for all of the Bigelow pupils and left the Underwood building for the regular pupils.

Beside the Eliot building there are many vacant rooms in the other buildings in the business district, which could have been secured for the time needed, which will be at least a year, and probably longer, unless more rapid progress is made than has been evident so far. Possibly the Adams building was selected for reasons of economy, but the cost of transportation will offset the saving that will be made. The changes will make the year an unusually hard one for all the teachers.

—Rev. C. M. Southgate and family have returned from Provincetown, where they have spent their summer vacation.

—Mr. Joseph Welsh is working for the American Express Company during the absence of Mr. Michael McCarthy, who is ill with rheumatism.

—Sunday morning at the Methodist church the pastor will preach. At 12 a Sunday school rally will be held, with addresses, it is hoped, by Bishop Mallelien, and certainly by the pastor. Evening service, with short sermon by pastor, at 7.30.

—Mr. Frank H. Hammond of North Natiek, who drives one of the American steam laundry teams, while delivering on Wolcott street, Tuesday, fainted and fell forward upon his horse. The horse became frightened and ran away, throwing Hammond out upon his head. He was picked up in an unconscious condition and carried to his home. He has since been reported as being in a comfortable condition, although his shaking up was a severe shock.

—Miss Cora Gerry, cyclist, was the victim of a painful accident while wheeling on Commonwealth avenue, near Auburn street late Monday afternoon. At the time of the accident Miss Gerry was riding by the side of a Commonwealth avenue street railway electric car, and as the car stopped at the Auburn street crossing she attempted to pass in front of it. She had succeeded in passing the first rail when a car from an opposite direction struck her, and she was thrown to the ground. Miss Gerry received a number of severe injuries about the head, and was later removed to her home at Watertown in a carriage.

—A meeting of the Ladies' Benevolent Society was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Horace Bacon of Boylston street.

—A number of the G. A. R. members and their wives from this village have been attending the National Encampment at Philadelphia this week.

—The Echo Bridge Council of the Royal Arcanum held their regular meeting this week. On Friday evening they will visit the Needham lodge. Next Friday evening a visit from the deputy is expected.

—When the new Pettee machine shop has been completed it will be one of the finest buildings of its kind in the country. It is already nearing completion and will probably be ready for occupancy before winter.

—The Newton Upper Falls Boat Club had a very successful launch on Saturday evening. The new launch, owned by the club was launched and members and their friends were royally treated. Mr. D. J. Kelleher was in charge of the affair.

—During the summer there has been no echo at the bridge since the water has been turned off, because of the repairs on the old dam at the paper mill. Now that the work is nearly completed it is expected that the water will soon be turned on.

—For greater convenience to our patrons, I desire to announce that all calls for my services may be left with Mr. John W. Howe, High street, who will forward them to me with the greatest possible dispatch. Respectfully, HENRY F. CARL.

—The lawn party given by St. Mary's church was a marked success. In spite of the other attractions which Labor Day offers for amusement, the picnic received not only local patronage, but for the prompt work of the fire department. The damage to the building is estimated at about $1200, $300 to the building and the rest to the stock by water.

—The death of Edward Wildman of Eliot street occurred on Monday, Sept. 4th, at his home. Mr. Wildman had been ill but a few weeks, but his condition for the days previous to his death was such that the family had given up all hope of his recovery. Mr. Wildman was 55 years of age, and for the eleven years previous to his death he had been a resident of Newton Upper Falls. He was born in Caton, England, in 1844, and was a member of the Royal

IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

LARGE ATTENDANCE EXPECTED AT THE OPENING OF SEPT. 11—Supt. A. B. FIELD NOW IN CHARGE.

When the doors of the Newton public schools are thrown open Sept. 11 for the beginning of the coming school term it is expected that the attendance of pupils at the high school and at several of the grammar schools will exceed that of any previous years.

So confident is the school board that the number at the high school is to eclipse all records, it has augmented the teaching force by the appointment of these assistants: Miss Ida M. Wallace and Miss May B. Goodwin, both of Connecticut. At the high school accommodations for over 700 pupils have been made, when in previous years 600 was thought to have been an unusual number.

In the other buildings throughout the city an increase of considerable dimensions is anticipated, though no additional appointments to the teaching force have been made. There have been fewer changes in the teaching force this term than at any time before.

Until Sept. 1 Superintendent George I. Aldrich was in charge, and on that date his successor, Mr. Albert B. Field of New Haven, Conn., who was appointed last July, after one of the bitterest controversies in the history of the school board, assumed the management of affairs. As far as is known, Mr. Field has no important changes in mind. Mr. Aldrich's plans for the future are not known. As yet he has made no decision, though it is understood he has been made a number of flattering offers.

As the city government is to erect a new school building on the Bigelow site, Park street, Newton, it has been found necessary to secure temporary quarters for the scholars of the Bigelow school. The school originally planned to move the old Bigelow building to land adjacent to the former site, but when it was ascertained that the cost of such an arrangement would amount to over $8000, other plans were suggested.

Supt. Aldrich and Mayor Wilson have had the matter in mind this summer, and have finally decided that the scholars of primary grades 1, 2, 3 and 4 should attend the Underwood school on Vernon street, and that the pupils of grammar grades 5 to 9, inclusive, should occupy the new vacant rooms in the Adams school building at Newtonville.

Transportation for the Bigelow scholars will be provided free by the city over the lines of the Wellesley & Boston and the Newton & Boston street railways. Police officers will be detailed to meet the pupils at each end of the lines, and special care will be taken by the patrolmen to avoid accidents.

The session for the Bigelow scholars in the Adams building will be from 8.30 to 1. Some difficulty was experienced in Mayor Wilson and Superintendent Aldrich in providing for the kindergarten scholars, formerly of the Underwood building, but who will now have to occupy temporary quarters that some of the Bigelow scholars may be accommodated at the Underwood building. These younger pupils will attend sessions in the parlors of the Channing church, or in a public hall. Final arrangements will be completed before the opening of the schools.

There seems to be no prospect of additional rooms being added to the Thompsonville and Caban schools, although the residents of these villages and the school board have requested the city government to act upon the matter. It is probable that these improvements will be postponed by the city fathers until next year.

Residents of Newtonville and Newton Highlands have asked the city government to abolish the Fuller-Warren system of cremating sewage in the Clafin and Hyde schools, respectively, and connect these buildings with the main sewer. This subject has been before the board of aldermen, but no definite action has been taken. The cost will exceed $5000 in each building and for this reason the matter is not likely to be acted upon favorably.

General repairs have been made on many of the buildings, and additional space for the storage of bicycles has been arranged in several schoolhouses.

ST. MARY'S LAWN PARTY.

LABOR DAY LAWN PARTY AT NEWTON UPPER FALLS A PLEASANT AFFAIR.

Hundreds came to Newton Upper Falls Monday afternoon and evening to attend the lawn party given in aid of St. Mary's parish on the grounds of the church, off Chestnut street.

Many attractions were offered, which did not fail to furnish abundant amusement for the large gathering. Elaborate decorations added much to the natural beauty of the church lawn, which was crowded throughout the day and evening.

Tents and pavilions for the sale of a variety of articles, including refreshments, were erected for the occasion and the tables were liberally patronized.

A long list of sports, dancing and orchestral music delighted the large company present. The various committees were headed by the following: Mrs. Stephen Mallet, Miss Hannah Cockey, Frederick McGilvary, Mrs. Jas. Cahill, Jeremiah Mahoney, Mrs. James E. Sullivan, James E. Sullivan, Miss Mary E. Barrett, Joseph Warren, Mrs. James Freeman, Mrs. John Fitzgerald, Mrs. Kingsbury, Thos. McKel, Joseph S. Murphy, Wm. Hopkins, John Kerivan, John B. Sullivan, James F. Ryan, Daniel J. Murphy, Mary E. Barrett and Charles Cammonall.

A WONDERFUL CURE OF DIARRHOEA.

(From the Times, Hillside, Va.)

I suffered with diarrhoea for a long time and thought I was past being cured. I had spent much time and money and suffered so much misery that I had almost decided to give up all hopes of recovery and await the result, but noticing the advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and also some testimonials stating how some wonderful cures had been wrought by this remedy, I decided to try it. After taking a few doses I was entirely well of that trouble, and I wish to say further to my readers and fellow sufferers that I am a hale and hearty man and feel as well as I ever did in my life.—D. REV. FR. WHOLEY'S NEWTON CENTRE PARISH.

WILL BE DEDICATED OCTOBER 1—ITS INTERIOR IS A MARVEL OF STUCCO WORK AND A TRIUMPH IN PLASTER MODELING.

The untiring efforts of Rev. Fr. Dennis Wholey, rector of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Newton Centre, in behalf of his parish and people, have brought him a substantial reward in the form of a handsome church building, which is to be dedicated Sunday, Oct. 1.

The organization and the growth of parish were accomplished under Rev. Fr. Wholey's guiding hand. He was ordained a priest at Montreal in 1877, and was for 13 years curate of St. Joseph's church in the West End of Boston. His ministrations at that parish were directed first by Rev. Fr. Linden, who was later followed by Rev. Fr. Daley and then by Vicar General Byrne, Rev. Fr. Daley's successor.

When Fr. Wholey came to Newton Centre in 1890 it was his work to form a new parish, composed of Newton Centre Catholics, who had previously been in the churches of other Newton villages. The first mass was said in a hall on Centre street, but in less than a year the corner stone of the new edifice on Centre street had been laid.

Back of the basement of the church had been completed sufficiently for occupancy. Fr. Wholey's parishioners gathered there, their number increasing from week to week. Work on the upper portion of the structure ceased after a time, and for a year and a half ago was work on the church resumed.

This new portion of the edifice is a marvel of stucco work. It is of a character to excite admiration not alone on account of its beauty, but for its novelty as well. Its counterpart is not to be found in this vicinity, and already there has been much interest manifested in the handsome structure by architects and artists.

Visitors have come daily to watch the work of plaster modeling, which attracts the eye and causes the onlooker to gaze at the skillful workmen in wonderment. The interior of the upper church is of the renaissance style of architecture, the plans for which were prepared by W. H. McGinty, architect, of Boston. Aside from the plaster modeling, there are other features of great interest and amount of interest and admiration.

The altar, the upper part of which is constructed of wood and stucco, rests on a base of marble. Above it and partially concealed in the stucco designs are hundreds of incandescent lights, producing an effect both novel and brilliant.

This system of lighting has been installed throughout the church. On each of the 14 pillars are four clusters with three incandescent globes in each. Protruding from the ceiling are large globes of opal shaded glass, beside the chandeliers of incandescent lights.

Back of the altar is a life-size figure of Christ in bas-relief. It is modeled in plaster, but the brush of the artist has given it a prominence that is accentuated by its vast surroundings of white.

The artist is Mr. Oscar Frederick Adler of Boston, who has devoted many hours in coloring the figure and background. As painted by Mr. Adler the effect of the statue is clearly portrayed. The figure is draped with a red robe, which is hung on the body that the sacred heart is seen. Back of the figure are clouds in which the vibration of color is marked.

The figures on the 14 stations of the cross are modeled in bas-relief and the lettering beneath has been done in gold leaf. There are stained glass windows above the altar, in which the color scheme is excellent. Those above the altar contain designs and colors of much beauty.

The sheathing is of ash, and is remarkable for its harmony. The arches and stairways are constructed of the same wood, which the pews, which have not yet been placed, are of oak and elm.

The pillars, of which there are 14, are of wood, with a covering which is the closest imitation of a Venetian marble. The closest imitation of the woodwork in the interior is not to be overlooked, as its excellence commands admiration. In the gallery at the rear of the church a large organ is being placed and will be ready for use at the dedication exercises.

Does Coffee Agree With You?

If not, drink Grain-O—made from pure grains. A lady writes: "The first time I made Grain-O I did not like it, but after using it for one week nothing would induce me to go back to coffee." It nourishes and feeds the system. The children enjoy it freely with great benefit. It is the strengthening substance of pure grains. Get a package to-day from your grocer, food or drug store. It is made in the United States. It is a delicious and healthful beverage for old and young. 15c. and 25c.

EXTENSION OF FREE DELIVERY.

WABAN AND NEWTON LOWER FALLS VISITED BY A P. O. DEPARTMENT OFFICIAL, AND MAY BE INCLUDED IN NEWTON SYSTEM.

The visit of Mr. Charles Hedges, assistant superintendent of free delivery, to Newton last Friday, was without doubt one of much significance. Both he and Postmaster Ellis drove over the Waban, Lower Falls and Chestnut Hill districts, to which the extension of the free delivery system has been long contemplated.

All the other villages enjoy the carrier service, and residents of these latter places have expressed a desire for some time that their villages might be added. In Chestnut Hill, however, opinion is divided to such an extent that Mr. Hedges will probably not consider it in his report to Washington.

He will, it is believed, recommend that Waban and Lower Falls be included in the Newton carrier system, and should his suggestion be adopted the change will be effected some time in October.

Another agreeable promise contained in the rumors is the probable extension of the carrier service to the Waban Hill district, which includes Newton Centre and Chestnut Hill, and also the Oak Hill district, which forms a part of Newton Centre and Newton Highlands.

This latter plan will necessitate the entire changing of the postal lines in Newton Centre, and also the appointment of an officer to carry out the central office.

West Newton will, also, it is thought, receive the benefits of Mr. Hedges' recommendations, as he is very likely to suggest the placing of an additional carrier in that village.

The situation at Chestnut Hill differs from the conditions in Waban and Lower Falls. The two latter places have felt the need of carrier service for some time, and expressed their sentiment in petitions. At Chestnut Hill so many are opposed to free delivery that it is the least likely Mr. Hedges will recommend that the change be forced upon them.

Drink Grain-O

after you have concluded that you ought not to drink coffee. It is not a medicine but a food, and because it is healthful, invigorating and appetizing. It is made from pure grains and has that rich brown color and tastes like the finest grades of coffee and costs about 1-4 as much. Children like it and thrive on it because it is a genuine food drink containing nothing but nourishment. Ask your grocer for Grain-O, the new food drink. 15c. and 25c.

THROUGH AT NEWTON LOWER FALLS.

ST. JOHN'S PARISH FIELD DAY AND PICNIC BRINGS OUT AN ATTENDANCE OF 10,000.

The varied forms of amusement provided by Rev. Fr. Callanan at the picnic and field day held Monday afternoon and evening on the grounds surrounding St. John's church, at Newton Lower Falls, were enjoyed by fully 10,000 people.

The visitors were delighted with scores of attractions, including dancing, athletic sports, games of every description and a phonograph concert.

Two acres were completely occupied by gaily decorated booths, containing fancy and useful articles for sale. The handsome lawn, which surrounds the church and parochial residence was beautified with festoons of bunting and flags. Many Chinese lanterns were hung about the interior of the church enclosure, and when lighted at night added greatly to the brilliancy of the scene.

The large attendance was made up not only of many from the various Newtons, but also of visitors from Wellesley, Natick, Waltham and Boston.

The tug-of-war contests, which have always proved a feature of Fr. Callanan's Labor Day carnival, were this year unusually good, and many teams tried conclusions in the presence of hundreds.

Rev. Fr. Callanan was ably assisted by his curate, Rev. E. F. McLeod, and the committees, headed by Mrs. Harry Vyet, Eleanor McCourt, Mrs. George Chesterman, Mrs. Mary Downey, Mrs. J. J. Manning, Mrs. Grace Fisher, Mrs. Andrew Allen, Lizzie McKenna, Mrs. L. Jackson, Mrs. John McCourt, Katie Purcell, Julia Dolan, Michael Vesley, John H. Dolan, Thomas Hyde, William Donahoe, Edward Kenney, John Dolan, Daniel Warren, P. T. Cunningham, James J. Manning, Thomas Casack, James T. Lennon, Thomas McNamara and David Corcoran.

The principal athletic events were the senior games, in which much interest was manifested. The summary:

100-yard dash—Won by John McLaughlin, W. J. Costello second. Distance 40 ft. 1-2 in.

Hop, step and jump—Won by John King, James Gibbons second. Distance 40 ft. 1-2 in.

Running broad jump—Won by John King, Joseph Page second. Distance 20 ft. 2 in.

HUNNEWELL CLUB TENNIS.

Owing to the rain on Saturday afternoon the opening games of the Hunnewell Club tennis tournament in Newton, were not held until last Monday.

Quite a crowd of spectators, including the friends of the various contestants, watched the games throughout the day. The showing made was excellent, especially as many of the players were not in practice.

The morning's play commenced at 8.30 o'clock with A. C. Emery and G. H. Dowse on the opposite sides of the net. Emery by superior skill, captured two sets, winning them by a score of 6-3, 6-2. While this match was in progress, S. F. Morley was at work on an adjoining court taking games from C. S. Johnson. After a long contest, he defeated his opponent, 8-6, 6-2.

The next play was between R. W. Shapleigh and G. W. Pratt. Pratt won by a score of 6-0, 6-2. In a match between G. C. Waworth and C. J. Holt, Waworth won both sets, 6-0, 6-2.

The last of the day was the match between C. F. Johnson, Jr., and T. B. Plimpton. Both men were pretty evenly matched and had to play three sets before the winner could be picked. Johnson, by his steadiness and well placed shots, won the first set, 6-2. The next was won by Plimpton, 6-4. His failed strokes proved very effective, but failed to gain him the third set, Johnson carrying off the honors, 6-2.

In the first game of the second round, Waworth beat Pratt, 6-2, 6-3. This ended the morning's play. Play in the afternoon commenced at 3 o'clock. C. H. Kendall defeated W. F. Johnson, 6-2, 6-0. In the G. P. Haskell vs. L. Schofield match, Haskell walked away with a score of 6-1, 6-2. The first round closed with R. C. Thomas defeating A. Wate, 6-2.

In the second game of the second round, Thomas beat Morley, 6-4, 6-3. The hottest match of the afternoon was that between C. F. Johnson and A. C. Emery. In the latter, Johnson had an exceedingly strong man to deal with but in the end his superior ability counted and he won, 6-3, 6-2.

The last match in the round was between Haskell and Kendall. Kendall won the first set, 7-5, but was defeated in the second by a score of 6-4. The third set was won by Kendall, 6-0. This closed the second round and the play of the semi-finals were played Tuesday afternoon. They were as follows:

In the semi-final round C. F. Johnson beat C. H. Kendall 6-3, 6-4, after an exciting match.

R. C. Thomas and G. C. Waworth played very close tennis but Thomas won out by his cool head work. The score of this match was 6-3, 3-6, 7-5. Both of these matches proved the most exciting of the tournament, and were marked by splendid tennis. It will be hard to pick a winner for the finals Saturday. Johnson is a player of some little reputation and Thomas is an all-around man. It would seem that Thomas had a shade of the advantage, but rare good tennis will be played by both men.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. THE FALL GOLF OPENING.

WILKIE WINS AT NEWTON CENTRE.

There was a large attendance of members Monday at the opening match of the fall season on the Langley road links of the Newton Centre golf club. The match was for 27 holes with the best selected nine holes for a score. The score: E. A. Wilkie 39, W. M. Noble 41, W. B. Merrill 41, D. A. Harrington 42, H. Bailey 42, G. E. Warren 43, H. B. Hollings 43, P. Gilbert 43, G. E. Gilbert 50.

NET SCORE OF 76 ON NEWTON LINKS.

An 18-hole handicap medal play tournament was the feature of Labor Day on the links of the Newton golf club Monday afternoon. Eleven members participated, the match resulting in a victory for J. J. Walworth, with a net score of 76. At the Brae Burn links there were no formal exercises.

TO CLEAN MATTING.

To make soiled matting look fresh and bright prepare a pailful of warm water with a handful of salt and four tablespoonfuls of Ivory Soap shavings dissolved in it. With a clean cloth squeezed out of the mixture, wipe every breadth of the matting, rubbing soiled spots until they disappear.

A WORD OF WARNING.—There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the Ivory," they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

A WEST NEWTON WEDDING.

MISS WINIFRED C. JENNISON UNITED TO MR. GEORGE O. ALMY.

A quiet family wedding in West Newton Tuesday evening, was that of Mr. George O. Almy of Auburndale and Miss Winifred C. Jennison, at the home of the bride, on Washington street.

The decorations at the house were of goldenrod and hydrangeas, under a canopy of which the ceremony took place, the Rev. Henry J. Patrick, pastor emeritus of the Second Congregational church, reading the service.

Mr. Charles Almy of Portsmouth, N. H., was best man, and little Miss Elsie Jennison of Winthrop, niece of the bride, was the flower girl. She wore a frock of pink silk, and carried a basket of white asters. The bride was gowned in white mousseline de soie, the corsage being a creation of lace. She was given away by her father, Mr. Francis E. Jennison. Her bouquet was of white sweet peas, and her veil was fastened with a cluster of orange blossoms.

Mr. H. A. Stone and Mr. L. D. G. Bentley of Newton acted as ushers. After a trip through the White Mountains Mr. and Mrs. Almy will reside at 19 Williams street, Newton, where they will be at home to their friends after Oct. 1st.

There were many beautiful gifts from the families and friends of the bride and groom, including cut glass, silverware and a clock and handsome Dresden vase from their Newton friends, who gave him a farewell bachelor dinner but a few evenings previous.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Edward Almy, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Almy, Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Jennison, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Trowbridge, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Trowbridge, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Trowbridge, Mr. Frederick L. Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Jennison of Winthrop, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Jennison of Winthrop, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Leach, Mrs. Charlotte Frogley, Mrs. Lucy T. Sanger, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Glover, Miss Edith Leach, Mr. Walter Adams, Mrs. Elizabeth Leach, Mr. and Mrs. John Fletcher of Medford, Mrs. Anna Jennison, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Bird, Miss Alice Thompson.

Aldermen Choose Jurors at Special Meeting.

There was a brief special meeting of the board of aldermen last Friday afternoon at 5, presided over by Mayor E. B. Wilson. The following members of the board were present: Stickney, Niles, Weed, White, Ivy, Pond, Dana, Weldon, Nagle, Morton and Norris.

The only business was the drawing of these jurors for the superior court: Frank Booth, Linwood avenue; Oscar E. Nutter, Oak street; Joshua A. Harding, Watertown street.

The board will resume regular sessions next Monday evening.

REAL ESTATE.

J. Edna C. Golding has sold to Anna Cullity a lot of land on Terrace avenue, containing 60,680 feet of land.

Sammel Hano, trustee, has conveyed to Catherine M. Smith and another 92,633 feet of land on the corner of Circuit avenue and Boylston street.

Five thousand feet of land and buildings situated on Tremont street have been sold by Edward F. Barnes to Walter C. Thompson.

John F. Powers has sold to William B. Ward, 10,970 feet of land situated on Champs avenue.

You assume no risk when you buy Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. A. Hudson, Newton; E. F. Partridge, Newtonville; B. Billings, Newton Upper Falls; J. H. Green, Newton Highlands will refund your money if you are not satisfied after using it. It is everywhere admitted to be the most successful remedy in use for bowel complaints and the only one that never fails. It is pleasant, safe and reliable.

Cheap Excursions.

The Plant Line are offering cheap excursions from Boston as follows: Halifax and return, $7.50; Hawkesbury and return $9.50; Charlottetown and return $11.00; Charlottetown and return $11.00; 5th to 30th inclusive, returning within thirty days. The entire trip covers fourteen hundred miles, and the Autumn is a delightful time in which to take it. If necessary, it can be made within a week. A sea trip is a great renovator for tired nerves, and those who have put off vacation can hardly afford to miss them. There is nothing cheap about them except the price. Full information of J. A. Sept. 6, 1899.

very title of the opening address

The very title of the opening article in Scribner's Magazine is full of beauty and transcendence in its suggestions, and Frederic Irland fully sustains the expectations. His is a story of adventure in "the Canadian Wilderness" "Where the Water Runs Both Ways." The country described lies in the heart of the continent, and the experiences are those of a canoeing trip undertaken by Mr. Irland in a spirit of sport, adventure, and unofficial exploration. The author's descriptions are full of glimpses of what Mr. Irland thinks the finest canoeing country in the world, but, the narrative is so interesting for its vividness and its variety of incident, that the beautiful that it describes that others beside sportsmen will read it with unusual pleasure. We must not forget to speak of the many photographs which are excellently good and taken from the author's own photographs. Another article that will interest many people is "Agua Caliente," by the author, Deut-De, and "Calle and Camp," by many friends of Robert Grant will be glad to have his "Letter to a Political Opponent," and "The Promise of the Future," "Search Light Letters," a number of short stories and continuations of Quiller-Couch's "Ship of Stars" and Stevenson's "Satanstoe" make up an exceptionally attractive number.

The Atlantic for September is full of good things as usual. The first attraction will be the continuation of Miss Johnston's really fascinating romance, "The Captain Percy to extract himself and his friends from the clutches of the wiles of their enemies. Literary topics are treated in four articles, "The Seat of Fiction," in which Barrie and Scott are compared with the "The Art of the Past, the Future, and Present," "Criticism and the Man," and "The Mission of Humor." They are followed by critical studies of Hawthorne, Emerson, Thoreau, John Burroughs, and Samuel M. Crothers. Of more or less sociological interest are the opening article, by Wendell Kendall, "Alcohol and the Temperance Movement," and "The Genesis of the Gang," by Jacob A. Rils, a biographical sketch of John Murray Forbes, by Edward Waldo Emerson, "The American and the Foreigner," and "The American," a comparison by Professor Hugo Munsterberg.

One of the most interesting features in the September Harper's is an article entitled "Behind the Pink Walls of the Forbidden City," by a writer signing himself Cathay. It tells, as none of the press dispatches have told, the details of the drama which has been played about the Chinese throne, and throws a new light on the character of the Dowager Empress. The number of the magazine contains a letter by Mr. Ewan, in which he discusses the present position of the Jews and its underlying causes. Other valuable features are: Lella Herbert's article on "The Chinese," by the author of "The Tomahawks," short stories by Seumas MacManus, Frederick Remington, Wilmot Price, Brander Matthews, and W. B. Van Ingen. There are also further instalments of "The Princess Xenia," and Dr. Wyeth's "Life of General Forest."

In the September number of Harper's Round Table, Dan Beard tells the boys how to build and furnish the "Daniel Boone Log Cabin," and illustrates his article with drawings that show exactly the kind of things that should be in the stories of the number are "The McWilliams Special," by Charles Broughton; "My Duul with Yellow Hand," by Colonel Cody (Buffalo Bill); and "The Cruise of the Albatara," by Sophie Swett. There is also a drawing with the story of "The Boy and the Caney," and another instalment of the "Adventures of Gavin Hamilton."

Mr. John Kendrick Bangs has never written anything more thoroughly amusing than the first chapters of "The Enchanted Typewriter," which is now appearing in Harper's Weekly. In it Mr. Bangs again ventures across the Styx for his material, and a number of the famous "shades" whom we met in the "Houseboat" are introduced. Mr. Bangs's story will be followed by a romance entitled "With Sword and Crucifix," by E. S. Van Zile. The first instalment of Mr. Van Zile's story will appear early in September. It will run through the winter months.

Never has the practical usefulness of Harper's Bazar been more thoroughly proven than in its recent numbers. Among the most useful features may be mentioned Dr. Grace Murray's papers on "First Aid to the Injured," Mrs. Bird's lessons in "Bonnet Trimming," and Miss DeForest's letters on the European fashions. There is always a general appeal to the short and Brander Matthews' novel, "A Confident To-morrow," which is still in its early chapters, promises to be one of the most interesting studies of life among New York's aristocracy and literary set which has yet been written.

The present number of Current History calls for renewed commendation of its accuracy, and usefulness for reference. Nothing of importance in the doings of today in any part of the world escapes its notice. The things recorded are of an admirable clearness of style and a judiciousness of treatment that reveals nothing of the spirit of the political or religious bigot. The number opens with a remarkable article on the Marconi system and other systems of wireless communication are described in plain and simple English; the place of the achievement in the history of science intelligibly explained; the limits and possibilities fully shown. Numerous diagrams of apparatus are given, making the whole subject perfectly clear to the ordinary reader. This article alone is worth more than the price of a book. Other than the factually treated are the issues of the Spanish War, Conference at The Hague, Samoan Affair, Far Eastern Boundary, Transvaal Crisis, Venezuelan Boundary, Recent Strikes, and the Irish Question. The last is a Troublemaker. Biographies of prominent people, and hundreds of other topics.

"Don't tell me you won't," said an Eastern Side citizen to his 5-year-old daughter. "Well, papa, when I read I say, 'I mean it, I won't.'"—Ohio State Journal.

"Pa, what's the Drevfus case?" "It's a big satchel which was manufactured four years ago by the court of France." "What was it made for, pa?" "To carry all the scapegoats in the French army." "Did it hold 'em, or did it bust, pa?" "It did bust."—Detroit Free Press.

the first International Congress will be held in the United States

The first International Congregational Council is to be held in the United States is at hand. It is to be held in Boston, Sept. 20th to 28th. The program shows that a large body of distinguished delegates will assemble, many of whom will deliver addresses and read papers on the highest themes which Christianity and Congregationalism present to the human race. These delegates will represent the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Australia, Japan and many of the Pacific Islands. The London Missionary Society sends its foreign representatives. The United Methodist International Union of America and Wales will send some of the distinguished clergymen and laymen who were members of the first international council which was held in London in 1891; and also a body of clergymen and laymen who represent the movements and interests that have sprung up since that time. The Progressive Congregationalism in the Old World and the New will be represented, for women are among the appointed speakers for the first time. The national, international and international congregational councils. The moderatorship, by common consent, and in accordance with the precedent established in 1891, will fall to the lot of the moderator which the council is held. Hence, the moderator will be an American and it is understood that the honor will be conferred on President Angell of the University of Chicago. He is well-known as ex-Minister of the United States to China and to Turkey. He was a member of the first International Council in 1891. The churches of Greater Boston are largely depended upon to do the honors of the occasion, through private and public hospitality and attendance upon the sessions of the council will be free in the afternoon except the seats for the delegates will be reserved. The sessions will be held in Tremont Temple, morning, afternoon and evening, and the overflow meetings in Park street church.

More Frequent Cars to Newton Centre.
Next Monday the Newton and Boston street railway will begin running cars between Newton and Newton Centre on 20 minute time for a great part of the day.

Cars will run every twenty minutes up to ten o'clock, then on 30 minute time to 3 o'clock, when the 20 minute schedule will be resumed and continue until 10 p.m. This will be a great accommodation to those who wish to travel between those two points, and will be especially appreciated by the Centre people, as it will give them better opportunities to visit the livelier portions of the city.

"DEAR FRIEND—I feel it my duty to express my gratitude and thanks to you for the good you have done for me. I am now well and happy, and I am sure that I am not alone in my feelings. I am sure that many others are also well and happy, and I am sure that I am not alone in my feelings. I am sure that many others are also well and happy, and I am sure that I am not alone in my feelings."

you for what your medicine has done for me. I was very miserable and losing flesh very fast, had bladder trouble, fluttering pains about the heart and would get so dizzy and suffered with painful menstruation. I was reading in a paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I wrote to you and after taking two bottles I felt like a new person. Your Vegetable Compound has entirely cured me and I cannot praise it enough."—MRS. J. O. BARNAED MILLTOWN, WASHINGTON CO., ME.

CITIZENS AND CAUCUSES.

Gen. Curtis Guild made a speech at the Lowell Club, Labor Day on "The Public Duties of a Private Citizen." It was an interesting speech as all such theoretical discussions are, but the trouble comes when an attempt is made to carry them into practical operation. Gen. Guild's eloquent periphrases are worth quoting and in the course of his speech he produced these special gems:

"The use of the term 'private citizen' is a misnomer. In a republic there is no such thing as a private citizen. There is no inhabitant in a country governed like ours who is not a part of the government, who is exempt from blame for the nation's errors or from praise for the nation's progress."

"We enforce our laws, if necessary, by a volunteer militia. We administer our laws by a jury drawn from our own number. We make our laws through our own representatives. If the militia is badly drilled, if juries are incompetent, if politics are corrupt, the fault is ours and ours alone."

"There is a class of American citizens—no, not citizens of America, persons, now happily growing smaller, who actually boast that they take no interest in politics. There is another and a larger class whose notions of patriotism are confined to paying their taxes and voting on election day."

"The purest fire of patriotism burns not in spasmodic flashes, but in a steady flame. If this government of the people is to be for the people it must be by the people, by all the people. The voter who absents himself from caucuses and primaries has no right to complain of politics or legislation."

Now all this sounds very fine, and it might inspire the average citizen to resolve hereafter to take an active part in politics and see that proper nominations were made and that no unfit man was put up to receive the endorsement of the voter. But it has been tried again and again and the average voter finds something like this state of affairs both in Newton and in other places. He goes to the caucus resolved to put all these theories in practice. He finds a gathering of other citizens, many of them possibly intent on the same object as himself and all resolved to do their duty. A chairman is nominated in a manner suggestive of its having been arranged beforehand, nominations are called for and there may be speeches and there may not, but when nominations are called for some one offers a list of delegates, on a printed ballot, generally without any explanation as to whom they are for, a vote is taken, the aforesaid delegates are chosen by a sufficient majority, and the private citizen goes home with the pleasing consciousness that the whole thing was arranged beforehand and for just as well have remained at home. That is practical politics as distinguished from the theoretical kind of which political orators are so fond of talking. After one or two experiences like this the average citizen begins to lose interest in caucuses and primaries, and to realize that all is wanted of him by those who manage things is to go to the polls and vote for those who have been selected by the higher powers.

This is the reason that caucuses are so seldom attended and there have been many theories proposed as to the best way of bringing back the power of making nominations to the people. Out in San Francisco they have introduced the Australian ballot law into the caucuses, and it has had one trial. The result was that for the first time in years the caucuses were largely attended, and the people took an interest in politics. Both the Democratic and Republican machines were defeated, and clean and honest candidates were nominated. Advocating such a reform here would be a practical way of inducing the average citizen to take an active part in politics, and then it might be true that the voter who absented himself from caucuses had no right to complain of politics or legislation. But think of the opposition such a reform would encounter, if it was attempted to get it upon the statute book.

There were many who hoped for something towards the purification of politics in New York state from the entrance of Theodore Roosevelt into politics and his election as governor. But so far he has proved a good deal of a disappointment. Mr. Platt seems to retain his bossship and the many reforms that were promised have not yet been brought to pass. Before election Roosevelt was very eloquent over the notorious canal frauds and promised to punish the guilty parties, and this was one reason why he received such a large vote, as the people believed his promises. But so far the canal frauds have not been punished, and at a cattle fair recently, when the governor was making one of his warlike speeches, he lost his temper and became very excited when one of his hearers asked "how about those canal frauds?" Shaking his fist at his questioner he denounced the charges of corruption as "baseless and discreditable in the highest degree to those making them," and intimated that the persons most deserving of public censure were those who brought the charges. He also stated that he had appointed two Democratic lawyers to investigate the whole matter, and they had reported that no frauds had been committed. Such a statement and such an exhibition of temper has astonished those who have read the report of the investigation committee. This committee said that although there had been grave misconduct on the part of the canal officials, yet the matter had dragged along until the most of the wrong doing was covered by the statute of limitations, and the rest were covered by the very loosely worded special law that had been passed providing for the work. The canal officials were "proper objects of just public indignation," the report stated, and in fact the report was a very severe arraignment of these canal officials. It may be that Roosevelt feels sensitive over his failure to punish these men, who had stolen millions from the state, but why he should endeavor to misrepresent the report of the investigating committee, that has been printed and published in most of the papers, is something that people can not understand; it is such a silly performance when it can be so easily exposed. We notice that some papers who have not taken the trouble to look the matter up, accept Roosevelt's version, as before entering politics his reputation for veracity was not questioned, and even now we dislike to believe that this apostle of "the strenuous life," and war with every nation in sight, could deliberately misrepresent the case. But he is such an impulsive man, that evidently his judgment is not to be relied upon, to state the case mildly, and also that there is little hope for the purification of politics from him. He appears to be a reformer after the style of our own Mr. Lodge, who has no interest in measures that are not intended to benefit him politically or personally. It would not be surprising if these same canal frauds should interfere with the further advancement of this eloquent advocate of war.

LITTLE has been heard of the county commissioners of late and whether this means that they are doing better, or that people have become tired of the subject is not clear. Commissioner Gould, the chairman of the board, is up for re-election this fall, and we notice very flattering references to him in the Cambridge Chronicle, with the usual statement that he has gained such valuable experience in office that the county can not afford to lose his services just at this time. We suppose that really the commissioners have been spending just as much money as usual, but they are so remote from newspapers that it is hard to keep track of them.

THE BRIGHTON Item states that preparations are being made for work on Tremont street, and that a hearing will be heard this week, and estimates are now being obtained on the work. Newton did its part of the work so long ago that we had about concluded that Boston had forgotten this small section of street which has been so long in disreputable condition. But great bodies move slowly, and Boston is no exception to the rule.

THE WALTHAM NEWS says that that city has been thoroughly canvassed on the Lieutenant-governorship contest, and that the largest share of the voters are for Bates, who is sure to carry six of the seven wards.

THE MALDEN EVENING MAIL proposes the Hon. Henry E. Turner as a candidate for State Auditor. Mr. Kimball has held the position eight years, is 71 years old, and there is a growing sentiment that the state would be benefitted by a change. Mr. George of Haverhill and Mr. Turger of Malden evidently share this sentiment.

A Trolley Ride.

For short and cheap summer excursions the dwellers in Newton have been wont to turn to the Harbor and along the shore. But Nantasket, Nahant, Plymouth, Provincetown and Gloucester have become so familiar and have been "done" so many times as to be less tempting. A change is coming—has already come, both as to direction and motive power. They are beginning to turn into the country with its greater variety and to substitute electricity for steam. A network of tracks leads in every direction and to constantly increasing distances. The trolley had entered as an excursion. It has its advantages. The boat often exposes to sea sickness; the steam car is hot and stuffy and dusty and runs for the most part by the back door. The trolley is open and airy and runs by the front door, through the main thoroughfare, by the public buildings and the parks and along the streams. It is delightful to ride through the varied scenery of the country, without any panting, sweating horse before you. This is a matter of experience and we speak from the memory of a little excursion last week.

We started on Monday morning at 8.45 from Newtonville Square and rode away nearly seventy miles through the centre of our State, passing through more than twenty villages and cities and reached the town of Warren after seven hours, an hour and a half after noon being given to lunch at Worcester. The day was all that could be desired for such a ride. It is very fortunate that it was a favorable relative to the end of such a trip to welcome you to her home; so the return trip was not made till Thursday, under the same conditions. We loaded ourselves with nickles before starting. They kept disappearing till the last one was gone—eighteen in all; so we found that this is much cheaper than steam travel, the round trip of 126 miles being travelled for $1.80, thus saving $1.14. We were fortunate in making connections wherever we changed cars. It was pleasant on our return to make our lunch-place the shore of beautiful Lake Quinsigamond under the shade of the trees.

The delight of such a trip is in the constant variety of the scenery. We go from the culture of Newton and Wellesley to the pure country as between the towns farther inland sparsely inhabited. Objects of interest are always arresting the eye, like the Woodland Park Hotel and the Cottage Hospital in Newton, the College at Wellesley, the towers and turrets of which are seen as we pass; the State Lunatic Hospital at Worcester. Here and there we pass beautiful private grounds like those of Mr. Wesson of rifle fame, in Northboro, Deerfoot Farm in Southboro, and "Moose Hill Farm" in Spencer.

We cannot go through such places as Natick, Marlboro or Spookfield without the impression that the world is dependent upon Massachusetts for its footwear. The shoe factories are large buildings. Through Framingham and Southboro we skirt along the shores of the war basins of the Metropolitan Water System and here and there we get glimpses of the work of the New Aqueduct which is to empty the Charles River into Boston. It is by the constant variety of view, the interchange of thickly settled villages and cities and the country between that we are kept from realizing that there are no cushions on these seats.

Did space permit we might specify many other things which interest one on this excursion. In riding through these villages it is pleasant to notice the new companion of the church and school house in the handsome Library Buildings usually of stone, those at Northboro, Leicester and Warren being gems for country towns. There are as many Brookfields as points of the compass. After passing through all but the North we reach the thrifty town of Warren in the West village of which the route now terminates. It is expected ere long that it will be continued via Ware and Palmer, connecting at Indian Orchard with Springfield which will make a fine summer's day trip from Boston.

We are glad to find that the town of Warren, which we prize as our birthplace, is recovering from her severe loss by the removal of the Blake Pump Works. Other industries are finding their way in to take its place. We are glad to utilize the columns of the "GRAPHIC" to chronicle this little excursion as a suggestion to the "Stay-at-home" or "Can't-get-away" Clubs, to start away for two or three days and take this delightful ride through the country. We recommend it as pleasant in the months of September and October. If they are not fortunate enough to find a good cousin at the end they will find a very good hotel. It is needless to say that companionship adds much to the enjoyment of such a trip. It is a case where two are better than one. It will be helpful, too, to have in hand a Guidebook to remind you of the objects of special interest along the route.

This is only one excursion of many available now in the increase of electric roads. Going back to Newtonville Square as a centre one may go southward to Providence, Newport, Fall River or New Bedford. He may go northward to Nashua or Exeter, N. H. He may go eastward to the extreme point of Cape Ann. These are all possible now and many others. Every year will, doubtless, witness an increase of these roads and of the travel upon them for pleasure excursions. Let us rejoice that the poor man can ride.

THE SCHOOL BOARD

TWELVE MEMBERS AT WEDNESDAY EVENING'S SESSION IN THE OLD CLAPLIN SCHOOL BUILDING—CAPT. ERNEST R. SPRINGER OF CO. C. APPOINTED MILITARY INSTRUCTOR.

There was a meeting of the school board Wednesday evening, the first since the board's adjournment last July for the summer vacation. Chairman Benner presided and twelve members were present.

The most important action taken by the board that evening was the appointment of Capt. Ernest R. Springer as military instructor in the High school.

Capt. Springer's knowledge of military affairs and tactics is well known, he having served as captain and major in the Newton High school battalion and also as a captain in the Mass. Institute of Technology battalion.

Capt. Springer headed Co. C, 5th regiment, M. V. M., when it went to Greenville, South Carolina, and upon its return secured a reorganization of his command. He is exceedingly popular and eminently qualified to discharge the duties of his new office.

Among the other important matters acted upon last Wednesday evening by the school board were the appointments of Ida M. Wallace as assistant in the High school and Ada C. Allen as an assistant in the High school.

A petition was received from the parents of the Adams school district requesting that the Bigelow school pupils be provided with quarters in the old Adams school building.

It is the plan of the school board to have the Bigelow pupils occupy the now vacant rooms at the new Adams school. The petition was referred to the committee on school houses.

The city government was requested to appropriate $200 for the temporary accommodation of Bigelow school pupils during the erection of the new building.

At Wednesday evening's meeting of the school board, Superintendent Field was present for the first time since his appointment.

Bigelow School Pupils.

The school committee has completed a contract with the Newton & Boston Street Railway Co. to transport the pupils of the Bigelow school from Newton to the new Adams school at Newtonville. The service will begin Monday morning, Sept. 11th, when five special cars will leave Nonantum square at 8 o'clock and run to the corner of Walnut and Washington streets. The Bigelow school children will have only one session per day, while they are quartered at the Adams school, beginning at 8.30 a.m. and closing at 1 p. m. The return cars will leave Walnut and Washington streets soon after the close of the session.

Tickets will not be furnished or required as the cars are set apart for the use of the school children only.

Pupils of grades I to IV will go to the Underwood school building; grades V to X will go to Adams school, and the kindergarten children will occupy rooms over Hubbard's drug store.

Gymnastics at Lasell.

Frequent application having been made by persons resident in the vicinity, for admission to the classes in Physical Training at Lasell Seminary, arrangements have been completed by which these requests can be granted. Classes, admitting women and children, will be formed Nov. 1st, to meet Tuesday and Friday, and will continue until about May 1st.

The gymnasium is under the supervision of Miss Ransom, a graduate of Dr. Sargent's school for teachers at Cambridge, assisted by Miss Kate Adams, of Brookline, a graduate of the same. The system pursued is that known as "The Sargent System," and is based upon individual needs, as ascertained by thorough examination and tests of strength.

According to these tests, exercises are carefully prescribed, adapted to strengthen what is weak, and to improve the personal bearing and carriage, as well as the health. "To develop courage and presence of mind, and ready command of the body's powers," is no less essential to women than to men, in the large freedom and responsibility given them in our country. And for whom is it more essential than for mothers that there should be a sound body and so steady nerves and a sound mind? To this end Lasell Seminary furnishes advantages unequalled by any girls' school in New England.

The hall is large, sunny, well ventilated, with open fire, and has dressing rooms, shower and swimming baths, and bowling alley attached. The appliances are ample, and were furnished under the direction of Dr. Sargent, of Cambridge. Danger from over-exercising is prevented by constant oversight.

Terms for the season, $20.00. Swimming Lessons, each, $1.00. Those interested in Swimming may send for a special circular. The use of the Bowling Alley is free to all pupils.

Application to be made to Miss Ransom, or C. C. BRAGDON, Principal.

off to the ends of the earth pretty soon, and what they've heard about people in Strathmore will make no difference one way or the other. You see I hate the girl—Lena, child, put your foot on that spark—but you don't have to stretch the truth to find plenty to say against her. She'd been flirting with Tom, Dick and Harry ever since she was 15. Her looks turned her mammy's head to begin with. She'd been engaged to half a dozen, more or less, but some way she didn't get married. At last Elmore was put on the list. He was dazzled with the idea of marrying with Penkerman. He didn't know enough, poor fool, to understand that other men looked upon her as being too much of a belle. She and her mother thought, I reckon, that she might do worse. So they kept him in reserve.

"Don't shake your head at me, Mr. Kilbrath; you know I'm quoting your own words. Well, they're the engagement mightiest secret—gave Elmore some rosewater reason, you know. When he died, lo and behold, they were more anxious to keep it quiet than ever, and in less than a year she married this Tom McGrath, who was hanging round her all the time and is a better match than Elmore was. See? I didn't care so tremendously much about Elmore; 'tisn't that, but that kind of a female creature, the smooth, pretty, plausible one—Lord!"

During the week I learned that there was then on the place a negro woman who had been for years Cousin Nancy's servant. Recently she had married one of my uncle's hands and was living in a cabin at the back of the orchard. I made occasion to call upon her.

"La, yes, Miss Leny," said she, after seating me in her splint bottom chair before a rafter fire. "Miss Patsy's livin' in; leastwise dat wah my information at las' accoun'. Dey do circulate de reports dat she ain't long for dis wohl, an' 'deed I reckon what she ain't. Mighty funny, Miss Leny, how you come to remember a little slip ob ponh white folks gal like dat all dis time, gallivantin round de wohl like you is too. What Miss Patsy goin' to do ob?"

"La, Miss Leny, she nebaw wah no 'count ahtah she went off seekin' lahlin' at dat ah boundin' school. I know a 'ooman what hab a dahlah, a yellah gal, what's lahnd out at dat school, an she say dat little Patsy, she say she wuk herself to def at dat school f'om stah. She study an' study hah book much as any two gals, an not bein use to it it woh ponh. But dat wah de whole ob what broke hah down. You know, Miss Leny, when Mals Elmore die? Well, she home f'om de school foh Sunday dat day when de news come, an she 'sisted on comin' down yah to de fun'ral, an when hah pappy he won't bring hah she go an ax a place in Squah Mosen's wagon, an dey say what she dat white an' still an cur's lookin out ob hah eyes dat dey was sohey foh hah, an dey was wonderin wheddah she was cabin ent'ly 'bout Mals Elmore, ah wheddah she was jes' natchly wohnd out wid school lahlin'. Den dey reckon she wahn't cabin so much 'bout Mals Elmore, 'cause she nebaw cur's na nothin at de grave—dat what Miss Mosen's Milly done tole me. But enhow she kotch cole on de way home—it was cole weddah—an den she hab de levah fuh an spit blood. She got up out ob dat, but she ain't nebaw gutt spittin blood. She boun't to die foh great space ob time. Don't you want to roas' sweet tater in de ashes, Miss Leny, like you use? La, no, Miss Leny, she ain't at home! She up on de mount'n. Hah pappy mighty exhubed 'bout hah, an he meck hah stay dah, 'cause she don't spit so much blood up dah, an lawsy massy, Miss Leny, what you 'magine—dat gal, dat little snoopin white headed gal ob Tim Nonly's, ez teachin school on dat mount'n! Yessum, she ez at de Ridge, wahy you an Miss Matt was dat summah. I reckon 't is quite poss'ble dat dat gal do know 'nough to teach dat mount'n trash. No, 'm; I don't s'pose she well 'nough, but Miss Mosen's Milly she say she mighty res'less tell she know she got dat school. Likely hah pappy ain't so much money ahtah hah schoolin an doctorin to pay hah bound up dah."

It was spring before I got to the mountain. The day was soft, though the trees here on the summit were still bare, as I walked through a demoralized bit of encroaching forest to the little pen of a schoolhouse where Patsy Nonly was spending her last stores of mortal strength.

The children were tumbling out, dismissed for the day, as I came in sight. When I stood at the door, I saw her, little Patsy, half sitting, half lying, on a bench against the wall.

Yes, she was ill, she was changed, she was older, but what was the meaning of the exquisite, soft happiness illuminating her face through its weariness?

She opened her eyes—large and dark they looked—and with a little cry came toward me. The tears were running unheeded down her cheeks when she slipped into my arms.

"Miss Adeline, miss Adeline! Ah, how glad I am you come! You come in time for me to see you. Now I can speak to you; I can speak his name, my Elmore's name, to some one."

She slipped down on the floor and buried her face in my lap. She did not know!

When she looked up, she was shining through her tears.

"You mustn't think I'm unhappy because I cry," she said. "I'm goin to him soon. God has been mighty good to me. But no one but you knows my heart is in the other world. It wouldn't 'a' seemed right to make his people mad at him by tellin what he was to me after he was gone, and it's been more than I had strength for to mourn him in secret and to look forward to see him in secret also. But I'm happy, Miss Adeline; God's mighty good to me!"

I arranged to return to the valley the next morning. I could not face this situation. For awhile I was in fear lest in some way she should learn the truth. I felt that the opportunity for so supreme and humorous a cruelty was one that chance would hardly miss. But I drew reason to my aid, and, remembering how little ordinary gossip would shake her faith and how short the time she had to live, it seemed probable that she would be allowed to die in peace.

Then—then? There is an interrogation for you! I wanted to escape saying goodbye to her, but after I was in the little wagon that was to carry me down the greening mountain she came for a last word.

She was worn and wan, but the look of a person with a happy secret was in her eyes. She carried a mass of the early wild pink azaleas. She had gathered them herself. It was a beautiful, life stirring spring day, and her errand was to ask me to lay these for her sake on Elmore Claymore's grave.

Mountain Rats in Colorado.
H. P. Ufford, writing in The Century of "Out of Doors in Colorado," describes the mountain rat as the only plague worse than the Canadian Jay, popularly known as the "camp robber." Of the rat he says:

This fierce rodent is nearly twice the size of the Norway species and is always ready for a fight. Besides his bellicose propensities he is an ardent thief. The miners have a saying that he will steal anything but a red-hot stove. He does not steal to satisfy hunger alone. He appears to be a kleptomaniac. Provoked by the depredations of one old graybeard who haunted our cabin, I one day assisted in harrrying his castle, where I found the following articles: Four candles, 1 partly burned, 3 intact; 2 spoons, 1 knife, 2 forks, 27 nails, all sizes; 1 box of pills, 1 coffee pot lid, 1 tin cup, 2 pairs of socks, 3 handkerchiefs, 1 bottle of ink, 5 empty phials, 1 stick of giant powder with 10 feet of fuse, beans, rice and dried apples galore.

His spirit of mischief is as strong as his passion for stealing, and the honest miner solemnly avers that if you leave open a bag of beans and one of rice he will not rest till he has made a clean transfer of all the beans to the rice bag and vice versa. I know that more than once he has, during the night, filled one or both of my boots with the cones of the spruce tree.

I have heard also of a voracious prospector who, returning from a trip without coffee pot, frying pan and bake oven, accounted for their absence by declaring that the mountain rats had carried them off and emphasized his assertion by shooting through the leg a skeptic who was so injudicious as to doubt the fact.

Making Weather.
The emperor of China has some strange duties. One of these is the ordering of the seasons. It is summer in America when the sun warms the earth, and not till then, but in China it is summer when the emperor says it is summer.

As soon as the emperor declares that summer has come everybody in China puts off winter clothing and arranges himself in summer garb, no matter what his feelings say on the subject. All domestic arrangements are made to suit the season, as proclaimed by the emperor, although they may not suit the individual at all.

The nearest approach to the Chinese custom of ordering the seasons is the practice observed in France in all public buildings. There it is winter on and after Oct. 1. Fires are then lighted in all government offices, and the servants exchange their white summer waistcoats for the thicker and darker ones of winter.

At that date the public libraries are closed at 4, and in the streets the sellers of roasted chestnuts make their appearance. In official France it is winter, no matter what the weather may say and no matter what unofficial France may think.—Youth's Companion.

Wardrobe of a Chinese Matron.
It seems that there are changes of fashion in the dress of Chinese women, but they are confined chiefly to the variations of length of the tunic and the wearing or leaving off a skirt. The usual garments are trousers, a skirt, and two or three little coats.

The Chinese woman making an afternoon visit takes off her skirt, just in the way that an English lady would remove her cape. If it is very warm, she may take off one or possibly two of the little coats.

The trousers are really the most gorgeous part of the costume, being sometimes of rose colored satin worked with gold. Blue cotton is generally used for everyday wear.

Chinese women wear no corsets, but they compress their waists for all that. They have scarcely any width of hip, so they tie the waist cords of their garments to quite a painful degree of tightness.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

"Old Masters."
New York, according to report, is rapidly becoming a very paradise for manufacturers of paintings by the great masters. It is stated that there exist in Paris and Antwerp and London establishments that have grown rich beyond the fear of penury by making spurious masterpieces for American millionaires who feel the necessity of forming picture galleries in order to show their appreciation of the proper caper, and now the foreign art critics are giggling and poking fun at us because our men of wealth have not reflected that canvases attributed to Van Dyck, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Gainsborough, Constable, Romney, Ruysdael and other famed masters, that have come hither in floods, cannot by any possibility be all originals, but are necessarily for the most part forgeries, made to meet a steadily growing demand.—Cincinnati Commercial.

The High School.

The Newton schools will open next Monday after the summer vacation. With their opening will begin the new superintending work. In every department the average attendance is assured, and the registration for the high school exceeds that of last year, the freshman class having registered 260 pupils, making a total of 730. This is especially encouraging since the number of entering students last year exceeded the registration by about 50. It is regretted that Miss Constantine, who has been an efficient teacher in Latin and English for many years, has accepted a position in New York. Miss Mary B. Goodwin has been chosen as her successor. The English and history department has been strengthened by the appointment of Miss Ida M. Wallace, who will act as assistant in these branches. With the exception of Miss Constantine and Col. Benyon, all the former teachers will remain. Capt. Springer has been appointed to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Col. Benyon. Capt. John Boardman was unable to accept the position since he has been lately appointed adjutant of the 26th U. S. Infantry. With the resignation of Col. Benyon the battalion loses not only an able and popular military instructor, but one who was interested in every branch of school life. His place will be hard to fill for he had gained the confidence and respect of every member of the battalion, but Capt. Springer has unusual qualifications for the office, and is expected to be a worthy successor of Col. Benyon.

Drying preparations simply develop dry catarrh; they dry up the secretions which adhere to the membrane and decompose, causing a far more serious trouble than the ordinary form of catarrh. Avoid all drying inhalants and use that which cleanses, soothes and heals. Ely's Cream Balm is such a remedy and will cure catarrh of the head in the easiest and pleasantest. All druggists sell it at 50 cents or it will be mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., N. Y.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

BOSTON MUSEUM.—The Boston Museum has been crowded nightly with friends and admirers of Roland Reed, and the theatre has re-echoed with shouts of laughter caused by the many amusing situations in his latest play, "His Father's Boy." This clever comedy, adapted by Sydney Rosenfeld, has scored one of the greatest hits in the history of the theatre. Mr. Reed is seen in a role that is better adapted to his peculiar methods than anything he has had in years, and that charming actress, Isadore Rush, has a splendid character and has astonished her friends with her most magnificent gowns she has ever worn in this city. The play is undoubtedly to its great success, will present no other during his stay at the Museum. The advance sale of seats has been large and he will no doubt be greeted during the balance of his stay by a continued succession of crowded houses.

TREMONT THEATRE.—Crowded to the doors every night, "Way Down East" holds the record for tremendous receipts at the Tremont Theatre, Boston. It is a woman's play—and hence its success—a clean, clever, witty, pretty and well acted play, with scenic architecture of rare beauty. Over 1000 cherymen have written to Mr. Brady, extolling "Way Down East" and congratulating him on the good that such a play is bound to exert in the community. Every character in the play is a type from Hi Holler, the chore boy, to the quaint town constable, and the garrulous village gossip, down to the bluff, stern, though kindly-hearted Squire.

And the magnificent snow scene, depicting a New England blizzard, is considered the greatest piece of naturalism ever attempted on our modern stage. In the superb cast headed by Phoebe Davies, all the Williams, are Sara Stevens, Howard Kyle, Mabel Strickland, George Backus, Felix Haney, Ella Hugh Wood, Frank Bell, J. H. Bunney and others of national importance. The advance sale of seats is given, on Wednesday and Saturday.

Mortgagee's Sale.

By virtue of the power of sale contained in a mortgage deed given by Harry T. Knight and Clara G. Knight his wife in her right, to the Trustees of Dartmouth College, a corporation duly established under the laws of the State of New Hampshire, dated July 1, 1895, and recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds, book 288 page 21, and in breach of the condition of said mortgage deed, and therein substantially described as follows: "A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate on Orris street, leading from the southerly side of Lexington street in that part of Newton in Middlesex County, Massachusetts, called Auburndale, and being shown as the Lot No. 16 on a Plan of said Auburndale, belonging to C. W. Higgins, dated Jan. 1, 1895, and recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds in Book of Plans No. 41, Plan No. 15, bounded and described as follows, viz:—beginning on the westerly side of said Orris street at a corner of Lot No. 14 on said plan and four hundred and ten (410) feet distant southerly from said Lexington st.; thence running south westerly on said Lot No. 14, one hundred and fifty (150) feet to land of owners unknown; thence turning and running southeasterly on said land, sixty (60) feet to Lot No. 18 on said plan; thence turning and running south westerly on said Lot No. 18, one hundred and fifty (150) feet to said Orris street; and thence turning and running north westerly on said Orris street, sixty (60) feet to the point of beginning; containing nine thousand (9000) square feet of land.

Being the same premises conveyed to said Clara G. Knight by George A. M. Ewer, by deed dated December 21st, 1893, and recorded with said deeds in Book 229 page 30, the estate therein supposed present owner of the equity of redemption of said premises is Otto L. F. Higgins, who is interested in the same under a second mortgage.

The premises will be sold subject to a sale for taxes for 1897 to Harlow H. Rogers, and also subject to taxes for 1898 and 1899. Two hundred dollars will be required to be paid by the purchaser at the time and place of sale, when further terms will be made known.

—John O. Donahue, who was arrested Tuesday evening for disturbing the peace on Langley road, was brought before Judge Kennedy in the police court, Wednesday. He was found guilty and fined $5 for drunkenness, and sentenced to 30 days in the house of correction for disturbing the peace on August 30 was fined $20, which he paid. Both men were complained of by Patrolman Bailey.

—Patrick and Dennis Reardon, residents of Thompsonville, were in court last Saturday, complained of by Patrolman Bailey with disturbing the peace on Aug. 30. Dennis O'Brien, a third alleged participant in the affair, was not in court, and his case was called a default. According to the testimony of Patrolman Bailey, the three defendants were engaged in a mutual assault and were later joined by the younger Reardon. The affair, it was alleged, brought a large number of people to the scene. Young Reardon claimed he tried to separate the men. The trial of the case consumed nearly an hour, and at the close fines of $10 were imposed on each of the men.

—Miss Elizabeth L. Smith, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. D. W. Smith, and granddaughter of the late Rev. S. F. Smith, author of "America," was married Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock, to Rev. William H. Allison of Cambridge. The ceremony took place in the First Baptist church in the presence of over half a thousand guests, including representative society people from the Newtons, Brookline, Cambridge and Boston. The interior of the church was beautified by elaborate decorations of autumnal foliage, consisting principally of golden rod and wild flowers. When the bridal party reached the platform the service was read by Rev. E. Y. Mullins, pastor of the First Baptist church. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Appleton L. Smith, and the best man was Mr. Fred W. Dullinger of Cambridge. The bride wore the wedding gown of her mother, which was of white pure apple silk, and trimmed with lace from the bride's own worn by an aunt over 50 years ago. She carried a bouquet of white roses. The maid of honor was Miss Emma W. Smith, a sister of the bride, who was gowned in white silk organdie and carried a spray of pinks. The ushers were Mr. E. F. S. Morton of this place, Mr. F. O. Jonett, Mr. Arthur Belpap and Mr. Arthur Stone of Cambridge. A small reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, and was attended only by members of the family and immediate friends. Rev. and Mrs. Allison left on a wedding trip and later will take their residence in Penacook, N. H., where Rev. Mr. Allison has a parish.

CORDIAL GREETING.

NEWTON CATHOLICS WELCOME HOME THEIR PASTOR, REV. M. DOLAN—HONORED BY THE CLERGY, AND GIVEN A SUBSTANTIAL PROOF OF HIS PEOPLE'S ESTEEM.

Early in June the parishioners of the Church of Our Lady heard that it was the intention of their pastor, Fr. Michael Dolan, to visit Europe. Regretting to lose even for a time his fatherly care, they were glad of the announcement in the hope that on his return he might be able to attend to their spiritual wants with renewed ardor and energy.

His home-coming was not allowed to pass unnoticed. His brother priests were on hand to welcome him at dinner last night in the parochial residence. Present were Rev. John J. McNulty, Rev. M. T. Mannans, Rev. R. J. Johnson, Rev. D. O'Callaghan, D. P. R. Rev. John S. Cullen, Rev. T. Brosnahan, P. R. Rev. T. J. Danahy, Rev. M. J. Doody, chancellor of the archdiocese, Rev. D. J. Wholey, Rev. L. J. Morris, Rev. H. J. Mulligan, Rt. Rev. Monsignor T. Magennis, Rev. M. Begley, Rev. Jas. F. Giffether, Rev. E. T. Butler.

At 8 in the evening all repaired to the parochial school hall, and took seats on the platform.

The interior of the hall was beautified with elaborate decorations of autumnal foliage. Above the platform was a design in evergreen and immortelles forming the words "Welcome Home."

On the platform were grouped palms and potted plants, while at the back hung a handsome framed crayon portrait of Rev. Fr. Dolan.

In opening the exercises in the hall, Fr. Giffether said:

Reverend Pastor, Rev. Fathers, Ladies and Gentlemen:

The very agreeable part which I have to perform on this occasion is simply to start the ball rolling in a grand welcome home to Father Dolan. Our beloved pastor has seen much in the last few months to cheer and astonish him, yet I venture to say that nothing has been abroad as gladdened his heart as much as the audience he looks out upon to-night.

We are here to make him feel how true are the words of the old song: "There is no place like home." That there are no people so devoted and so true as those who have seen him in the last few months to cheer and astonish him, yet I venture to say that nothing has been abroad as gladdened his heart as much as the audience he looks out upon to-night.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN RESUME REGULAR SESSIONS AFTER AN EXTENDED VACATION—MAYOR AND CITY TREASURER CONSIDERED AND DISPOSED OF—MAYOR AND HIS AUTHORITY DISCUSSED AT LENGTH.

The "glad-hand" was largely in evidence at Monday evening's meeting of the board of aldermen, when that august body resumed regular sessions after an extended vacation. As the different members entered the chamber prior to convening, they were met by the earliest arrivals, including city officials and more punctual members, and "the right-hand of fellowship" was extended promiscuously.

When the board was called to order at 8 o'clock there was every assurance that the session would be comparatively brief. The inexhaustible topic of "sewers," however, proved irresistible to the notoriously eloquent board members, and about forty minutes were given up to this seemingly unimportant subject.

The first business was the postponement of the hearing upon the petition of Wallace and others that the Newton street railway company should be granted leave to run cars, Waltham and Walnut streets. On motion of Alderman Bailey the hearing will be held October 2nd, instead of last Monday evening.

Mayor Wilson returned without his approval orders authorizing the construction of a sewer in a portion of Albion street, Ward 6, and also the order appropriating $7,924 for the purchase of additional land for the new Bigelow school site.

His honor's reason for vetoing the latter order was because of his belief that there should be an issue of bonds provided and the amount should not be taken from the tax levy. These vetoes were sustained.

Communications were received from the school committee, asking that the board grant them a hearing on all requests for repairs on school buildings. The communication was referred to the committee on ordinances.

Another communication from the school board was that which asked that the city government purchase land adjoining the Williams school lot at Auburndale, that new rooms may be added to the Williams building. This was referred to the public property committee.

The Democratic and Republican voters were granted permission to hold caucuses in the several ward rooms on Sept. 14 and 27 respectively.

The list of election officers was presented and will be finally acted upon at next Monday evening's meeting of the board.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Among the petitions was a communication from the Waltham city government asking that the Newton board of aldermen allow the taking of certain Newton land for the improvement of Cranberry brook. Such a request and agreement is necessary under the statutes. It was favorably acted upon without discussion.

In a communication from the trustees of the Newton land and improvement company, the city was notified of its failure, that is in the opinion of the land company, to fulfill its agreement in regard to the improvement and reconstruction of Bulough's pond. The subject was referred to the city solicitor.

In answer to a communication from the board of aldermen the Commonwealth Avenue Street Railway declared that the conditions at Newton Highlands did not permit of their issuing free transfers on the line of the Newton & Boston Street Railway at that point. There was no intersection of tracks, the Commonwealth Avenue company declared, and the Boston & Albany tracks intervened in two places. The Commonwealth Avenue company was willing, however, to issue transfers on the Newton & Boston at the corner of Homer and Centre streets. The communication was received.

Notices requesting the apportionment of sewer assessments were received and referred.

There were nearly a dozen of petitions for concrete sidewalks and crossings. These were received and referred without being read.

Ward 7 residents asked the board, in a communication, to see that the trees about their homes were properly protected from the unwarranted depredations of "niggers" during that period of the year when the tempting fruit is ripe. This request was turned over to Chief of Police Tarbox with full authority to act.

The Boston Elevated railway asked for permission to construct a curved track in Newton square, between the two street railway companies and a hearing ordered. Three auctioneers had their licenses renewed and two important hearings on the petitions of the telephone company were opened and immediately adjourned.

Reports were received from the highway and finance committees, but as these are contained in orders which were later adopted, they will not be given here.

THE "SEWER DEBATE."

With Alderman White furnishing the comedy element, and Alderman Ivy providing material for Mr. White's "witty" dialogue, there was considerable amusement in the "sewer debate" between the other aldermen and the small number of spectators present.

It was all because the mayor returned without his signature the order authorizing the construction of a sewer in Phillips street, Ward 4.

Alderman Dana explained that the sewer was designed to accommodate Norumbega park, and that he, as chairman of the committee, felt that the order should be adopted, notwithstanding the veto of the mayor.

Then Alderman White said it was his opinion that the board was composed of 21 men of average good judgment, etc. Having complimented his fellow members he proceeded to speak somewhat harshly of the mayor, saying that the veto in question showed the mayor to be the whole city government.

Alderman Ivy defended the mayor, and thus it continued until Alderman White decided to move that the order be adopted, notwithstanding the veto of the mayor.

Alderman Ivy did not think the motion of Alderman White to be in the line of proper parliamentary procedure and quoted the statutes. He thought there should be a vote to reconsider before any other action. Others declared their respective interpretations of this section of the statutes, quoted by Alderman Ivy, and then after 40 minutes had been devoted to the subject, the order was "adopted notwithstanding the veto of the mayor."

On the mayor's veto in regard to the construction of a sewer on Commonwealth avenue the same action was taken.

The third matter, which was handled by the same principals, and in much the same manner as the Phillips street subject was that veto of the mayor against the appropriation of $3,000 for the construction of sewer connections with the Claflin and Hyde school buildings. Alderman White was out again to give the mayor some gentle roasting, and Alderman Ivy appeared in the role of attorney for the defence. The mayor's veto was sustained however.

ORDERS.

The following important orders were adopted without discussion, having been favorably reported upon by the respective committees. Authorizing the city treasurer to obtain temporary loans to the amount of $300,000; establishing the pay of election officers; appropriating $22,100 for city expenses for October, 1899; appropriating $2,000 for the conveyance of pupils in the Bigelow district; granting the telephone company a pole location in Highland street and conduit locations in Lincoln street; designating the various polling places; authorizing the highway committee to consider the assessment of betterments; authorizing the renumbering of Franklin street extension; authorizing the city treasurer to receive $1700 from West Newton residents to pay for the construction and laying out of Forest avenue and authorizing the water commissioner to lay water mains at a cost of $3,042.

THE NEW BIGELOW SCHOOL ORDER.

That the mayor's objections might be met, and the whole subject amicably arranged, those aldermen who want the additional land purchased and added to the new Bigelow school site, prepared an order appropriating $7,924 to be provided for by issue of bonds. It did not meet the approval of Alderman Ivy and was laid over until next Monday, he having entered the charter objection.

RE-OPENING OF SCHOOLS.

ATTENDANCE ALL OVER THE CITY GREATER THAN IN PREVIOUS YEARS.

An unusually large attendance marked the opening of the Newton public schools Monday. This was especially true of the High school, where the number exceeded that of any previous year, and over 700 pupils were enrolled.

At the grammar and primary schools there has been a marked increase over last year's attendance but none of the school buildings are thought to be overcrowded.

Many extensive improvements have been made on the different buildings throughout the city, and the school board has petitioned the city government to purchase additional land for the purpose of enlarging the Williams school at Auburndale.

The recently appointed superintendent of schools, Albert Baldwin Field, has assumed the management of affairs since the expiration of Mr. Aldrich's term, Sept. 1, but has not as yet made any radical changes.

During the construction of the new Bigelow school building the pupils of the district will be taught at the new Adams school at Newtonville. Transportation on the electric is provided free by the city.

As told in the Graphic last week, the school board has secured temporary quarters for the kindergarten pupils in Associates block on Centre street. Such provision for these pupils is made necessary because of the changes demanded on account of the erection of the new Bigelow building. The old Bigelow building is to be torn down, and during the erection of the new structure it will be necessary for the grammar school pupils to attend sessions at the Adams school at Newtonville and others at the Underwood school. Primary pupils will remain at the Underwood while the kindergarten pupils formerly taught at the Underwood will occupy rooms in Associates block.

Young McGuire Released.

Former private James J. McGuire of the 26th regiment, whom his parents, and attorney, Daniel J. Gallagher, were trying to have released from Col. Rice's regiment has been sent back to his home.

Col. Rice of the 26th regiment telegraphed from Providence to Deputy Clerk Bradley of the United States circuit court last Saturday, that he acknowledged service of the summons in the habeas corpus proceeding brought by James McGuire of Newton for the release of his minor son, James J. McGuire, who unlawfully enlisted with the regiment, and had sent the boy back with instructions to return to his home. The boy is only 19 years old, and did not have his father's consent to enlist as required by law.

WOULD "STOP THE WAR."

HOSTILITIES IN THE PHILIPPINES A WHOLESALE MURDER OF HALF DEFENSELESS PEOPLE WRITES A GRAPHIC CORRESPONDENT—PRAYS THAT THE UNITED STATES MAY BE FORGIVEN.

To the Editor of the Graphic:

As an American citizen heretofore intensely proud of the fact I desire to add my voice in protest against the wicked murder of an innocent people now in progress in the Philippine Islands.

When the war with Spain was declared no nation ever had a higher motive in view than America—to espouse the cause of an oppressed and helpless people, and free them from the starvation and merciless slaughter received at the hands of the despotic government of Spain.

Through the Providence of God that was accomplished with marvelous success.

But we had absolutely no right to barter with Spain for the lives and property of the Filipinos; no right to invade their territory; no right to dominate over them against their wishes, and above all no right to slaughter them at wholesale because they disagreed with us. We pronounced them savages and assume that they cannot govern themselves. If a fair chance were given them and proper allowance made it would be a deplorable deed if the United States government far better than a certain section in the United States is governed.

If by chance a newspaper containing accounts of the atrocious murders recently perpetrated in some of the southern states could fall into the hands of the better Filipinos I have no doubt they would, if financially able, raise funds and send an army of men to fight here to Christianize us. God knows we need it.

You say we are in the Philippines too deep to back out now. What shall we do? I say "Stop the War. Stop the murder at once." If a partially defenseless people whose only crime is a desire for absolute freedom. The nations of the world have had ample opportunity to learn that the United States is great, rich and powerful, and every one knows that with a little time, money and perseverance we can murder and annihilate the half-defenseless Filipinos till they obey our dictations. Shall we do it? No! A thousand times no!

Of course most Americans realize what a grand opportunity for advancement and stateship the Filipinos are losing by their refusal to accept our offers of assistance, but still I understand we meet people frequently even in our own country, who differ from us radically in our views and it is no longer considered "good form" to kill them. Shall we do it? Is it right? If so, let us return to days of witchcraft.

May God forgive us! S. R. S.

Grain-O Brings Relief

to the coffee drinker. Coffee drinking is a habit that is universally indulged in and almost as universally injurious. Have you tried Grain-O? It is almost like coffee but the effects are just the opposite. Coffee upsets the stomach, ruins the digestion, effects the heart and disturbs the whole nervous system. Grain-O tones up the stomach, aids digestion and strengthens the nerves. There is nothing but nourishment in Grain-O. It can't be otherwise. 15 and 25c per package.

Lasell Re-opened.

Lasell Seminary opened its doors on Sept. 14th to a full complement of eager young women. They come from twenty-six different states, and have, as usual, filled the former limited capacity of Lasell to its utmost, many having been turned away for want of room.

Mrs. Martin gave the welcome of the faculty to the new pupils in an after-dinner speech, Wednesday, and Col. Homer B. Sprague lectured on Thursday, 7.30 p. m. Subject, "Macbeth, a study in Soul Perdition."

Death of Joseph E. Whitman.

Mr. Joseph E. Whitman, one of the best known residents of Newton died at noon, Tuesday, in his office on Summer street, Boston. Mr. Whitman had been ill but a few hours, having left home in the morning apparently in good health. Shortly before noon he was seized with acute indigestion, which resulted in his death.

Mr. Whitman was 46 years of age, and a native of Milford. He went to Newton when but 16 years old, and entered the clothing business, with which he had been identified ever since. With yet Harvard, Taylor of Worcester, Mr. Whitman was much interested in real estate. The Taylor, Stevens, Weld, Willard and Nonantum buildings, of which he was the principal owner, are among the largest in the city.

Mr. Whitman was a member of the Hunnewell and of the Newton clubs, and was prominent in Newton social life. He was all times interested in the growth of Newton, and was one of the city's most public spirited citizens.

A widow survives him.

called Grain-O. It is a delicious, appetizing, nourishing food drink to take the place of coffee. Sold by all grocers and liked by all who have used it. It is a healthful, prepared it tastes like the finest coffee but is free from all its injurious properties. Grain-O aids digestion and strengthens the system. It is not a stimulant but a health builder, and children and old people can drink it with great benefit. Costs about 1-4 as much as coffee. 15 and 25c.

Dedication of Beulah Baptist Mission Chapel.

The dedication of the Beulah Baptist Chapel will take place during the coming week. The first service will be held next Sunday at 3 o'clock, when Rev. Henry C. Greaves, associate pastor of Tremont Temple, Boston, will conduct the services, assisted by Rev. Frederick B. Greul and Rev. E. A. Capen. Miss Lister of Watertown, and Mrs. Braker of Waltham will be the soloists.

In the evening, Rev. James H. Earle, W. M. Main, secretary of the Sunday School Association, Rev. G. S. Braker of Waltham and others will make short addresses. The treasurer of the building committee will report, and the key will be delivered. Mr. Morton and Mr. Montgomery will sing.

Tuesday evening, Sept. 19th, Rev. J. H. Norcross of Marblehead, assisted by Revs. W. M. Lisle, C. E. Fuller and W. H. O. Millington of Lowell will conduct services. Wednesday, Sept. 20th, will be social night, dedication, tea, and concert, with an admission fee of twenty-five cents.

Sunday, Sept. 24th, children's dedication concert at 3. Praise meeting at 7 p. m.

Maynard Chapter of the Newton Natural History Society.

The seventh regular meeting of this chapter was held Friday, Sept. 8th, at 447 Crafts street, in the class room of the Maynard Laboratory. An interesting and instructive paper was read by Theodore B. Parker on the nesting habits of the blue bird. A nest of the blue bird was closely watched, the times of the hatching of the eggs noted, and the departure of the young birds from the nest observed. The habits of the adult birds were also studied.

Thomas E. Parker gave some observations upon a large bird nest which is located in the vicinity of the laboratory. This is in a piece of wood land of about five acres, composed quite largely of white pines, and in this nest it was estimated that some 7000 birds gather every night. Between four and five thousand of these are grackles and the remainder are robins. While the grackles come in to the roost in compact flocks of from 19 to 1999 individuals, the robins either came in singly or in loose straggling flocks. The flight of the grackle is steady and well sustained, and when the flocks take to the air they graceful curves. On the other hand, the robins move with an eccentric, darting flight.

Mr. Maynard gave a continuation of his systematic zoology and spoke of the fresh water hydra, giving an account of its habits, structure, etc. An account of the hydroid polyps followed, showing their peculiar method of reproduction. Here for the first time in the ascending scale of animal life, we find instances in which the children of the polyps do not resemble their parents, nor do their grandparent. This method is known as alternation of generation.

The Maynard Chapter is an offshoot of the original Newton Natural History Society and was organized last May for the benefit of the teachers and pupils of Newton and vicinity, and for others interested. It is a growing society, numbering some fifty members, which all who are interested in nature study are invited to join.

Most people appreciate a good thing at a fair price, but some few will have only the things that cost the most money. The "Ivory" is the favorite soap of most people. Some few want the high-priced toilet soaps and think they must be better because they cost more. No soap is more carefully made, or is made of better materials, than Ivory Soap.

High School Notes.

The new military instructor, Captain Ernest R. Springer, began his duties last Friday. This year the battalion has increased in such numbers, that it necessitates having six companies.

The battalion regrets to lose the services of Lieut. Kershaw, who resigns, as he has accepted the editorship of the Review.

Miss Bruce, teacher of French, is to spend a year in France, and Miss May, N. H. S. '92, was appointed to fill her place. Miss Constance, having accepted a position in a New York school, is succeeded by Miss Goodwin.

The freshman class is considered to be the largest one that has ever entered the High school, and indications point to a possible increase before the end of the month.

The great success of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in the treatment of bowel complaints has made it standard over the greater part of the civilized world. For sale by A. Hudson, Newton; E. F. Partridge, Newtonville; B. Billings, Newton Upper Falls; J. H. Green, Newton Highlands.

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somewhat the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking Thoughts Suggested by the Military Parade.

To the Editor of the GRAPHIC:—

Any one seeing the parade of Col. Rice's regiment could not help being struck with the youthfulness of the members. Most of them look to be only boys, and have apparently enlisted without any idea of the seriousness of the task before them. It cannot help saddening any humane man as he looks at these healthy boys, the pick of the country, to think that they are being sent to a tropical climate, to suffer the horrors of a tropical climate. And for what? To show down a few rebels who are fighting for their homes and their liberty. This is a strange errand for citizens of a free country to be sent upon. These boys will certainly not all come home, many of them will find a grave in that fever ridden country, and those who return will bring with them the seeds of disease that may last through their lives.

War is a horrible thing, even at the best, but when such a country as ours is making war upon a people whose only desire is to be free and independent, it becomes something worse. Just why we are warring war is not clear to my mind. There are all sorts of excuses, but the real reason has not been given by any one of those who are urging this slaughter of an innocent people.

OLD CITIZEN.

Bicycles at the Public Library.

To the Editor of the Graphic:—

It is never too late for a good thing. That is to say a good thing is acceptable at any time. While the suggestion may be a little tardy, it would be, if readily acted upon, something that many would appreciate. How often have you and I seen, in passing the Newton Free library on Centre street, a number of wheels left in different parts of the lawn or leaning against the building? How often have you, I, and others, stumbled over these machines in going in and out of the library? In answer to both of these queries, I venture to say many and many a time. Now the burden of my song is this. Will not the library trustees have a wheel-rack constructed for the use of the many wheelmen and wheelwomen who are "constant readers" at the library? By doing this they protect the lawn, and I have no doubt that the janitor has often found fault with the condition of the grass, which has often been unintentionally trampled down by cyclists. This wheel-rack could be located at the north side of the building and the cyclists might enter from the driveway between the postoffice and library building. Trusting you will grant me the courtesy of your columns, I remain,

A BOOKWORM.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

TREMONT THEATRE.—Thus far, night by night, the receipts at the Tremont Theatre, Boston, since the present engagement of "Way Down East" began, have exceeded by considerable sums those of the corresponding period last year, proving incontrovertibly that the play stands even higher in the esteem of playgoers than it did during its first remarkably successful run. Its simple, wholesome picturesque portrayal of life upon a New England farm is thoroughly relished by all classes, for people in the orchestra stalls, the balconies and the gallery alike pay the closest attention from opening scene to curtain fall and are equally hearty in expressing their appreciative approbation. To the wronged and persecuted girl about whose unhappy life the action of the play revolves, is given unstinted sympathy from the conflict between the strong will and soft heart of the old Puritan "Squire" who is eagerly watched; "all the world loves a lover," and no small portion of the interest is centered upon the many young fellow who strives to make the heroine forget her sad past; who the jaunty "city man" who wronged her is regarded with hearty detestation, and so on through the whole list, even to the rustic characters, with their quaint speech and manners, having so much of genuine human nature that from first to last their sayings and doings firmly hold the attention of every auditor. With the people to whom the comedy is entrusted, everybody laughs, and the merry scenes, like the meeting of the sleighing party, are greatly enjoyed. Thus laughter follows tears, and merriment presently gives place to sadness, so cleverly has the playwright mingled pathos and humor throughout the work. "Way Down East" is admirably acted, and will be presented at the Tremont nightly and on matinees on Wednesday and Saturday until further notice.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.—Never has the Hollis street theatre, Boston, had such a laughing triumph as that which has been the opening attraction of the present dramatic season, and the crowded and delighted audiences which have attended every performance of "On and Off" have borne witness to the wonderful success of the French comedy. The French play has been one of the most popular productions ever made by that astute manager, Charles Frohman. In New York last year it ran far more than one hundred nights at the Madison square Theatre, and now the original company comes to Boston repeats the positive triumph which it has known everywhere. The plot is of the funniest description and one is fairly convulsed by the whirlwind rapidity with which complication follows complication. A young husband pretends to be a sleeping car inspector to account for the regularity with which he visits his sweetheart in the country and all goes well until the real inspector, whose name he unwittingly assumes, puts in an appearance. Add to these a mother-in-law who sees spots and what is more, hears them, even when introduced by means of a photograph, a blackmailing wine merchant, a pretty girl whose irresistible winks brings woe to every man that she sees, and one has the idea of the complications, which Alexander Bisson has invented, surpassing his own previous triumphs. Charles Frohman's original company is a wonderful troupe. Both at the Hollis St. Theatre E. M. Holland and Fritz Williams have added to their original successes and great praise falls to them for their clever work. With them appear Samuel Reed, Ralph Delmore, Jas. Kearney, Jay Wilson, Esther Tittel, Maggie Holloway Fisher, Anita Rothe, Augusta Glose, May Lambert, May Galver and Louise Douglas. The comedy will be run is positively limited to the coming fortnight.

BOSTON MUSEUM.—Herbert Kelsoy and Edie Shannon will be the welcome attractions at the Boston Museum for the coming fortnight, beginning their engagement there next Monday, Sept. 18th, with the presentation of their greatest success, "The Moth and the Flame," by Clyde Fitch. Both Mr. Kelsoy and Miss Shannon have proved their marked popularity with New England audiences in the past, when they have appeared here as leading members of the Lyceum Company, and with other organizations, but it remained for them to heat their own company and score their greatest triumphs. Last spring they were first seen in Boston in "The Moth and the Flame," and every critic went into raptures over the wonderful effectiveness of the play and the genuine art of the players. Clyde Fitch's work was credited as the strongest effort ever made by an American playwright, and the boldness and truth with which he painted modern society life as he found it, came in for the warmest admiration. In Mr. Kelsoy and Miss Shannon he found ideal exponents of his creations and every point was brought out to perfection. So emphatic was the success that Bostonians clamored for a return engagement, and so great was the demand for the Boston Museum was arranged, the only one that these stars will play in New England this season. "The Moth and the Flame" will have a perfect presentation with all the original effects, including the wonderfully realistic church scene, and it is promised that the company will be by far the strongest that has ever been seen in the support of these popular stars.

A WONDERFUL CURE OF DIARRHOEA.

(From the Times, Hillville, Va.)

I suffered with diarrhoea for a long time and thought I was past being cured. I had spent much time and money and suffered so much misery that I had almost decided to give up all hopes of recovery and await the result, but noticing the advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and also some testimonials stating how some wonderful cures had been wrought by this remedy, I decided to try it. After taking a few doses I was entirely well of that trouble, and I wish to say further to my readers and fellow sufferers that I am a hale and hearty man to-day and feel as well as I ever did in my life.—O. R. Moore. Sold by A. Hudson, Newton; E. F. Partridge, Newtonville; B. Billings, Newton Upper Falls; J. H. Green, Newton Highlands.

Co. C. Notes.

Company C has resumed its regular Monday evening drills. It has been slightly diminished in numbers on account of the enlisting of some of its members in the volunteer regiments. It has furnished more men than any one militia company in the country. In the late war with Spain it participated, although it saw no fighting, but went with that intention and deserves just as much credit as if it had. Now many of its members have enlisted, six have gone to the marine corps, five of whom were appointed corporals soon after enlisting, two to the regular army, two to the 35th Infantry, one private and one corporal to the 20th, and one to the 46th, who is acting Sergt-Maj. Last Monday, eight more members declared their intention of joining the 46th, and it is expected that all of these men will be appointed non-commissioned officers in a short time.

A competitive examination will be soon held by the officers to fill two vacancies in the grade of corporals.

It is proposed that the company hold its annual dinner, Oct. 9th, after the fall field day, and it is the captain's wish that all those who served under him during the last three years in the militia, and while in the volunteer service, should attend. He also hopes the Veteran Association will unite in celebrating this occasion. Officers of the G. A. R. and the city government will be invited to attend.

Men's Woolens.

This is the season to consider the question of fall and winter suits, and Walter C. Brooks & Co. of 15 Milk street, Boston, offer the largest assortment of foreign woolens shown in Boston. Every one knows the superior qualities of foreign woolens, in looks and wearing qualities, and Newton men are especially invited to call and get estimates.

Chronic Nasal Catarrh poisons every breath that is drawn into the lungs. There is procured from any druggist the remedy for the cure of this trouble. A small quantity of Ely's Cream Balm placed into the nostrils spreads over an inflamed and angry surface, soothes immediately the painful inflammation, cleanses, heals and cures. A cold in the head vanishes immediately. Sold by druggists or will be mailed for 50 cents by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York.

Mrs. Barnard Thanks MRS. PINKHAM FOR HEALTH.

"DEAR FRIEND—I feel it my duty to express my gratitude and thanks to you for what your medicine has done for me. I was very miserable and losing flesh very fast, had bladder trouble, fluttering pains about the heart and would get so dizzy and suffered with painful menstruation. I was reading in a paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I wrote to you and after taking two bottles I felt like a new person. Your Vegetable Compound has entirely cured me and I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. J. O. BARNARD, MILLTOWN, WASHINGTON CO., ME.

"I tried three doctors, and the last one said nothing but an operation would help me. My trouble was profuse flowing; sometimes I would think I would flow to death. I was so weak that the least work would tire me. Reading of so many being cured by your medicine, I made up my mind to write to you for advice, and I am so glad that I did. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills and followed your directions, and am now well and strong. I shall recommend your medicine to all, for it saved my life."—Miss A. A common tarred paper was all right for your grandfathers to use as inside lining and outside covering of their buildings, — but a fabric has been produced which, while thinner, has greater strength, toughness, and wearing qualities. It is known as the Neponset Waterproof Red Rope Fabric. It is a splendid roof and side covering for outbuildings, and takes the place of back plaster in dwellings. It is proof against wind, water, frost, and insures warm, dry buildings, and is much cheaper than shingles or clapboards. For inside lining Neponset Black Building Paper is very inexpensive. It is also waterproof, odorless, and clean. Hundreds of farmers are using this paper to-day, and repairing buildings at slight cost.

A WRONG EXPEDIENT.

It was said some three years ago, when the large undertakings which resulted in an increased tax rate, were under way, that with wise management each year would show a lessened rate until the average of the more recent past was reached. This prophecy has proven true and a gradual reduction has been noted—something each year.

Of course a low tax rate, if honestly reached, is welcomed by all, especially by owners of real estate. While the rate for the current year is lower than was expected, and ordinarily would be hailed with delight, there seems to be prevalent among many a feeling that it was reached at too great a cost of principle to be a matter of satisfaction.

Various expedients are resorted to that a good showing shall be made through a low tax rate, that best known to our people being over-valuation of old buildings and unmarketable property; but it has been reserved for the present administration of our affairs to establish an extremely unsafe and wholly indefensible method.

Mayor Wilson must bear the brunt of the criticism, however much it he may think should be borne by the board of aldermen, for the mayor now is in fact, as in name, the responsible head of affairs.

It is the first time in the history of the city that an asset has been converted into cash to pay running expenses.

When the sale of the poor farm at Waban was authorized, some $60,000 resulted therefrom, about half of which was appropriated for the construction of a new almshouse in the Oak Hill district. The balance was paid into the general fund without question or protest from the mayor, who it has been supposed, was a close manager and prudent financier.

And then when a small parcel of land was desired for the enlargement of a schoolhouse site, and the money was appropriated for its purchase, the mayor refused his approval of the order solely on the ground that the money should be borrowed and not raised through the tax levy of the present year. Did it not occur to him that a part of the proceeds from the poor farm sale could be applied to this matter? Why did he not urge and insist that no unnecessary debt should be created? Then again there is the new Bigelow school. Should the city borrow all the money for its erection when $30,000, improperly placed in the general funds to reduce the tax rate, was available for this purpose?

It is an extremely dangerous precedent to establish and one for which, so long as we are not really in danger of bankruptcy, there is no justification, this selling of property to pay running expenses.

When a business concern uses its capital to meet its fixed charges, creditors become uneasy. Should not a city's finances be managed as prudently as those of a mere business house?

Operating expenses should be always met by taxation, and such a method of reducing a tax rate as has been here shown is a sham, and the sooner it becomes known the better for the future of the city.

ARE OUR HANDS CLEAN?

Are our hands clean? If in this city we have not had an incident which was comparable to the Dreyfus matter in the enormity of its offense against righteousness, nevertheless, in the recent dismissal of Mr. Aldrich, the late superintendent of schools, our representatives on the school board that is, those who voted with the majority, have been guilty of an act of injustice which has left a stain on the reputation of our city, which it will be difficult to remove.

Our citizens certainly can and should take such action as will show the people of this and other states, who have been greatly interested and fully informed of the circumstances connected with this deplorable affair, because of the wide publicity which was given through the press to the matter, that the course of the majority of the board was one which they believed and still believe to be indefensible. Action should be taken to show that the people of this city will not countenance a summary discharge of a public officer of admitted ability and of high standing, without cause.

Fortunately, the coming city election provides an opportunity for the citizens of Newton to show their disapproval of the course of the majority in the board. Five new members are to be elected to that body. No effort should be spared to dispossess the present leadership in the board of the power which it has so wrongfully used. This done, our hands will at least be cleaner than they are now.

DREYFUS' conviction and sentence of ten years imprisonment, to follow so close ly upon the torture he has but recently undergone, was a shock to the whole civilized world. It was very apparent during the trial that to obtain a verdict exonerating Dreyfus would be well nigh impossible, yet it seemed as though the five years of agony on Devil's Island might be considered a sufficiently "extenuating circumstance" to preclude the imposing of any further sentence. The result of the trial is a revelation of the political condition of France. That the army should be allowed to solely conduct such an important trial, and that the lawyers should feel obliged to emphasize their devotion to the army, goes to show the wonderful strength of that organization, and clearly demonstrates the weakness of the civil authorities at a time when a strong hand is needed to keep the honor and justice of France from becoming a by word. There can be no doubt that a party with the wit to seize the opportunity might at this time so turn the tides as to break the power of the army. The latter's power is not in the cleverness and brilliancy of its officers, but in the strength of its organization. Let the civil government put the army in its proper place, that of the servant and not the master of the people, and therefore the cry would no longer be "Long Live the Army" but "Long Live the State."

It is reported that the city of Newton has gained but one poll during the past year. It would be interesting to study a comparison of the figures by wards. It is evident that in the vicinity of Nonantum square many homes have been established since the erection of the new tenement and business blocks, and no decrease is discernible at present, on the contrary it appears to be on the increase. At least ninety shops and stores are doing business in this immediate vicinity, and in them a large number of men are employed. These facts show a remarkable change in the social conditions of the problems confronting our citizens. To meet similar problems under different conditions the Young Men's Christian Association has operated for many years here with success according to the effort expended in the work. Now with splendid equipment and methods which are adapted to any society, this organization seems to be the only one fitted to materially assist these men in self improvement.

"GETTING BACK INTO HARNESS AGAIN" did not appear difficult to the members of the board of aldermen, Monday evening. Before the session opened there was a carnival of hand-shaking and an exchange of pleasantries. All the city officials and heads of departments showed very clearly their eagerness that the legislative part of the municipal machinery might be again put in motion, and busied themselves conferring with the different board members about the affairs of their respective departments. President Knowlton handled the perplexing questions of parliamentary ruling with characteristic dignity and coolness, and while some members were inclined to be facetious and others somewhat verbose, the meeting was of ordinary length, and as several aldermen evidently intended it should be, very entertaining.

In entering upon his duties as superintendent of the Newton schools, Mr. Albert B. Fildes has the earnest wish of all citizens for a most successful administration. Although having begun his new labors at the close of one of the bitterest controversies he was fortunate in having had as his predecessor, Mr. George I. Aldrich. If there is anything which testifies to Mr. Aldrich's marked ability it is the condition of the schools as they now stand. All through the summer Mr. Aldrich was active in planning for the re-opening of the schools, Sept. 11. He overlooked nothing. He consulted frequently with Mayor Wilson and the school committee, and, as a result of his untiring effort, Mr. Fildes has but to become acquainted with his new charges and safe to say everything will move smoothly.

While other cities are telling of the overcrowded conditions of their schools, Newton rejoices that everything is in good shape so far as accommodations for pupils are concerned. Of course the temporary arrangement for Bigelow school pupils, told of in the news columns, is an inconvenience, yet it appears to have been the cheapest plan that could have been adopted. Newton has always, and justly too, been proud of its schools if not of its school board.

The Boston & Albany has contracted with Mr. Whitney's coke company for 150 tons of coke per day. This will mean less smoke and cinders from the engines, and the public will be correspondingly pleased.

Death of Mrs. M. T. Goddard.

Mrs. Mary Thomas Goddard, widow of the late Thomas Austin Goddard, died last Saturday evening, at her residence on Waverley avenue, aged 83 years. She was a native of Charlestown, but had made her home in this city for upwards of thirty years. Her husband died in 1868 and at the time of his death was one of the most prosperous merchants in Boston. Mrs. Goddard was well known for her many charities and during her life had provided the means whereby many Newton young men were enabled to enter college. She was an active member of the Universalist church of Newtonville, where her philanthropy will be long remembered. She leaves hosts of people throughout the country whom she has helped with wise advice, and more substantial gifts when needed. Her large giving was done very systematically, and all her business was kept in perfect order, no slight task when the large amount of it is considered. She was constantly doing good, and doing it in a systematic manner. Her heart embraced all who were in need, and countless young people in Boston and elsewhere are indebted to her for their first start in life, and feel that they owe to her their present usefulness. She had no children of her own, but she was a sister of the late Richard Frothingham, a famous editor of the Boston Post, in its best days, who was also known for his careful historical work. The funeral services were held at her late residence on Waverley avenue, on Tuesday, and were attended by a large gathering of her Newton friends. Rev.

Coleman Adams, a former pastor of the Universalist church of Newtonville, officiated, and spoke feelingly of the long and faithful friendship he had enjoyed with the deceased. Rev. Mr. Blanchard of Portland also assisted in the services. At the chapel in the Mt. Auburn cemetery, another service was held, at the urgent request of her many Boston friends, who wished to pay the last sad tribute of respect to her memory. The interment was in the family lot at Mt. Auburn.

Funeral of Joseph E. Whitman.

The services in memory of Mr. Joseph E. Whitman of Vernon street, whose death occurred so suddenly in Boston last Tuesday, were held at his late residence, Thursday afternoon. There was a very large attendance of Newton friends, and representatives of commission and woolen houses of Boston and New York, with whom he had done business for many years, bankers of Boston, and brother merchants of Boston. Rev. Dr. Davis of the Elliot church, of which Mr. Whitman was a member, officiated, and the Apollo male quartet sang several selections. There was a great number of floral tributes, one from the Ancient Order of United Workmen, of which he was a member, and a large broken column of flowers from the tenants of the different buildings in Newton, in which the deceased was interested. One affecting thing was the large number of people of all classes who called during the morning to take leave of one who had been such a kind friend to them, and their tributes to his kindness and geniality were heartfelt. Mr. Whitman was born in Lopkinton in 1838, and came to Newton when he was 25 years old, and he has lived here ever since, with his step-father, Mr. N. P. Coburn, until his marriage to Miss Emma L. Stevens of Newton in 1879, since when he has resided on Vernon street. His building operations with his brother-in-law, Mr. R. C. Taylor of Worcester, has brought him in contact with a great number of people, and all unite in paying tribute to his kind and upright character, and feel his loss deeply. The interment was in the Newton cemetery.

MRS. GODDARD'S BEQUESTS.

TUFTS COLLEGE BENEFITS TO THE AMOUNT OF $60,000—OTHER UNIVERSALIST INSTITUTIONS REMEMBERED.

The will of Mrs. Mary T. Goddard of Newton was filed at the probate office in East Cambridge, yesterday. It leaves thousands in public bequests.

To Tufts College is given $60,000, and many other bequests are made to benefit the Universalist church. The will is dated May 30, 1899.

The second section, containing the Tufts College bequest, directs that the sum of $60,000 be paid to the trustees of the college by an assignment of a mortgage on the Universalist publishing house of Boston, and that this sum be held by the trustees as a permanent fund, one half of the income to be applied to the maintenance of the divinity school and the other half to the maintenance of the other department, called the college of letters, of said college, as the trustees direct.

The other public bequests are as follows: To Goddard seminary, Barre, Vt., $5000, the income only to be applied to its support.

To Westbrook seminary, Portland, Me., $5000, under the same conditions.

To Universalist general convention, incorporated under the laws of New York, $5000, to be invested, one half of the income to be applied especially to western and southern educational and missionary purposes, and the other half to general educational and missionary purposes.

To Massachusetts Universalist convention, $2000, the income to be applied to educational and missionary purposes.

The Universalist society of Newton, worshipping in Newtonville, $5000, the income to be used for the general purposes of the church.

To the Women's Centenary Association connected with the Universalist denomination $2000, the income to be used for its general purposes.

To the Women's Educational and Industrial Union, a note for $500, which the testatrix held.

To Tufts College, the book entitled, "Palaeographia Sacra Pictoria," by J. O. Westwood, and the book entitled, "Illuminated Illustrations from the Bible."

To Westbrook seminary, the crayon portrait of testatrix' husband.

To the Institutional church, 397 Shawmut avenue, Boston, known as "The Every Day Church," $1000 per year for 10 years for its philanthropic work, if it continues such work.

To the Bethany home, Boston, $500.

Thomas Frothingham and Benjamin T. Hall are named as executors.

The total amount of the definite money bequests, public and private, is in the vicinity of $140,000.

Frye-Harris.

The home of Mr. F. W. Harris of Attleboro was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday noon, when the only daughter of the house, Maude, was given in marriage to Mr. Edwin L. Frye of Newton. The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. J. Harry Holden, in the presence of relatives and immediate friends of the couple. The bride was charmingly dressed in a travelling gown. Mr. Willard H. Frye was best man and Miss Charlotte Frye was maid of honor. While Miss Mary Frye was flower girl. After the ceremony, lunch was served, and the time was passed in merriment until the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Frye upon their wedding tour through New York state and New Hampshire. Upon their return they will reside in Newton. The young couple were the recipients of many handsome presents. Mr. Edwin Frye is well known in Newton as the paymaster of the Benis mills and is very popular. He receives the hearty congratulations of his large circle of friends.

Gymnastics at Lasell.

Frequent application having been made by persons resident in the vicinity, for admission to the classes in Physical Training at Lasell Seminary, arrangements have been completed by which these requests can be granted. Classes, admitting women and children, will be formed Nov. 1st, to meet Tuesday and Friday, and will continue until about May 1st.

The Gymnasium is under the supervision of Miss Ransom, a graduate of Dr. Sargent's school for teachers at Cambridge, assisted by Miss Kate Adams, of Brookline, a graduate of the same. The system pursued is that known as "The Sargent System," and is based upon individual needs, as ascertained by thorough examination and tests of strength. According to these tests, exercises are carefully prescribed, adapted to strengthen what is weak, and to improve the personal bearing and carriage, as well as the health. "To develop courage and presence of mind, and ready command of the body's powers," is no less essential to women than to men, in the large freedom and responsibility given them in our country. And for whom is it more essential than for mothers that there should be a sound body, and so steady nerves and a sound mind? To this end Lasell Seminary furnishes advantages unexcelled by any girls' school in New England.

The hall is large, sunny, well ventilated, with open fire, and has dressing rooms, shower and swimming baths, and bowling alley attached. The appliances are ample, and were furnished under the direction of Dr. Sargent, of Cambridge. Danger from over-exertion is prevented by constant oversight.

Terms for the season, $20.00. Swimming Lessons each, $1.00. Those interested in swimming may send for a special circular. The use of the Bowling Alley is free to all pupils.

Application to be made to Miss Ransom, or C. C. BRAGDON, Principal.

THE CONVERSION

By ROBERT BARR.

(Copyright, 1899, by Robert Barr.)

In the ample, stone paved courtyard of the Schloss Grunewald, with its mysterious, bubbling spring in the center, stood the black baron beside his restive horse, both equally eager to be away. Round the baron were grouped his 16 knights and their saddled chargers, all waiting the word to mount. The warder was slowly opening the huge gates that hung between the two round entrance towers of the castle, for it was never the baron's custom to ride out at the head of his men until the great leaves of the strong gate fell full apart and showed the green landscape beyond. The baron did not propose to ride unthinkingly out and straightway fall into an ambush. He and his 16 knights were the terror of the countryside, and many there were who would have been glad to venture a bow shot at him had they dared. There seemed to be some delay about the opening of the gates and a great chattering of underlings at the entrance, as if something unusual had occurred, whereupon the rough voice of the baron roared out to know the cause that kept him waiting, and every one scattered, each to his one affair, leaving only the warder, who approached his master with fear on his face.

"My lord," he began, when the baron had shouted out what the devil ailed him, "there has been nailed against the outer gate, some time in the night, a parchment with characters written thereon."

"Then tear it down and bring it to me," cried the baron. "What's all this to do about a bit of parchment?"

The warder had been loath to meddle with it, fearing that witchcraft which he knew pertained to all written characters, but he feared the black baron's frown even more than the fiends who had undoubtedly nailed the document on the gate, for he knew no man in all that well cowed district would have the daring to approach the castle, even at night, much less meddle with the gate or any other of the belongings of the Baron von Grunewald; so, breathing a request to his patron saint (his neglect of whom he now remembered with remorse) for protection, he tore the document from its fastenings and brought it trembling to the baron. The knights crowded round as Von Grunewald held the parchment in his hand, bending his dark brows upon it, for it conveyed no meaning to him. Neither the baron nor his knights could read.

"It is from our holy father the pope."

"What foolery, think you, is this?" he said, turning to the knight nearest him. "A defiance?"

The knight shook his head. "I am no clerk," he answered. For a moment the baron was puzzled, then he quickly bethought himself of the one person in the castle who could read.

"Bring hither old Father Gottlieb," he commanded, and two of those waiting by ran in haste toward the scullery of the place, from which they presently emerged, dragging after them an old man, partly in the habit of a monk and partly in that of a scullion, who wiped his hands on the coarse apron that was tied around his waist as he was hurried forward. "Here, good father, excellent cook and humble servant, I trust your residence with us has not led you to forget the learning you put to such poor advantage in the monastery of Monnonstein. Canst thou construe this for us? Is it in good, honest German or bastard Latin?"

"It is in Latin," said the captive monk, glancing at it in the other's hand.

"Then translate it for us, and quickly," said the baron.

Father Gottlieb took the parchment handed to him by the baron, and as his eye scanned it more closely he bowed his head and made the sign of the cross upon his breast.

"Cease that mummering," roared the baron, "and read without more waiting, or the rods upon thy back again! Who sends us this?"

"It is from our holy father the pope," said the monk, forgetting his mental position for the moment and becoming once more the scholar of the monastery. The sense of his captivity faded from him as he realized that the long arm of the church had extended within the impregnable walls of that tyrannical castle.

"Good. And what has our holy father the pope to say to us? Demands as the release of our excellent scullion, Father Gottlieb?"

The bent shoulders of the old monk straightened, his dim eye brightened and his voice rang clear within the echoing walls of the castle courtyard.

"It is a ban of excommunication against thee, Lord Baron von Grunewald, and against all within these walls, excepting only those unlawfully withheld from freedom."

"Which means thyself, worthy father. Read on, good clerk, and let us hear it to the end."

As the monk read out the awful words of the message, piling curse on curse with sonorous voice, the baron saw his trembling servitors turn pale, and even his 16 knights, companions in robbery and rapine, fall away from him. Dark, red anger mounted to his temples. He raised his mailed hand and smote the reading monk flat across the month, felling the old man prone upon the stones of the court.

"That is my answer to our holy father the pope, and when thou swearest to deliver it to him as I have given it to thee the gates are open and the way clear for thy pilgrimage to Rome."

But the monk lay where he fell and made no reply.

"Take him away," commanded the baron impatiently, whereupon several of the menials laid hands on the falling monk and dragged him into the scullery he had left.

Turning to his men at arms the baron roared, "Well, my gentle wolves, have a few words in Latin on a bit of sheepskin turned you all to sheep?"

"I always said," spoke up the Knight Siegfried, "that no good came of captured monks or meddling with the church. Besides, we are noble all, and do not hold with the raising of a mailed hand against an unarmed man."

There was a low murmur of approval among the knights at Siegfried's boldness.

"Close the gates!" shouted the mad-dened baron. Every one flew at the word of command, and the great oaken hinges, studded with iron, slowly came together, shutting out the bit of landscape their opening had disclosed. The baron flung the reins on his charger's neck and smote the animal on the flank, causing it to trot at once to its stable.

"There will be no riding today," he said, his voice ominously lowering. The stablemen of the castle came forward and led away the horses. The 16 knights stood in a group together, with Siegfried at their head, waiting with some anxiety on their brows for the next move in the game. The baron, his drawn sword in his hand, strode up and down before them, his brow bent on the ground, evidently struggling to get the master hand over his own anger. If it came to blows, the odds were against him, and he was too shrewd a man to break himself on a 16 to 1 contest.

At length the baron stopped in his walk and looked at the group. He said after a pause in a quiet tone of voice, "Siegfried, if you doubt my courage because I strike to the ground a rascally monk step forward, draw thine own good sword, our comrades will see that all is fair 'twixt us, and in this manner you may learn that I fear neither mailed nor unarmed hand."

But the knight made no motion to lay his hand upon his sword, nor did he move from his place.

"No one doubts your courage, my lord," he said, "neither is it any reflection on mine that in answer to your challenge my sword remain in its scabbard. You are our overlord, and it is not meet that our weapons should be raised against you."

"I am glad that point is firmly fixed in your minds. I thought a moment since that I would be compelled to uphold the feudal law at the peril of my own body. But if that comes not in question, no more need be said. Touching the unarmed, Siegfried, if I remember aright, you showed no such squeamishness at our sacking of the Convent of St. Agnes."

"A woman is a different matter, my lord," said Siegfried uneasily.

The baron laughed, and so did some of the knights, evidently relieved to find the tension of the situation relaxing.

"Comrades!" cried the baron, his face aglow with enthusiasm, all traces of his former temper vanishing from his brow. "You are excellent in a melee, but useless at the council board. You see no further ahead of you than your good right arms will strike. Look round you at these stout walls. No engine that man has yet devised can batter a breach in them. In our vaults are ten years' supply of stolen grain. Our cellars are full of rich red wine, not of our vintage, but for our drinking. Here in our court bubbles forever this good spring, excellent to drink when wine gives out, and medicinal in the morning, when too much wine has been taken in." He waved his hand toward the living, overflowing well, charged with carbonic acid gas, one of the many that have since made the region of the Rhine famous. "Now I ask you, can this castle of Grunewald ever be taken, excommunication or no excommunication?"

A simultaneous shout of "No, never!" arose from the knights.

The baron stood looking grimly at them for several moments. Then he said in a quiet voice, "Yes, the castle of Grunewald can be taken. Not from without, but from within. If any crafty enemy can sow dissension among us, can turn the sword of comrade against comrade, then falls the castle of Grunewald. Today we have seen how nearly that has been done. We have now against us in the monastery of Monnonstein no fat-headed abbot, but one who was a warrior before he turned monk."

"But a few years since that the Abbot Ambrose stood at the right hand of the emperor as Baron von Stern, and it is known that the abbot's robes are but a thin vesture over the iron knight within. His hand, grasping the cross, still itches for the sword."

The fighting archbishop of Traves had sent him to Monnonstein for no other purpose than to leave behind him the ruins of Grunewald, and his first bolt has shot straight into our courtyard, and for a moment I stood alone, without a single man at arms to second me."

The knights looked at one another in silence, then cast their eyes to the stone paved court, all too shamefaced to attempt reply to what all knew was the truth. The baron, a deep frown on his brow, gazed sternly at the chafal group.

"Such was the effect of the first shaft shot by good Abbot Ambrose. What will be the result of the second?"

"There will be no second," said Siegfried, stepping forward. "We must sack the monastery and hang the abbot and his craven monks in their own cords."

"Good!" cried the baron, nodding his head in approval. "The worthy abbot, however, trusts not only in God, but in walls three cloth yards thick. The monastery stands by the river and partly over it. The besieged monks will therefore not suffer from thirst. Their larder is as amply provided as are the vaults of this castle. The militant abbot understands both defense and sortie. He is a master of siegecraft inside or outside stone walls. How, then, do you propose to sack and hang, good Siegfried?"

The knights were silent. They knew the monastery was as impregnable as the castle—in fact, it was the only spot for miles around that had never owned the sway of Baron von Grunewald, and none of them were well enough provided with brains to venture a plan for its successful reduction. A cynical smile played round the lips of their overlord as he saw the problem had overmatched them. At last he spoke:

"We must meet craft with craft. If the pope's ban cast such terror among my good knights, steeped to the gauds in blood, what effect, think you, will it have over the minds of devout believers in the church and its power? The trustful monks know that it has been launched against us; therefore are they doubtless waiting for us to come to the monastery and lay our necks under the feet of their abbot, begging his clemency. They are ready to believe any story we care to tell as to the influence of such scribbling over us. You, Siegfried, owe me some reparation for this morning's temporary defection, and to you I therefore do I trust the carrying out of my plans."

"There was always something of the monk about you, Siegfried, and you will yet end your days sanctimoniously in a monastery unless you are first hanged at Traves or knocked in the head during an assault. Draw, then, your longest face and think of the time when you will be a monk, as Ambrose is, who in his time drew as much blood as ever you have done. Go to the monastery of Monnonstein in most dejected fashion and unarmed. Ask in faltering tones speech of the abbot and say to him as if he knew naught of it that the pope's ban is on us. Say that at first I defied it and smote down the good father who was reading it, but add that as the pious man fell a sickness like unto a pestilence came over me and over my men, from which you only are free, caused, you suspect, by your loud protesting against the felling of the monk. Say that we lie at death's door, grieving for our sins and groaning for absolution. Say that we are ready to deliver up the castle and all its contents to the care of the holy church so that the abbot but sees our tortured souls safely directed toward the gates of paradise. Insist that all the monks come, saying that you fear we have but few moments to live and that the abbot alone would be as helpless as one surgeon on a battlefield. Taunt them with fear of the pestilence if they hesitate, and that will bring them."

Siegfried accepted the commission, and the knights warmly expressed their admiration of their master's genius. As the great red sun began to sink behind the westward hills that border the Rhine Siegfried departed on horseback through the castle gates and journeyed toward the monastery with bowed head and dejected mien. The gates remained open, and as darkness fell a lighted torch was thrust in a wrought iron receptacle near the entrance, at the outside, throwing a fitful, flickering glare near the archway and into the deserted court. Within all was silent as the ruined castle is today, save only the tinkling sound of the clear waters of the effervescent spring as it flowed over the stones and trickled down to disappear under the walls at one corner of the courtyard. The baron and his sturdy knights sat in the darkness, with growing impatience, in the great Ritter-saale listening for any audible token of the return of Siegfried and his ghostly company. At last in the still night air there came faintly across the plain a monkish chant, growing louder and louder, until finally the steel shod hoofs of Siegfried's charger rang on the stones of the caseway leading to the castle gates. Pressed close behind the two heavy open leaves of the gates stood the warder and his assistants, scarcely breathing, ready to close the gates sharply the moment the last monk had entered.

Still chanting, led by the abbot in his robes of office, the monks slowly marched into the deserted courtyard, while Siegfried reined his horse close inside the entrance.

"Peace be upon this house and all within," said the deep voice of the abbot, and in unison the monks murmured "Amen!" the word echoing back to them in the stillness from the four gray walls.

Then the silence was rudely broken by the ponderous clang of the closing gates and the ominous rattle of bolts being thrust into their places and the jingle of heavy chains. Down the wide stairs from the Ritter-saale came the clank of armor and rude shouts of laughter. Newly lighted torches flared up here and there, illuminating the courtyard and showing, dangling against the northern wall, a score of ropes, with nooses at the end of each. Into the courtyard clattered the baron and his followers. The abbot stood, with arms folded, pressing a gilded cross against his breast. He was a head taller than any of his frightened, cowering brethren, and his noble, emaciated face was thin with fasting, caused by his never ending conflict with the world that was within himself. His pale countenance betokened his office and the church. But the angry, eagle flash of his piercing eye spoke of the world alone and the field of conflict. The baron bowed low to the abbot and said: "Welcome, my lord abbot, to my humble domicile. It has long been the wish of my enemies to stand within its walls, and this pleasure is now granted you. There is little to be made of it from without."

"Baron Grunewald," said the abbot, "I and my brethren are come hither on an errand of mercy and under the protection of your knightly word." The baron raised his eyebrows in surprise at this, and, turning to Siegfried, he said in angry tones:

"Is it so? Pledged you my word for the safety of these men?"

"The reverend abbot is mistaken," replied the knight, who had not yet descended from his horse. "There was no word of safe conduct between us."

"Safe conduct is implied when an officer of the church is summoned to administer its consolations to the dying," said the abbot.

"All trades," remarked the baron snubly, "have their dangers, yours among the rest, as well as ours. If my follower had pledged my word regarding your safety, I would now open the gates and let you free. As he has not done so, I shall choose a manner for your exit more in keeping with your lofty aspirations."

Saying this, he gave some rapid orders. His servitors fell upon the unresisting monks and bound them hand and foot. They were then conducted to the northern wall and the nooses there adjusted round the neck of each. When this was done, the baron stood back from the pined victims and addressed them:

"It is not my intention that you should die without having time to repent of the many wicked deeds you have doubtless done during your lives. Your sentence is that ye be hanged at cock row tomorrow, which was the hour when, if your teachings cling to my memory, the first of your craft turned traitor to his master. If, however, you tire of your all night vigil, you can at once obtain release by crying at the top of your voices, 'So die all Christians!' Thus you will hang yourselves and remove some responsibility from my perhaps overladen conscience. The hanging is a device of my own, of which I am perhaps pardonably proud, and it pleases me that it is to be first tried on so worthy an assemblage. With much labor we have elevated to the battlements an oaken tree lopped of its branches, which will not burn the less brightly next winter in that it has helped to commit some of you to hotter flames in all ye say be true. The ropes are tied to this log, and at the cry, 'So die all Christians!' I have some stout knaves in waiting up above with levers who will straightway fling the log over the battlements on which it is now poised, and the instant after your broken necks will impinge against the inner coping of the northern wall. And now, good night, my lord abbot, and a happy release for you all in the morning."

"Baron von Grunewald, I ask of you that you will release one of us, who may thus administer the rites of the church to his brethren and receive in turn the same from me."

"Now, out upon me for a careless knave!" cried the baron. "I had forgotten that it is so long since I have been to mass and suchlike ceremonies myself. Your request is surely most reasonable, and I like you the better that you keep up the face of your calling to the very end. But think not that I am so inhospitable as to force one guest to wait upon another, even in matters spiritual. Not so. We keep with us a ghostly father for such occasions and use him between times to wait on us with wine and other necessaries. As soon as he has filled our flagons I will ask good Father Gottlieb to wait upon you, and I doubt not he will shrive with any in the land, although he has been this while back somewhat out of practice. His habit is rather tattered and stained with the drippings of his new calling, but I warrant you you will know the sheep, even though his fleece be torn. And now again good night, my lord."

The baron and his knight returned up the broad stairway that led to the Ritter-saale. Most of the torches were carried with them. The defenses of the castle were so strong that no particular pains were taken to make all secure further than the stationing of an armed guard under the archway, and here the guard paced back and forth. The courtyard was in darkness, but the tops of the highest turrets were silvered by the rising moon. The doomed men stood, with the halbers at their necks, as silent as a row of specters.

The tall windows of the Ritter-saale being of colored glass threw little light into the square, although they glowed with a rainbow splendor from the torches within. Into the silence of the square came the sound of song and the clash of flagons upon the oaken table.

At last there came down the broad stair and out into the court a figure in the habit of a monk, who hurried shufflingly across the stones to the grim row of brown robed men. He threw himself sobbing at the feet of the tall abbot.

"Rise, my son, and embrace me," said his superior.

When Father Gottlieb did so, the other whispered in his ear.

"There is a time to weep and a time for action. Now is the time for action. Unloose quickly the bonds around me and slip this noose from my neck."

Father Gottlieb acquiesced himself of his task as well as his agitation and his trembling hands would let him.

"Perform a like service for each of the others," whispered the abbot curtly. "Tell each in a low voice to remain standing just as if he were still bound. Then return to me."

When the monk had done what he was told, he returned to his superior.

"Have you access to the wine cellar?" asked the abbot.

"Yes, father."

"What are the strongest wines?"

"Those of the district are strong. Then there is a barrel or two of the red wine of Assmannshausen."

"Decant a half of each in your flagons. Is there brandy?"

"Yes, father."

"Then mix with the two wines as much brandy as you think their already drunken palates will not detect. Make the potation stronger with brandy as the night wears on. When they drop off into their drunken sleep, bring a flagon to the guard at the gate and tell him the baron sends it to him."

"Will you absolve me, father, for the?"

"It is no falsehood, Gottlieb. I, the baron, send it. I came hither the Abbot Ambrose. I am now Baron von Stern, and if I have any influence with our mother church the abbot's robe shall fall on thy shoulders if you but do what I ask of you tonight. It will be some compensation for what I fear thou hast already suffered."

Gottlieb hurried away as the knights were already clamoring for more wine. As the night wore on and the moon rose higher the sounds of revelry increased, and once there was a clash of arms and much uproar, which subsided under the overmastering voice of the black baron. At last the abbot, standing there with the rope dangling behind him, saw Gottlieb bring a huge beaker of liquor to the sentinel, who at once sat down on the stone bench under the arch to enjoy it.

Finally all riot died away in the hall except one thin voice, singing waveringly a drinking song, and when that ceased silence reigned supreme, and the moon shone full upon the bubbling spring.

Gottlieb stole silently out and told the abbot that all the knights were stretched upon the floor and the baron had his head on the table beside his overturned flagon. The sentinel snored upon his stone bench.

"I can now unbar the gate," said Father Gottlieb, "and we may all escape."

"Not so," replied the abbot. "We come here to convert these men to Christianity, and our task is still to do."

The monks all seemed frightened at this and wished themselves once more within the monastery, able to say, "All's well that ends so." But none ventured to offer counsel to the giant man who led them. He bade each bring with him the cords that had bound him, and without a word they followed him into the Ritter-saale and there tied up the knights and their master as they themselves had been tied.

"Carry them out," commanded the abbot, "and lay them in a row, their feet toward the spring and their heads under the ropes. And go you, Gottlieb, who know the ways of the castle, and fasten the doors of all the apartments where the servitors are sleeping."

When this was done and they gathered once more in the moonlit courtyard, the abbot took off his robes of office and handed them to Father Gottlieb, saying significantly, "The lowest among you that suffer and are true shall be exalted." Turning to his own flock, he commanded them to go in and have some rest after such a disquieting night; then to Gottlieb, when the monks had obediently departed, "Bring me, and you know where to find such, the apparel of a fighting man and a sword."

Thus arrayed, he dismissed the old man, and alone in the silence, with the row of figures, like effigies on a tomb, beside him, paced up and down through the night as the moon dropped lower and lower in the heavens. There was a period of dark before the dawn, and at last the upper walls began to whiten with the coming day, and the black baron moaned uneasily in his drunken sleep. The abbot paused in his walk and looked down upon them, and Gottlieb stole out from the shadow of the door and asked if he could be of service. He had evidently not slept, but had watched his chief until he paused in his march.

"Tell our brothers to come out and see the justice of the Lord."

When the monks trooped out, haggard and wan, in the pure light of the dawn, the abbot asked Gottlieb to get a flagon and dash water from the spring in the faces of the sleepers.

The black baron was the first to come to his senses and realize dimly, but afterward more acutely, the changed condition of affairs. His eye wandered apprehensively to the empty noose swaying slightly in the morning breeze above him. He then saw that the tall ascetic man before him had doffed the abbot's robes and wore a sword by his side, and from this he guessed ill. At the command of the abbot the monks raised each prostrate man and placed him against the north wall.

"Gottlieb," said the abbot slowly, "the last office that will be required of you. You took from our necks the nooses last night. Place them, I pray you, on the necks of the baron and his followers."

The old man, trembling, adjusted the ropes.

"My lord abbot," began the baron. "Baron von Grunewald," interrupted the person addressed, "the Abbot Ambrose is dead. He was foully assassinated last night. In his place stands Conrad von Stern, who answers for his deeds to the emperor and after him to God."

"Is it your purpose to hang me, baron?"

"Was it your purpose to have hanged us, my lord?"

"I swear to heaven it was not. 'Twas but an ill timed pleasantry. Had I wished to hang you, I would have done so last night."

"That seems plausible."

The knights all swore, with many round oaths, that their overlord spoke the truth and nothing was further from their intentions than execution. The abbot glanced down along the line, but his face was inscrutable. They could read there neither mercy nor justice.

"At last he spoke."

"Whether you hang or no shall depend upon yourselves."

"By God, then," cried the baron, "and I have ought to say on the point, I shall hang some other day!"

"Will you, then, baron, beg admittance to mother church, whose kindly tenants you have so outraged?"

"We will. We do," cried the baron fervently, whispering through his clinched teeth to Siegfried, who stood next to him, "Wait till I have the upper hand again." Fortunately the abbot did not hear the whisper. The knights all echoed aloud the baron's pious first remark, and perhaps in their hearts said "Amen!" to his second.

The abbot spoke a word or two to the monks, and they advanced to the pined men and there performed the rite sacred to their calling and to the serious situation of the penitents. As the good brothers stood back, they begged the abbot for mercy to be extended toward the new converts, but the sphinxlike face of their leader gave no indication as to their fate, and the good men began to fear that it was the abbot's intention to hang the baron and his knights.

"Now—brothers," said the abbot, with a long pause before he spoke the second word, whereupon each of the prisoners heaved a sigh of relief. "I said your fate would depend on yourselves and on your good intentions."

They all vociferously proclaimed that their intentions were and had been of the most honorable kind.

"I trust that is true and that you shall live long to show your faith by your works. It is written that a man digged a pit for his enemy and fell himself therein. It is also written that as a man sows so shall he reap. If you meant us no harm, then your signal shouted to the battlements will do you no harm."

"For God's sake, my lord," screamed the baron, while all his followers groaned aloud. The abbot, unheeding, raised his face toward the northern wall and shouted at the top of his voice, "So die such Christians!" varying the phrase by one word. A simultaneous scream rose from the doomed men, cut short as by a knife as the huge log was hurled over the outer parapet, and the 17 victims were jerked into the air and throttled at the coping that ran around the inner wall. The good monks groaned and fell upon their knees.

Thus did the Abbot Ambrose save the souls of Baron von Grunewald and his men at some expense to their necks.

The Dogs of Constantinople.

I never saw so much mud, such unspeakably filthy streets and so many dogs as Constantinople can boast, but nowhere have I seen them described in a satisfactory way—so that you knew what to expect, I mean. In the first place, they hardly look like dogs. They have woolly tails like sheep. Their eyes are dull, sleepy and utterly devoid of expression. Constantinople dogs have neither masters nor brains. Nobody wants to adopt an idiot. They are of course mongrels of the most hopeless type. They are yellowish, with thick, short, woolly coats, and much fatter than you expect to find them.

They walk like a funeral procession. Never have I seen one frisk or ever wag his tail. Everybody turns out for them. They sleep—from 12 to 20 of them—on a single pile of garbage and never notice either men or each other unless a dog which lives in the next street trespasses. Then they eat him up, for they are jackals as well as dogs, and they are no more epicures than ostriches.—Lillian Bell in Woman's Home Companion.

USELESS.

It is useless to mourn for the leaves that have fallen,
It is idle to grieve over the pall covered bier—
For the promises spoken,
The vows that were broken,
And the words of forgiveness we never can hear.

It is useless to mourn for the roses on summer
When the rude blasts of winter sweep over the plain,
But the gleam and the glint
Of autumn and winter
Will be followed by summer again and again.

So let not the soul be overwhelmed by the shadow
That darkness forever casts on the dream;
Though our highest ambition
Never reaches fruition,
Our failures may not prove so great as they seem.

Go, say to the heart that is burdened with trouble,
And say to the soul that is down trodden now,
Though each joy has a sorrow,
So each night has a morn,
And the covered crown may yet circle thy brow.

BOSTON IN ITS INFANCY.

Even in Swaddling Clothes It Was Bigger Than Its Neighbors.

Physically the Boston of 1804 really deserved the name which The Hague bears today. They say that The Hague is "the largest village in Europe;" Boston was the largest village in New England. The great railway system was in its infancy. The town kept up its communication with the rest of the world by a capillary organized system of sailing packets, sloops and schooners, which connected it with Halifax, Bangor and Portland on the northeast, with Hartford, New York and Baltimore, Richmond and Albany on the west and south.

For New England this side of Connecticut river and Kennebec river great wagons drawn by fine teams of horses brought down the scanty produce of the farms, or the potato, and even fur, from the woods. The teamsters, who remind one of the captains of caravans in the east, came to anchor in certain large sheds on the "neck" which united old Boston to the mainland. They poured out their corn for their horses to eat, and for themselves, in an "hourly" stage, rode into the business part of the town to inquire of their consignees where the pots of butter or the boxes of potato were to be delivered.

The millionaire of the day, after his 2 o'clock dinner, walked out to the back of his house and smoked his cigar under a pear tree in his own garden. If his wife thought she would like to go to ride in the afternoon, he sent to a great wooden stable in the neighborhood, which, with its appurtenances, covered perhaps acres of the land of the little peninsula, for his carriage and his horses. Every house was supplied with its water by pumps, which drew from wells varying in depth from 20 to 50 feet a brackish liquid, whose salty taste was really preferred by the genuine Bostonian to that of the simpler water of the country.

Almost all the streets were paved. The larger streets were gradually accustomed themselves to sidewalks. They were, as they are, narrow. They followed in general the lines of the hills or of the shores and were not laid out on any mathematical plan; so much the better for them. The people who lived here, in many cases, had moved into Boston from the country towns of New England. They had enjoyed on the whole, since the establishment of the federal constitution, 50 years of great prosperity.—E. S. Hale in Philadelphia Post.

Ingenuity of the Tahitians.

The Tahitians are said to be the people most serviceable to the traveler. They seem, in fact, to command at all times the principal conveniences of life. Half an hour of daylight is sufficient for building a house of the stems and leaves of the feli banana, and fire is produced by rubbing sticks.

If the running water is deeply sunk among stones by working in banana leaves, they bring it to the surface. The chase of eels, which in those dripping mountains become almost amphibious, offers another instance of their ingenuity.

They tear off with their teeth the fibrous bark of "nuran" (Hibiscus tiliaceus) and a moment after apply it to noosing small fish.

If one is sent for fruit, he will usually make a basket on the way by plaiting the segments of a coconut leaf. A mat will be manufactured with almost equal ease. Clothing is always at hand, and a banana leaf serves for an umbrella. Tumblers and bottles are supplied by single joints of the bamboo, and casks or buckets by the long stems, and whether you ask for a hatchet, knife, spoon, toothbrush or wash basin, the guides will never be found at a loss.

Haggis as the Scotch Make It.

To make haggis, take the heart, tongue and small liver of the sheep, one pound of bacon, four ounces of crumbs of bread, the rind of one lemon, two eggs, two anchovies (sardines may be used), a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper and two teaspoonfuls of salt. Chop the heart, tongue, liver and bacon; mix thoroughly; add the bread crumbs, the anchovies, chopped fine, the lemon rind, grated, then the pepper and salt. Beat the eggs and pour them over. Pack this into a kettle or mold, cover and boil or steam continuously for two hours. Turn it on a dish and serve very hot.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Sorry He Spoke.

The driver of a prison van was hailed by a would be wag:
"Got any room inside, Robert?"
"There's room for one," replied the driver; "we keep it for you."
Not entirely disconcerted, the would be wag had another shot.
"What's your fare?" he asked.
"Bread and water, same as you had before," said the driver.—London Fun.

"Eh, Philbrick, just heard from your wife?"
"Yes."
"Well, what are you looking so sour about? Is she coming home?"
"No; it's the way she ends her letter. Listen, 'From your loving wife, dear, and don't forget to wash the dog!'"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"Generally," said the corned philosopher, "when a man of mature age begins to be worried about his soul there is something wrong with his body."—Indianapolis Journal.

SHE SAVED HER HAT.

And Learned a Thing or Two About Umbrellas as Well.

There was a woman down town the other day who wanted, above all things, an umbrella. To buy an umbrella is an easy thing, but there never was a woman who would not feel that it was a wicked waste of good money to buy an umbrella when she did not need it and when there were a thousand other things for which she would like to spend her money.

"This woman had both a good sun umbrella and a rain umbrella, hence it was to fly in the face of Providence to get another one of either kind. Still she had an errand to run, she could not go home, and she had on a brand new hat, and it certainly looked as if it was going to rain. Then she settled herself down to think. There is nothing much one cannot do when it has to be done and a little brain work is put to the matter in hand.

"I have it," she said at last. "I shall go to an umbrella shop and ask them to let me hire an umbrella for the day."

"Have you the nerve?" queried the diffident "certainly," answered the woman firmly, her thoughts intent on the need of protection for that new hat. But she did not feel altogether as confident as she seemed.

"Could you?"—she began at the umbrella shop—"I mean I have come on a rather strange errand—I that is—have you got any old umbrellas that I could hire to go up town?" she burst out finally feeling as if she had been caught sneaking sheep and rumbling for a card.

The clerk took it all quite as a matter of course. "We have no umbrellas to let," he said politely, "but if you go into the hotel next door they have them to let there."

"Certainly," said the man in the hotel. "You put down $1.25, and when you bring the umbrella back the dollar is returned. This is not a new business. We have been doing it for 20 years."

"Certainly," repeated the man at home. "They have umbrellas at many of the hotels. It is a side issue, a business carried on by the porter often, I think. It is particularly for the benefit of commercial travelers, I imagine."

Then the woman drew a long breath to think of the many things in the world she had yet to learn, but she blessed that faculty in her which the man had called "instinct" which had tempted her to do something unusual to save her money and her hat as well.—New York Times.

Makes You See Spooks.

Night workers of the literary guild of not strong nerves should take warning by the confession of Mrs. W. K. Clifford, the well known novelist, and forsake the "midnight oil." An article in the Windsor Magazine by Miss Dickens tells something of Mrs. Clifford's habits as a writer. Her mind works the best in the evening, but just as soon as the family are in bed and the house quiet Mrs. Clifford begins to hear burglars at work and gets so frightened she can hardly creep up to bed.

"She one time spoke of this to Mr. Huxley. 'It is foolish,' she said, 'but I always hear burglars moving about.' 'So do I,' answered Huxley. 'When I am working at night, I not only hear burglars moving about, but I actually see them looking through the crack in the door at me!'"

Wilkie Collins was an habitual night worker until he was frightened out of it by the appearance of another Wilkie Collins, who sat down at the table with him and tried to monopolize the desk. There was a struggle, and the instant was upset. When the real Wilkie Collins came to himself, sure enough, the ink was running over the writing table, proof enough of a struggle. After that Mr. Collins gave up night work.

Chinese Indifference to Pain.

"A very curious thing about the Chinese is their indifference to pain," said Dr. E. Z. Simmons, the veteran missionary of Canton. "We do a great deal of surgical work in the great City Hospital conducted by the united missions at Canton, and it was at first supposed that there would be great trouble in persuading the natives to take anesthetics, but the doctors found to their surprise that anesthetics were rarely needed and that their patients endured the most serious operations without flinching the fraction of an inch."

"The average Chinaman will assume the required position and hold it like a statue. When the knife touches his flesh, he begins a slight, monotonous moan and keeps it up until the ordeal is over, but he gives no other indication of pain. Whether this is due to nerve bluntness or stoicism or a combination of both, I have never been able to determine, but the fact remains that the Canton hospital uses less chloroform or ether than any other large institution of the kind on earth."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Flies of Egypt.

The flies of Egypt deserve a tribute to their peculiar qualities. A plague of American flies would be a luxury compared to the visit of one fly from Egypt. For untold centuries they have been in the habit of crawling over thick skinned faces and bodies and not being dislodged. They can stay all day if they like. Consequently, if they were an American fly, they light on it and, not content with that, try to crawl in. You attempt to brush them off, but they only move around to the other side, until you are made with nervousness from their sticky feet. If they find out your ear, they crawl in and walk around. You cannot discourage them. They craze you with their infuriating persistence. If I had been the Egyptians, the Israelites would have been escorted out of the country in state at the arrival of the first fly.—Lillian Bell in Woman's Home Companion.

His Translation.

A good chairman story comes from the Antipodes. A dignified elder of a church was presiding at a charitable concert. A Miss Brown was to sing "Ora Pro Nobis," but at the last moment she changed her mind, and a note was passed to the chairman intimating that she would give "The Song That Reached My Heart."

He therefore made the following announcement, "Miss Brown will now sing 'Ora Pro Nobis,' which, being translated, means 'The Song That Reached My Heart.'"—London Chronicle.

SHE WANTED A TIME TABLE.

But the Policeman Thought She Had Another Scheme In View.

The big policeman at the foot of the stairway leading from the street to the Reading railroad's Spring Garden Street station had just finished telling that a guardian of the peace had more things to attend to in the line of his official duties than appeared on the surface when a good looking young woman, pushing a baby carriage, in which was seated an infant of perhaps 8 or 10 months, approached him.

"Would you mind seeing that no one bothers the baby while I run up to the station?" she asked.

The officer's face took on a stern expression. "What do you want to go up to the station for?" he questioned severely. "To see the trains go by?"

"Oh, no," was the reply. "I just want a time table."

"Humph!" responded the bluecoat. "I'll go up and get the time table for you. Just wait and see that no one bothers the baby yourself."

But the young woman was half way up the steps by this time, and there was nothing for the policeman to do but stand by the baby carriage until she returned. She was gone a little longer, apparently, than she should have been just to obtain a time table, and the officer's anxiety increased with each passing moment. Finally, however, she came tripping down the steps.

"Thank you very much," she exclaimed sweetly to the policeman, preparing to push the baby carriage up the street. "I suppose you were afraid that I was going to get aboard a train and leave the baby on your hands, weren't you?"

The bluecoat muttered something to the effect that he never had any such thought, and the young woman departed. "She was right, though, in thinking that you were afraid she was going to desert the infant," I said. "Come, now, open up. Wasn't she?"

The policeman grinned an expansive grin. "Well," he finally answered, "there is a good deal of that sort of thing going on, you know, and we can't be too careful. Remember what I was telling you about the multiplicity of a policeman's duties, don't you?"

With which query he strolled on down the street, swinging his club and softly whistling a bar of "Pack Your Trunk and Go."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

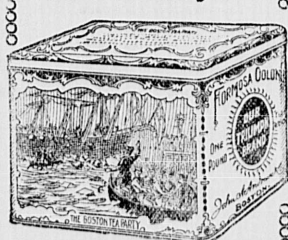

A Telltale Collision.

A well dressed, middle aged woman was walking past the Seventh Avenue hotel, with coat thrown carelessly over her arm. A boy, with a basket, whose gaze was everywhere but the direction in which his feet were going, was approaching. The boy and heavy basket collided with the woman and the cat. They rebounded with the force of the impact, and the crash of breaking glass rang out. The spectators of the collision saw a broken bottle on the pavement and the pungent flavor of "Old Bourbon" assailed their nostrils. The woman walked forward rapidly, her face aflame, while the fiendish boy danced on the curbstone and shouted: "Come back and get your whisky. There's some left in the bottle."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

His Last Place.

The Manager—How came you to leave your last place?
Applicant—I was discharged for good behavior, sir.
The Manager—Discharged for good behavior? That's unusual, isn't it?
Applicant—Well, you see, good conduct took nine months off my sentence.

ONLY ONE, JOHNSON'S

The answer to that old query "What's in a name?" was not hard to define in the case of one justly celebrated Family Remedy that had its origin away down in the State of Maine, but which is now made in Boston. An old lady called at a store and asked for a bottle of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment; the clerk said "they were out, but could supply her with another just as good." The engaging smile that accompanied this information was frozen stiff when she replied:

"Young Man, there is only one Liniment, and that is Johnson's."

Originated in 1816 by an old Family Physician. There is not a remedy in use which has the confidence of the public to a greater extent. Could a remedy have existed for nearly a century, except for gross extraneous matter? It is a fact. Any other, superior to all others. See, read, and use. Our book on Infants and Children. Norumbega Park.

Norumbega Park celebrates with a grand alien week, commencing the coming Monday, September 18, and the closing day will be Sunday, Sept. 24. This brings to an end the third season at this popular resort. Manager Alberte, who has so admirably conducted affairs there, may now have the deep satisfaction of knowing that his policy in the matter of entertainment and amusements, and his strict ideas about the maintenance of perfect order, have been productive of the biggest season the Park has had by several tens of thousands of people and by several thousands in dollars. The management wishes to extend to all who have so generously shown their approval by their liberal support of wholesome and polite out door, its heartiest appreciation, and announces that it will all the more spur them on to do even better things for the public at the same price and at the same old stand another season.

The many popular features that have characterized the place as so attractive all the present season will continue to the end, while in the Rialto Theatre the stage performances will be given by the strongest vaudeville organization yet to be seen there. It is the Boston Comedy Company and includes such sparklers as: the Zara Trio, representing the soldiers and peasants of all nations; The 3 Buffons, European grotesque dancers; The Simpsons, refined instrumentalists; Mathien, the famous juggler; McLean and Hall, in most fascinating dances; and The Aberts, astounding equilibrists, and performers on the perilous break away ladders.

PROBATE COURT.

To the heirs-at-law, next of kin, and all other persons interested in the estate of Martha A. Hanson, late of Newton, in said County, deceased.

WHEREAS, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court for probate, by Mary I. Waterhouse, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to her, the executrix therein named, without giving a surety on her official bond.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Cambridge, in said County of Middlesex, on the third day of October, A. D. 1899, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Newton Graphic, a newspaper published in Newton, the last publication to be on one day, at least, before said Court, and by mailing, post-paid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate, seven days at least before said Court.

Witness, Charles J. McIntire, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this thirtieth day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine.

S. H. FOLSOM, Register.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the subscriber has been duly appointed administrator of the estate of Walter D. Eaton, late of Newton in the County of Middlesex, deceased, intestate, and has taken upon himself that trust by giving bond, as the law directs. All persons having demands upon the estate of said deceased are required to exhibit the same; and all persons indebted to said estate are called upon to make payment to.

HOLLIS B. HILL, Administrator.

I see that the price of diamonds is going up," said the young man who likes to give information.

"Of course," answered Mr. Blykins, in a tone of mingled grief and defiance. "It was to be expected. It's one combination after another these days. You didn't suppose those coal barons were going to leave any carbon around loose where people might buy it and use it as a substitute, did you?"—Washington Star.

Gilback: "I am surprised, colonel, at your time of life, that you should have any trouble in managing your wife. All you have to do is to let her think she is having her own way." Colonel Qualler: "Yes, but the only trouble is that everybody else thinks so, too."—Brooklyn Life.

—Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Capelle (nee Sanborn) of Jefferson street, were most agreeably surprised by a party of several dozen of their friends of the Immanuel Baptist church, at the residence of Mrs. Florence Butterfield as spokesman, presented them with several pieces of table silver as a token of their love and esteem. An enjoyable evening was spent with games and refreshments.

—Dr. James Rosedale, (Wad-El Ward,) will deliver his lecture, "Compliments and Realities of Eastern Life," at the men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A., next Sunday afternoon at 8 o'clock. Dr. Rosedale is a native of Mount Zion, Jerusalem, Palestine, a Kabe of the tribe of Levi, and has given his lectures in nearly all the large cities and towns in the United States as well as in Canada, England, and Germany. Dr. Rosedale being a native of Jerusalem, is well qualified to portray the customs and manners of his countrymen, and all who have heard him, many of whom have visited his country, agree that his lectures so far, are a benefit to the Bible student, as he is continually explaining some obscure passage of Scripture. He has also been the manager of both private and national expeditions through Egypt, upper and lower, Sinai, Arabia, Petra, Palestine, Moab, the Hauran, Syria, through the desert of Tadmor, up the Euphrates to Nineveh, Babylon and Persia. In disguise as a Mohammedan, he visited Mecca and Medina, and having travelled throughout the whole of Europe has had a good opportunity to study anthropology as well as cosmology.

Contract for New Bigelow School Awarded

Yesterday Mayor Wilson awarded the contract for the construction of the new Bigelow school, exclusive of the heating, plumbing and ventilating, to H. P. Cummings & Co. of Ware, Mass., whose bid for buff brick was $75,410, the lowest offered. It was at first thought that the new building would be built of red brick but a final decision was reached yesterday with the above result. The old building will be removed by the successful contractor as its disposition, without cost to the city, is one of the terms of the contract.

Building Permits.

The following permits for new buildings have been issued since the first of September, and the number shows that there is a good deal of activity, in spite of the high prices of building material:

A. J. Wellington, owner, E. B. Homer, architect. 2 story brick dwelling, 5036, Church street, Ward 7. Steam heat. Cost $15,000.

F. W. Stearns, Park street, Ward 7, 2-story stable and tenement, 4633. Felner & Paze, architects, Burke Bros., builders; hot water. Cost $6000.

Daniel Cochran, Grove street, Ward 4, 2-story dwelling, 3425. P. C. Baker, builder. Cost $1200.

G. W. Ulmer, Bowen street, Ward 6, 2-story dwelling, 2533, L. S. Coombs, builder. Cost $2300.

Smith & Wilmontan, three two-story dwellings, Circuit avenue, Ward 5. L. S. Fogg, builder. Cost $5500 each.

Agnes McLean, Prairie avenue, Ward 4, 1 1/2 story stable, 3124. Cost $1000.

Robert Burke, Beacon street, Ward 6, 2 story dwelling, 3124. F. H. Gowing, builder. Cost $1700.

H. C. Daniels, Washington street, Ward 7, 1 story office, 1515. H. M. Gragg, builder. Cost $450.

CITY OF NEWTON WANTS A WRIT OF INJUNCTION ISSUED AGAINST NEWTON & BOSTON STREET RAILWAY.

The city has begun proceedings against the Newton & Boston street railway company because of the alleged pollution of Bullough's pond, Newtonville. A writ of injunction is asked for by the city and the street railway company will appear in court at Boston, Tuesday, Sept. 26, to show cause why it should not be granted.

In its application for the injunction, the city asks that the respondent be restricted from polluting the water and water courses of Bullough's pond and Pearl lake. The latter is part of the larger pond, but has

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. A Thousand Tongues

Could not express the rapture of Annie E. Springer, of Philadelphia, when Dr. King's New Discovery cured her of a hacking cough that for many years had made life a burden. She says: "After all other remedies and doctors failed I soon removed the pain in my chest and I can now sleep soundly, something I can scarcely remember doing before. I feel like sounding its praises throughout the Universe." Dr. King's New Discovery is guaranteed to cure all troubles of the Throat, Chest or Lungs. Price 50c and $1. Trial bottles free at all drug stores.

Children's Health Fund.

The suffering among little ones always seems sad. The Children's Health Fund, whose office is at 36 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass., takes children from homes of Vice in all parts of the State, takes also children whose parents are unable to care for them and do not want to give them away for adoption. The Children's Health Fund takes these boards them in private families, thus saving the child from being sent to an institution, and enables the children to have foster parents' care, until permanent homes are secured in good families.

Clothing and shoes are much needed. Many of our readers have vegetables, eggs, poultry, etc., that would be a great help to this society if sent them. Any one desiring to take a child, either for the winter or permanently, should write G. W. Averell, Supt., 36 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass. The calls upon the Children's Health Fund are very heavy. Many cases are obliged to be refused every week for want of funds at command. Any one desiring to aid this most worthy object, may send donations to the office, 36 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass., which will be promptly acknowledged.

Hunnewell Club.

At a meeting last Saturday evening of the members of the Hunnewell Club of Newton, the following were chosen as a nominating committee to bring in the names of candidates to fill vacancies on the board of officers: E. J. H. Estabrook, H. W. Kendall, D. S. Emery, W. D. Gower, A. D. W. Sampson, G. L. Peavey and W. H. Holbrook. The committee will report in November.

Daughters of the Revolution.

Newton Daughters of the Revolution and their friends who are intending to visit Wakefield, Saturday next, to attend the Middlesex Co. Field Day are informed that trains for Wakefield leave the North Union station at 9.25, 10.25, 10.50, 12.45, return at frequent intervals in the afternoon. Those desiring may take electric cars at Scollay square for Malden, where in the beautiful square in which are situated the First Baptist church, public library, and High school, transfer may be made to a Melrose Highlands car connecting with a Wakefield car. The company will assemble at Cannonpawt grove, where an omnibus will be in waiting to convey the party to points of historic interest. In the afternoon, Hon. Frank E. Fitz of Chelsea will give an account of the history and traditions of Wakefield, (reading) and other speakers are expected. Each member provides her own luncheon. A delightful time is anticipated, and it is hoped that a good representation from the Sarah Hall Chapter will attend. If the weather is unfavorable Saturday, the party will go Tuesday, Sept. 26th.

Robbed The Grave.

A startling incident, is narrated by John Oliver of Philadelphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters, to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim. No one should fail to try them. Only 50c, guaranteed, at all drug stores."

High School Notes.

Mr. Harold F. Greene, '99, has entered Amherst.

The battalion is fast getting into shape. Each squad is being drilled by its corporal in the setting up exercises and the school of the soldier.

The band and artillery detachment are as yet unorganized, but will probably be recruited by next month.

A new exercise will shortly be introduced by the instructor in connection with the setting up exercises; this exercise with rifles is called the "Butts" drill, from Lieut. Butts, U. S. Army, who originated it. It is a very pretty exercise when done with music, as anyone who has seen a company go through these exercises will agree.

The foot ball team is to be organized soon. Trials for it were held Monday afternoon, but no men were selected. With the exception of two, Andrews, captain; and Skelton, they will be all new men.

The great success of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in the treatment of bowel complaints has made it standard over the greater part of the civilized world. For sale by A. A CAPABLE mother must be a healthy mother. The experience of maternity should not be approached without careful physical preparation.

Correct and practical counsel is what the expectant and would-be mother needs and this counsel she can secure without cost by writing to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass.

CAPABLE MOTHERHOOD

Mrs. CORA GILSON, Yates, Manistee Co., Mich., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—Two years ago I began having such dull, heavy, dragging pains in my back, menses were profuse and painful and was troubled with leucorrhoea. I took patent medicines and consulted a physician, but received no benefit and could not become pregnant."

"Seeing one of your books, I wrote to you telling you my troubles and asking for advice. You answered my letter promptly and I followed the directions faithfully, and derived so much benefit that I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough. I now find myself pregnant and have begun its use again. I cannot praise it enough."

Mrs. PERLEY MOULTON, Thetford, Vt., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent medicine. I took several bottles of it before the birth of my baby and got along nicely. I had no after-pains and am now strong and enjoying good health. Baby is also fat and healthy."

Mrs. CHAS. GERBIG, 304 South Monroe St., Baltimore, Md., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was unable to become pregnant; but since I have used it my health is much improved, and I have a big baby boy, the joy and pride of our home."

Death of Josiah B. Chase.

Josiah B. Chase, an old resident of West Newton and a well known Boston business man, died at 11 o'clock last Saturday morning, at his home, 52 Hillside avenue, West Newton. Death was due to heart failure.

Mr. Chase was born at Bristol, N. H., and was 65 years old. He came to Boston when a young man. In his business life of over 40 years he was very successful. He had the respect and confidence of all with whom he came in contact.

Mr. Chase was manager for the firm of Porter Bros. & Co. of 72 Lincoln street, Boston, with which firm he had been for nearly 30 years. He was also president of the Cheshire Manufacturing Company of West Cheshire, Ct., and a director of the Ball and Socket Fastener Company.

As a citizen of Newton Mr. Chase enjoyed a most enviable reputation. He held a high social position. He was a man who enjoyed his home and spent many happy hours with his family. He had resided in West Newton for nearly 28 years. While he had never held office in Newton, he always took an active interest in the affairs of the city.

Mr. Chase was particularly active in the affairs of the West Newton Unitarian Society, and for nearly 20 years had charge of its music, as well as being a member of the church choir. He leaves a widow, three sons and one daughter.

The funeral took place Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the First Unitarian church. The service was attended by relatives and friends and a large number of former business associates. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, and consisted of a number of handsome set pieces and a profusion of cut flowers.

The services were simple, consisting of prayer and scripture reading and congregational singing. The Rev. Julian C. Jaynes officiated. The body was taken to the Newton cemetery for interment, and the burial was private.

The pallbearers were Edwin B. Haskell, Benjamin F. Otis, Charles V. Bacon, A. J. Whiting, T. E. Stinson, H. M. Davis and Edward C. Burrage.

A WONDERFUL CURE OF DIARRHOEA.

(From the Times, Hillsdale, Va.)

I suffered with diarrhoea for a long time and thought I was past being cured. I had spent much time and money and suffered so much misery that I had almost decided to give up all hopes of recovery and to wait the result, but noticing the advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and also some testimonials stating how some wonderful cures had been wrought by this remedy, I decided to try it. After taking a few doses I was entirely well of that trouble, and I wish to say further to my readers and fellow sufferers that I am a hale and hearty man to-day and feel as well as I ever did in my life.—O. BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

TRENTON THEATRE—That delightful play of New England rural life "Way Down East," will have its one hundredth performance in Boston at the Trenton Theatre next Monday night, and the occasion will be commemorated by the presentation to ladies in the audience of beautiful silver loving cups, gold lined and finely engraved. These tasteful and valuable gifts will no doubt be long treasured by the recipients as souvenirs of an evening's enjoyment at the play. For everybody who goes to see "Way Down East" enjoys it, to judge from the frequency and heartiness of the applause of the big audiences that are nightly crowding the house. The wholesomeness of its motive, its touching pathos and homely humor, appeal as strongly to people who are not habitual theatregoers as to frequenters of the playhouse, and both classes find it exceedingly attractive. The manner of its performance is in thorough keeping with its tone and purport. Naturalness is the end striven for by the players, and that they attain this consideration all who have seen the representations must admit. Altogether, "Way Down East" is well worth seeing, and according to present indications about everybody in Boston and the neighboring cities and towns is going to see it.

GOING TO BUILD?
Or fix up your old buildings?
If so, do not use common tarred paper for any purpose. It will soon dry out and become lifeless. Use Neponset Paper. It is odorless, clean, and economical, and although thinner than tarred paper has greater strength, toughness, and wearing qualities.

For outside covering use Neponset Red Rope Fabric. It is a splendid substitute for shingles and clapboards, and does not cost nearly as much.

For repairing old buildings, leaky roofs, for making warm hot-beds, green-houses, sheds, barns, hen-houses, etc., Neponset Fabric does the business. Absolutely waterproof, wind-proof, and frost-proof.

The funeral was held Thursday afternoon from his late residence, No. 62 Aldie street, Allston.

—A successful children's party was given recently at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Unmack, Cabot street. The occasion served the double purpose of celebrating the eleventh birthday and the return to health of their only son, Theodore, who has been ill for several months. Theodore is a favorite among his playmates, and was warmly congratulated on his return to health. About twenty-five guests were present and games, dancing and music were enjoyed by the little folks. The magic lantern and the donkey party were much appreciated by the children, who were especially pleased that the booby prize was awarded to the host. Master Reginald Blanchard was the winner of the first prize. The company separated with wishes for many happy returns of the day.

—Mr. L. B. Schofield's new house is beginning to show from its slightly elevated, off Albemarle road, as the Cheesecake Brook boulevard is now called. It is located on the highest point of land in the vicinity, and commands a fine view of the rest of Newton, Waltham, Watertown and the surrounding country. The house is 33 by 78 feet, with an ell 18 by 24, and is after plans by Smith & Bischoff. The contract price is $20,000, and the building of such a handsome residence in that section will give quite a boost to land in that vicinity, which is really one of the most desirable sections of Newton, as far as its natural attractions are concerned. Mr. Schofield's house is to be some distance back from the street, which will give an opportunity for the laying out of fine driveways and very extensive lawns.

Rand and Mrs. Burdon were also to serve as delegates to the state convention at Worcester, Oct. 4, 5 and 6.

—Mr. and Mrs. David Seaton celebrated their silver wedding, Monday evening, at their home on Dunstan street. About seventy-five guests were present from the Newtons and the neighboring cities. Mr. and Mrs. Seaton were the recipients of numerous handsome and valuable gifts, including a silver tea service. The house was festively decorated with potpourri, plants and flowers. Dancing, whist and an informal entertainment program furnished abundant amusement for the evening. A collation was served in the dining room.

Woodland Park Hotel Notes.

Mr. A. Howard of Wellesley has taken rooms for the winter.

Mrs. W. H. Horton and son returned on Saturday from Magnolia.

W. N. Buffum, a prominent Boston lawyer, arrived Monday for the fall season, accompanied by his wife.

Mrs. W. A. Scammons and daughters of Worcester, Mass., arrived at the hotel Monday for a few weeks' stay.

Mr. F. M. Gooding and Mrs. R. M. Gooding of Peterham, Mass., returned to the hotel on Monday from their summer home at Plymouth, for the winter.

Jamies Coutts and Miss Bessie Coutts of Edinburgh, Scotland, arrived here Wednesday to attend the International Congregational council being held in Boston.

W. H. Hunt, Chicago; W. W. Foster and wife, Frank R. Thomas, G. E. Gage, W. F. Whittemore, A. E. Dunning, M. F. Dickson, Boston; W. A. Sturtevant, Stoneham; S. Henry Kent, Lynn; Mrs. J. C. Hogan, Portsmouth, N. H., were among those registered at the hotel last week.

Lasell Notes.

A small party enjoyed boating on the river last Monday.

Miss Kate Watkins, who is this year at the head of the art department, and who has already had mention in these columns, began her work on Friday.

The series of fall excursions began on Monday last with a visit to Nantasket, where a clambake added to the enjoyment of the trip. Some fifty or more were in the party. Mr. Bragdon and Miss Ransom accompanied them.

The walk to Doublet Hill, taken by a number of the girls on Sunday afternoon, in company with Mr. Bragdon, gave them at once a pleasant little outing, and a fine view of the country roundabout, as seen from the crest of the "Hill of the Three Trees."

The new pupils were given a reception on Saturday evening by the old girls, on which occasion the strangers rapidly ceased to be such, and joined heartily in the pleasures of the evening, forgetting the unwelcome "new," so lately tacked to them by way of description.

Mr. A. K. Virgil lectured to the music pupils on Wednesday afternoon last, upon "The Science of the Art of Music, and Playing and Teaching." Miss Florence Dodd, pianist, illustrated his remarks by playing upon the piano, and upon the clavier, to the use of which instrument much attention was given by the lecturer.

Among the pleasant features of the reopening of school was the cordial welcome extended to the new students in the name of the faculty by Mrs. Blanche Martin, of the department of oratory, on the evening of the opening day. On the same evening an orchestra entertained the dinner hour playing afterwards, according to custom at Lasell, in the gymnasium after chapel time.

Col. Homer B. Sprague's fine lecture on "Macbeth," in which he traced the gradual ruin of the originally noble character of this much studied play, and traced the same with profit to the students on Thursday evening. Col. Sprague entered with enthusiastic and sympathetic earnestness into his subject, and analyzed with keenness the force of each word, and the feelings and motives which went to the making of it.

Miss Priscilla White, whose musical career has been one of marked success, succeeds Prof. Davis in the vocal department. Miss White is a graduate in piano of the conservatory of music, has studied at Wellesley, and taught very successfully at Dana Hall. Her vocal study was pursued under Clara Mungler's training, and she has sung with distinguished success in the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Her studio is in Boston. Lasell is fortunate in securing her as head of its vocal department.

"If you can help it," said the girl in blue, "never let anyone buy your little brother a drum." "Way not?" "Well, just as Lieutenant Brown seemed to reach the point of proposing last night," explained the girl in blue, "Willie, who was in the next room, sounded 'taps' on his drum, and the Lieutenant took it as a hint."—Chicago Post.

Summer Boarder: "I think, considering the price I pay, and the poor accommodations you have, you might at least treat me with respect." Mrs. Hayfork: "Well, mum, to tell the truth, I can't feel much respect for people who don't pay the big prices I charge for the sort of accommodations I give."—New York Weekly.

"Did I hear you say, conductor, that the locomotive was at the rear end of the train?" "Yes, mam. We've got a locomotive at end end. It takes an extra one to push us up the mountain." "Dear what shall I do? I'm always so sick if I ride with my back to the locomotive!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"What's this?" exclaimed the Filipino commander. "Captain Wokwok reported as wounded!" "Yes, general." "Why, he hasn't been within gunshot of the enemy for days." "No, general, but he got a frightful stone bruise in yesterday's retreat."—Washington Star.

Today I discovered that my favorite cherry tree had been cut down.

"Clifford," said I to my son, "who did this?"

"I cannot tell a lie," said Clifford. "I hired another boy to do the chopping, but I bossed the job!"

"Bless you, my boy!" said I. "The other boy will be president of the United States, all right, but you will be chairman of the national committee."

Here I shook Clifford by the hand, cordially, for I was much rejoiced.—Detroit Journal.

Resolutions.

At a meeting of Newton Lodge No. 21, Ancient Order United Workmen, Sept. 12th, 1899, a committee of three, consisting of Brothers B. R. Ware, R. C. Marsh and A. W. B. Huff, was appointed to draft resolutions on the death of their late brother, Joseph E. Whitman. The resolutions are as follows:

Whereas, On the twelfth day of September, it pleased our heavenly Father to remove from our midst our beloved brother, Joseph E. Whitman, we, his associates and members of Newton Lodge, No. 21, Ancient Order United Workmen, in which he was united to us by the ties of brotherhood and friendship, regret that we shall no longer feel the warm clasp of his hand, and the encouragement of his presence.

For many years he has been prominent as a merchant, whose dealings with his fellow men have been marked with an integrity and honesty surpassed by none.

Honored as a citizen, he has given his labors and his talents freely in promoting such projects as would benefit and improve the city in which he lived. In him, the community has met with a loss that cannot be repaired.

While we mourn the decease of our beloved brother, nevertheless it is a pleasant thought that comes to temper our sorrow in remembering that death is not defeat, but victory, and everlasting life. Our brother is not dead, but he is fulfilling his destiny in another and better world, according to the commands of an ever loving, all powerful Providence.

Resolved, That these resolutions be published in the Newton Graphic, and be spread upon the records of the Lodge, and another copy transmitted to the widow of our deceased brother.

The Maynard Chapter of the Newton Natural History Society.

The eighth regular meeting of the society was held at the Maynard laboratory, September 15.

A valuable and interesting communication upon some evidences of glacial action in Newton and vicinity was read by Miss M. Eva Warren. The first evidence mentioned was a ledge of serpentine on Lowell avenue near the boulevard, where the city has uncovered the surface of the rock for a space about twenty feet high by one hundred long. Here the glacier came upon the ledge obliquely, this being shown by the deep scratches made by the fragments of rocks held in the ice. This rock studded surface Miss Warren aptly compared to sandpaper.

The next evidence of the work performed by this gigantic sheet of sandpaper, which the speaker said was about a mile in thickness, was at Newton Centre, on Florence street. Here the glacier came upon a ledge of slate directly upon its face, for this had a northern exposure. The scratches and seams were here very deep. The grinding down and polishing of the granite, conglomerate, also in Newton Centre, and of a bed of diabase near Robert's station on the Fitchburg railroad were also mentioned as showing the great power of ice-action in the long past ages.

Mr. Maynard illustrated by specimens that the young of the common cowbird in mounting its first, or nestling plumage into an adult dress, without any of the preliminary stages, exhibited by many closely allied species. Examples of the red-winged black bird were shown to illustrate this gradual assumption of the adult plumage which is not perfect, as regards color, until the fourth year. The operator showed that as the cowbirds were polygamous, with the males greatly in excess in numbers, there was necessarily considerable contention among the males for the females. Hence only the strongest and most swiftly flying males mated. This induced a hardy, robust race of birds, which fact was very evident by the early assumption of the adult dress.

Other notes and discussions of the papers by various members followed. All considered this one of the most interesting and instructive meetings thus far held by the chapter.

THOMAS FITZPATRICK, Sec.

[From the Boston Beacon.]

The worst feature of the case is the growing popular belief that Otis is a political favorite, that he is a good politician, and that he favors the re-nomination and re-election of our present chief magistrate. In his report to the Associated Press touching the conduct of Gen. Otis's censor, Robert M. Collins, the chief representative of that news organization, said that the policy at army headquarters was to let nothing through that might interfere with the smooth course of politics in the United States. Driven by the correspondents into a position where a valid reason for seemingly unnecessary mutilation was demanded, the censor said: "My instructions are to let nothing go that can hurt the administration." Who gave these instructions? The administration should find that out at once. Its own self-respect demands an answer to that question. Mr. McKinley cannot afford to let the information go abroad that the army in Luzon is a campaign agency or that any considerations of political expediency are permitted to enter into the conduct of the war. If the censor had no such instructions he should be cashiered for telling an untruth and for slandering his superior officers.

The Pig Iron Trust.

[Springfield Republican.]

It is stated that the cost of one per ton of pig-iron is $3 more than it has been, and that the cost of labor has increased 50 cents a ton, while other items will bring the total additional expense up to $5.50 per ton. But the price of pig-iron has been time being advanced from $10 to more than $20 a ton. Apparently, therefore, the pig-iron producers have added a dollar to their profit per ton for every dollar of extra cost imposed upon them in the making of it. Extortion on a grand scale would thus appear to figure in the present price schedules of the iron and steel trade.

BOOKS AND MAGAZINES.

A new novel by Edward F. Benson, the author of "Dodo" and "The Rubicon," made its appearance about September 9th. It is entitled "Mammion and Co.," and it is said to deal with personages living in the same society that was characterized by the two books just mentioned. Edward F. Benson, it will be recalled, is a son of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and is thoroughly acquainted with the society in which he places the scenes of his novels of London life. "In Mammion and Co." the good genius of the tale is an American girl, the original of whom is supposed to be a member of a well-known family. The novel was brought out by D. Appleton and Company.

"Oom Paul's People" is the expressive title of an exceedingly interesting forthcoming book, presenting clearly for the first time in this country the Boer's side of the Transvaal question. The author is Mr. Howard C. Hillegas, a New York newspaper man, who spent nearly two years in studying the South African question, enjoying special facilities at the hands of President Kruger and other Boer officials, as well as from Sir Alfred Milner and other representatives of Great Britain. Among the noteworthy features of this book are an important interview with Oom Paul and a special study of Cecil Rhodes. The trouble between the British and the Boers is attributed to stock jobbers and politicians. The author believes that war is the probable result of the coming. There is one chapter devoted to the American interests in South Africa. This book is to be published by D. Appleton and Company, and it will probably be ready during the early part of September.

A literary announcement of far more than the usual general interest is that just made by D. Appleton and Company of their Twenty-first Century Text-Books. They offer a complete and correlated series of text-books, numbering nearly one hundred volumes, fully embodying the latest advances in our education. The editors and the respective authors of these books have been chosen with reference to their qualifications for the special work assigned to them. The general editorial supervision of the series is in the hands of Dr. A. F. Nightingale, Superintendent of High Schools, Chicago, and Prof. Charles H. Thurber of the University of Chicago, men thoroughly conversant with every phase of the educational world. These really seem to be, as the publishers say, "an event worthy of the twentieth century, and a good omen for the educational welfare of the future."

"The Hero of Manila" is the title of a new book in the Young Heroes of our Navy Series which is to be published immediately by D. Appleton and Company. The author, Dr. Rossiter Johnson, sketches phases of Admiral Dewey's boyhood which are comparatively unfamiliar, and also presents a vivid picture of Dewey's experiences on the Mississippi under Farragut. The book, which closes with an account of the battle of Manila, is elaborately illustrated, and will be found to be of permanent historical value.

A new novel of New York life by Eleanor Stuart, is to be published shortly by D. Appleton and Company. The title is "Averages," and the story is said to be one of exceptional brilliancy and force.

THE UNTOLD TALE.

When shall we meet again, sweetheart,
I ask as the years roll by,
Or if in the circle of life apart
Our paths must forever lie?

I wandered alone in the dear old lane
Where we met in the long ago,
And my heart rebels with passionate pain
That love hath its ending so.

I long, how I long for the clasp of your hand,
For the light of your own bright smile,
For the hour when we sat together and
And fate may forget awhile!

I loved you then, but you guessed not the same,
And, my own, I would ask no more
But to meet again in the dear old lane,
As free as in days of yore.

So I wait, sweetheart, but to take your hand,
When time shall the path unfold,
And gather the threads in a lovely land
Of the tale that was left untold.

A DUTCHMAN'S TRICK.

The Reason Why Bottles Are Made With Concave Bottoms.

This is not a catch, nor should you answer the question by replying flippantly, "Because they are not convex." The real reason is as deep as the bottles are the opposite.

To the Dutch we owe the extra useless tons of bottle glass which we pay for. At any rate, the thanks of the glass manufacturers and of the dealers in freight and of the makers of cases may be sincere enough, for the concave bottoms of the millions of bottles always being made, transported and broken increase the cost of them by at least a tenth.

A certain Dutchman, having gone as far as he dared in the reduction of the strength and quality of the liquor he dealt in, cast about in his mind how he might succeed in making the less apparent the greater. But he could not hit upon any satisfactory dodge. This disgusted him. He felt ashamed of his lack of business instinct and began seriously to meditate selling the good will of his business and retiring.

This gentleman was in the habit of importing wine from Spain. This wine came mostly in hogheads, but now and again his correspondent would send him small parcels in the original skins in which the wine comes even to this day on muleback from the interior of Spain to the seaports.

One day Myneheer saw one of these wine skins, which he knew was only half full, lying on the floor of his warehouse seemingly quite full.

Being in his way a man of talent, he examined the skin with care before he moved it. He lifted up one side, and it at once became flabby. The skin was only half full, but it had been reposing on an inverted bowl. This had pushed up the middle of the skin and allowed the wine to press the rest of the skin down on the boards, while the visible part of the skin was correspondingly distended.

The Dutchman took the hint and had bottles made with the deceptive concave bottoms which we now know so well. The idea caught on, for at the finish only the wretched consumer had to pay, so every time the bottles were sold through before coming to the retail customer made a bit by the change.

The unorganized mass of the public realized soon enough how deceptive were the bottles that seemed as large as ever, but they had to put up with it, for in those times the stores were not thought of, and the public had much more even than nowadays to take what they could get and be thankful, while such is the conservatism of mankind that if they were offered flat bottomed champagne or claret bottles they would probably refuse them and imagine they were being done.—San Francisco Call.

The Hermit Was There.

Years ago some one in a northern town advertised that he had for sale a painting, supposed to be by an Italian master, representing a hermit's cave, with a hermit inside. A price was named. A gentleman living in London wrote to the advertiser, asking for further particulars. He received a somewhat more detailed description to the same effect as the advertisement. He sent the money, and in due time the painting, a large one, arrived at his house. It was a dark, but showing a picturesque hermit's cave. No hermit, however, was visible. He wrote to the vendor, mentioning this fact. The answer came back, "Of course you cannot see him, because he is inside."

The gentleman, who must have been very difficult to please, was not satisfied with this and wrote back: "If the hermit is inside, and, therefore, invisible, how do you know he is there?" The vendor replied: "Because I saw him go in, and if you wait long enough you may see him come out again. But he may by this time be dead and so unable to reappear, would you give yours truly, Tommy Flatecatcher."

The purchaser, finding himself added to injury, went for the rascally vendor, but he had emigrated—gone west, perhaps to California. Moral: Never buy a pig in a poke.—"The Gambling World," by Rouze et Noir.

DAZZLED THE WORLD

THE REMARKABLE CAREER OF THE ADMIRABLE CRICHTON.

This Marvel, a Master of Arts at 12. Died at the Age of 22 by His Own Sword, Which He Had Offered to a Foe After First Defeating Him.

On July 3, 1853, in a night encounter in Mantua there died a boy of 22 who in the last eight years of his life was the wonder and admiration of the chivalry and learning of Europe. His fame has come down to the present day among the English speaking, French and Italian people. Fifty years ago he was an ideal of schoolboys. His attainments as described by his contemporaries were so extraordinary that some modern writers, proceeding from the viewpoint that no human intellect could acquire such marvelous proficiency in so many directions, have argued he was a mythical character. This was James Crichton of Cluny, best known by the title given him by the French—the Admirable Crichton.

He was made a master of arts by the University of St. Andrews in his twelfth year. He knew all that institution of learning could teach him when he was 14. At the age of 15 he met in public debate on all subjects many of the best minds in France and vanquished them all. He knew all the learning of his day. He was a master of 12 languages. He had a memory so wonderful that, hearing a discourse of any length, he was able afterward to repeat it word for word and duplicate every gesture of the speaker. He was a poet, a musician of excellence, an athlete, a horseman, a soldier of trusted command before he was 19, a wonderful actor, a swordsman of extraordinary skill. He met and overcame all antagonists. He passed through the courts of France and Italy like a brilliant meteor. With all his attainments, he couldn't gain any money, and he felt before his own sword, which he had offered a foe after first defeating him.

Crichton's family was of considerable importance and wealth and claimed royal descent. His father was lord advocate first to Queen Mary and afterward to King James VI. His mother, the daughter of Sir James Stewart, Member of both families were eminent in Scottish history. The boy James Crichton was sent to grammar school at Perth. He emerged at the age of 10 and immediately entered the famous University of St. Andrews. The students there were divided into what were called circles, according to the talent they exhibited. Crichton advanced from one circle to another, until when he was barely past 11, the university turned him out with the degree of master of arts, accomplished in the science, philosophy and learning of the period, and, as said, the master of a dozen living and dead languages. It was the custom of young men of the time to finish their education by making the grand tour of Europe. Crichton, supplied with letters from his family and relatives to the nobles of the French court, went to Paris first.

His first action on arrival was to post a challenge in all parts of the city offering to meet all comers at the College of Navarre in debate in any one of 12 languages. "In any science, liberal art, discipline or faculty, whether practical or theoretic." Such contests were common to the age, but the challenge, coming from a boy of 15, aroused deep interest. An immense crowd was present on the day appointed. A dozen eminent philosophers and divines presented themselves. Crichton, without the semblance of effort, defeated all who attempted to cope with him. He was congratulated by the faculty of the college and Henry III, then the gayest monarch in Europe, carried him off to his court. The next day Crichton appeared in the courtyard and with consummate ease remained quiet in that martial struggle. The king gave him an important command in the army. He remained in France two years, dazzling the people with his accomplishments in every direction.

Crichton went next to Rome and Venice. In the latter city his friends were Sperone Speroni, one of the most learned names in Italian literature, John Donati, and Lorenzo Massa, secretary to the republic of Venice. Several of the Latin poems Crichton composed in this circle have descended. He was introduced to the doge and the senate and in their presence delivered an oration so graceful and eloquent that, according to Imperialists, "he was esteemed a prodigy of nature." The Venetians were enraptured over his elegant manners, his learning and accomplishments. Crichton went to Padua and posted an invitation to meet him in debate on the philosophy of Aristotle—then a subject absorbing the educated minds of all Europe. The argument lasted three days, and the handsome young Scotchman was as usual an easy victor over the learned men who took the opposite to him.

At Mantua a famous Italian duelist lived who had vanquished many antagonists. Crichton sent him a challenge and next day ran the Italian through the body. The Duke of Mantua engaged him as tutor for his son Vincenzo di Gonzaga. The court of Mantua was celebrated for its patronage of the Italian drama. The finest troupe of actors in Europe, deominated by I. Gelosi, was attached to it. Crichton composed a species of comedy for the company, satirizing the weaknesses of the various occupations in life, then undertook to sustain himself the most prominent and difficult characters in the piece. Even the actors were carried away with enthusiasm, so marvelous was Crichton's acting.

The young Duke Vincenzo, his pupil, was jealous of Crichton, who held favor in the eyes of beautiful young noble woman whom Vincenzo had wooed in vain. One night Crichton, walking home through the streets, playing as he went along on his guitar, was suddenly attacked by six masked men. He flung away the guitar, drew his sword and quickly killed two of his antagonists, put two more to flight and disarmed the leader. From a hole in the wall fell a young Duke Vincenzo. Crichton dropped on his knee and presented his own sword to his pupil. The duke took it and thrust it through Crichton's body. He fell on his back, his eyes staring up at the stars, dead.—Chicago Tribune.

The Moving Power.

"Why, Willie," said his mother one day when they were out walking, "what do you mean by offering a penny to that auto?"

"Because," replied the young investigator, "I heard papa say that money makes the mare go, and I want to see if it has the same effect on a mule."—Troy Times.

A TRAGIC LOVE TALE.

THE PATHETIC STORY OF MICHAEL ANGELO'S WOOING.

Only When Death Came to the Victim He Adored Could That Rugged Genius Clasp to His Bosom the Object of His Hopeless Passion.

However sorrowful may have been the lives of poets, there is no sadder love story on record than that of Michael Angelo, no love life fuller of despair, although his great, rugged soul, his austere nature and his immense genius would seem to lift him far above the storm of human passion and the weakness of heart needs.

Love came to him but once, and that late in life, for he was 51 years old when he made the acquaintance of Vittoria Colonna. She was a woman of high and loyal character, of noble birth and crowned with the laurels of poetry. She had married at 17, Francois d'Avallus, Marquis de Pescara, a young and brilliant military officer, who died from the effects of wounds, leaving her a widow at that age said to be so dangerous in women—33. She had idolized her husband, and her love remained for him after his death as deep and ardent as before. She felt that, having been his wife once, she was his wife always, and nothing ever induced her for one moment to sever it, on her high fidelity.

After the death of Francois d'Avallus she wrote a series of poems commemorative of his heroic deeds. These fell into the hands of Michael Angelo, and made such an impression upon him that he wrote a letter to the author, full of sympathy for her grief and of admiration for her poems. She replied in glowing terms of admiration for his genius in art. This was the beginning of their mutual acquaintance, and of his love. The correspondence continued, but Vittoria constantly refused to allow him to visit her, and it was not until ten years later that she consented to receive his homage in person.

She had come to Rome and was stopping with her sister-in-law, Jeanne d'Aragon. The follies of youth, as well as its radiant horizon, were over for both, for the one they had ever existed. But in this love, born so late in life, the great artist hoped for a joy and a companionship which would enrich and gladden the downward way. He was not a lovable man in the common sense of loveliness. He was awkward and cold in the presence of women, and his tongue was not clever to express the great depth and tenderness of his soul. His face had never recovered from the disfigurement produced by the blow given by Torrigiano. But love, beautifying ugliness and throwing charms over a thousand defects, wrought no miracles for Michael Angelo. His heroine was too fine and high, too closely wedded to an absent but ever present friend, to be seduced by his worship.

Despairing at length of winning her for his wife, he resolved to be philosophic and adore her from afar. But at times the old love and old ardor of his passion would leap up like rebellion in his heart and break down his strength. One day, when his agony of soul seemed to have reached a climax no longer supportable, he fell on his knees and like the Psalmist, cried out: "I cry to Thee, O my God! It is thee alone whom I invoke against my blind and vain passion." It was then he wrote, "Was there ever such a fate—to give love, worship, devotion and fidelity for the disdain of grief and a continual death?"

"St. Peter," "Moses" and "The Last Judgment" show Michael Angelo's genius, but the sonnets he wrote to Vittoria Colonna alone reveal his heart. A writer of that epoch describes her as being one of the most illustrious women of Italy and Europe, chaste, beautiful, spirituelle and learned.

One day after she had come to Rome to live she consented to pay the artist a visit in the little house he had built at the foot of Mount Cavalotti. It was a real letter day for Michael Angelo, and no divinity descended from heaven could have been received with greater distinction. After that visit a friendly degree of intimacy was established. Their conversation was never allowed to rest upon any topics less sublime than religion and the high benevolence of life.

It was at this time that the artist made for his art submitted to Vittoria the designs for his "Christ on the Cross," "The Dead Christ on the Knees of His Mother" and "Jesus at the Well of the Samaritan Woman." He sent them to her with a sonnet, in which he spoke of "her immense goodness," his too feeble talent, and his despair that his "fragile and perishable work would never equal the divine grace that she emanated her." It was quite natural that she should wish to paint her portrait, to make her statue, to league to posterity the beauty of the woman he worshipped. Nothing could be more touching than the sonnet he addressed to her, in which he pleaded for this privilege—"so that, in a thousand years after our departure from this world, one may see how beautiful thou wert, how much I loved thee, and that I was mad in loving thee." How Vittoria Colonna ever resisted such an appeal is difficult to understand. But she did, nevertheless, and devoted herself to the asylum she had founded for young girls. Her health was always delicate, and she died at the age of 57.

During her short illness Michael Angelo never left the house where she lay dying. He was kneeling at her bedside when the supreme moment came—supreme for both, for she had ceased to live, and he, for the first time during a devotion of more than 20 years, dared press his lips to the brow of the woman he idolized. All the love of his life surged about his heart in uncontrollable grief, and, winding his arms about the lifeless body, he showered kisses upon her brow, her eyes, her hair, her hands, and, with a great heart bursting sob, went out of the room.—Collector and Art Critic.

Hindoo Women as Servants.

According to the custom of Hindoo households, where the women servants call their master and mistress "father and mother" and the daughters "jewel sisters," nothing is commoner than for the attendants to attach themselves to a family as grandmother, claiming the privilege of scolding their employers and spilling those employers' children to the end of their days. In such cases the social inferiority of this member of the family group would not be easily perceived by a stranger. The mistress prepares her servant's food and gives her a bath with her own hands (a curious inversion of our notions), and when the latter dyes, in the fullness of time, she is mourned by these kindred of her adoption as one of their own blood.—Church Gazette.

HE WHO SHAVES HIMSELF.

What His Habit Moved the Hotel Proprietor to Do.

The number of men who have forsaken the barber shop and who, in the seclusion of their own domiciles, essay to remove the superfluous hair growth from their faces with more or less satisfactory results is rapidly increasing. That this should have any effect on hotel proprietors seems probable, but the proprietor of a New York hotel, who was in the city a few days ago, insists that his burden of trouble has been added to considerably by the shave yourself habit.

His experience is that of all the hotel managers in the metropolis, and he told it to a party of friends during his stay here. Six out of every ten men who register at his hotel carry their own shaving outfits with them. The strop has a screw attached to the end of it, and this is used in making the strop fast to the wall so that the razor can be sharpened just before being used.

The favorite place to fasten the strop, he says, is on the window facing, because it offers the best surface in which to twist the screw. Recently he noticed that the window facings in all the rooms of the hotel were thickly punctured with screw holes, the work of guests who shave themselves. At first he was not inclined to regard the matter seriously, but the thought that the continued screwing of strops to the woodwork would soon reduce the window frames of his hotel to splinters forced itself upon him.

He talked with other New York hotel men and found that they were troubled with the same habit on the part of their guests. Finally he arrived at a solution of the matter by which he hoped to prevent the destruction of his window frames. In every one of the rooms of his hotel he has placed a stout hook, firmly fixed in the wall alongside of the dresser. Over this is a neatly printed, politely worded notice to the effect that guests will confer a favor on the management of the house if they will hang their razor strops on the hook beneath.

Since his visit several of the hotel men here have found out that the woodwork in their houses shows the mark of the shave yourself guest, and in at least two of the big hotels the New York man's idea has been adopted.—Washington Star.

WHY THE BULLDOG IS LIKED.

He Is a Good Companion and Is Loyal to the Death.

A real love of dogs is apt to have a preference as to type, but he is apt also to be fond of all good dogs, no matter what the class or their special purposes in the world. The dog lover is very like in this regard the truly gallant man. He may prefer blue eyes and fair hair to the opposite, but his heart goes out to all women who are good because they are women and because they are good.

To the uninitiated an affection for a bulldog seems a perversion of taste, for the bulldog is not symmetrical, is not graceful and sometimes appears to lack intelligence. About his intelligence, however, there is more than one opinion; about his affection and his loyalty there can be no doubt whatever. His affection knows neither hesitation, wavering nor change, and he is a rare comrade. He is not noisy, he is not nervous, and he is not given to demonstration. He fills the requirements that Emerson formulated as to perfect companionship. He does not need to speak to show his sympathy. He can tell you what he wishes to say with his little eyes, and he can be eloquent with the waggings of his stump tail.

This kind of a companion is not such as commends himself to all persons, for there are those in the world who like chatter and consider the unending small talk of the drawing room the highest and most pleasurable expression of human wit. For such as these the bulldog is not likely to have the greatest attractions. Let such have a frolicsome dog or a kitten that will chase its tail. But the bulldog is a good companion for a quiet man of a thoughtful and philosophic cast of mind. The bulldog will not disturb his musings; the bulldog will not say the wrong thing at a time when silence is precious, for the bulldog rarely speaks. When he does, he is short, though not sharp, in his communications and is very much to the purpose.—Criterion.

An Insidious Pronoun.

The ritual of society, as women make it, is very exacting the world over, even in almshouses. The London Outlook reports a serious trouble among a set of workhouse officials.

The infirm nurses, three in number, had demanded a separate sitting room and the delight of Sunday dinner therein, and the matron had sought to humble them by sending the cook to enjoy her Sunday dinner in their company. The brawny cook described what occurred as follows:

"Well, Nurse Blank, she come down and got inside the door. 'Four covers?' she says. 'Four? Who's the fourth?' 'Me,' says I. 'You?' she says, and with that she tosses her head and walks away."

Here cook drew a long breath, then continued, "If it hadn't a' been Sunday, gentlemen, I should have let her have it for calling me 'you!'"

A Conscientious Forger.

The following incident is told of Austin Bidwell, the notorious forger, who many years ago attempted to break the bank of England:

When he was arrested, he remembered that, being short of money at the time, he had procured lunch on credit at a London restaurant, and wrote to an acquaintance whom he had befriended to settle the score. This was duly done, and Bidwell was apprised of the fact. Then the forger recollected that he had forgotten to tip the waiter threepence, as usual, and he forwarded three postage stamps to the restaurant keeper for Robert's benefit. Bidwell's missive to the landlord, framed, was long on view in the bar of the restaurant.

His Message.

Excitement is often the cause of strange telegrams, as well as of other strange manifestations.

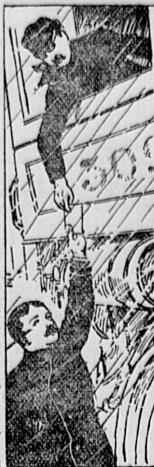

A man who had been one of the passengers on a shipwrecked vessel was rescued almost by a miracle. On arriving at a place from which he could send a telegraphic message, he forwarded the following dispatch to his brother:

"I am saved! Try to break it to my wife."

Rain or Shine,

The station agent is on duty. On his exact communication of train orders depends thousands of lives, and millions of dollars in property, each day. In his haste he runs out in the rain or the snow hatless and unprotected. Then comes the sequel—bronchitis, or some other disease of the respiratory organs. The most effective remedy for bronchitis or pulmonary disease is Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Almost all remedies prescribed for these diseases contain opium or some narcotic which soothes by stupefaction. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains neither narcotics nor alcohol. It stops coughs by curing their cause. It heals weak lungs, builds up wasted tissues, and promotes the health of every organ of the body.

"I am a railroad agent," writes L. Staples, Esq., of Barclay, Osage County, Kans., "and four years ago my work keeping me in a warm room and stepping out frequently into the cold air gave me bronchitis, which became chronic and deep-seated. Doctors failed to remedy my case and advised me to try a higher air, but, fortunately for me, a friend advised me to try Dr. Pierce's medicine. I commenced taking it at once, and by the time I had taken the first bottle I was better, and after taking four bottles my cough was entirely gone. I have found no necessity for seeking another climate."

BULLET IN RIGHT TEMPLE.

FRANK H. MOREHOUSE, A PROMINENT NEWTONVILLE MAN, TAKES HIS OWN LIFE.

Frank H. Morehouse, 29, of 32 Washington park, Newtonville, committed suicide by shooting at Young's Hotel, Boston, last Saturday forenoon. A deranged mind, caused by illness, is said to have been the cause.

Mr. Morehouse was well known among the dealers in wool in Boston. He was manager of the firm, Patterson Brothers, 508 Atlantic avenue, Boston, and was considered one of the brightest young business men in the city. His death came as a shock to a large circle of friends in Boston and the Newtons. He was unmarried and lived with his mother and father.

Mr. Morehouse had been overworked and suffered from nervousness. Recently he had a severe attack of malaria, and had not fully recovered when he went to the hotel. At the time the suicide was discovered by hotel employees, members of the firm which employed him were quietly making a search for him. Early Saturday morning the Boston police were notified that the young man was missing.

He disappeared Friday forenoon. Some time before 10 o'clock he purchased a revolver and a box of cartridges. A few minutes after 10 o'clock he appeared at the hotel and asked to be assigned a room. He carried no luggage and paid for his room in advance. He registered "James D. Johnson, New York."

At 10 o'clock Saturday morning a chambermaid knocked at the door. There was no response. Following instructions, she waited a half hour and then knocked on the door again. Receiving no response the second time, she notified manager La Pointe. The manager was instructed to force the transom and ascertain what had happened to "Mr. Johnson." It was in this way that the suicide was discovered.

Mr. Morehouse shot himself in the right temple. Medical Examiner Harris, who viewed the body at 12 o'clock, said it was his opinion that the shooting occurred about 9 o'clock. No one in the hotel heard the report of the revolver.

The unfortunate's letters addressed to members of the firm by whom he was employed. They were delivered unopened by the medical examiner. They were of an entirely personal nature, referring to his illness and business matters.

In the room there was found written on a sheet of hotel paper a note addressed to no one in particular. In the note, he asked that Dr. James Utley, the Morehouse family physician, be notified immediately and be requested to break the news of his death to his father and mother. The same note asked that his employers also be notified.

There was some delay in delivering these messages. The first information the members of the wool firm obtained was through reporters. Both members of the firm hastened to the hotel to identify the body. After viewing the body, one of the Patterson brothers called upon the young man's father, who was in Boston, and informed him of his son's death.

His employer spoke highly of Mr. Morehouse. He had been with the firm a number of years and shouldered many of the business cares of the firm. He had worked so hard that a short time ago his employers urged him to take a rest and recover from the nervous strain which he had been under. He had thought of doing so, but was attacked by malaria and confined to the house.

Instead of getting the rest which he needed, he became a sick man, and it was this illness and worry over business matters that brought about the disordered condition of his brain, which he suffered at the time of the suicide.

In the letter which Mr. Morehouse addressed to the firm of Patterson Bros. there could be found no intimation as to the cause of the deed. In the correspondence he expressed his deep regret at being compelled to leave his employers, but did not give the slightest reason for his act.

Several business matters were referred to in the letter by Mr. Morehouse, and suggestions regarding the management of the business were given. He also spoke of his relations with the firm, which had been of the pleasantest character.

Immediately upon receiving notice of Mr. Morehouse's death, Dr. James Utley went to Newtonville to notify the young man's parents. Dr. Utley has been the family physician for many years. Formerly the family resided in Newton. In that village the young man was well known and extremely popular.

His mother had been under Dr. Utley's care of late, though not seriously ill.

The sad news of Mr. Morehouse's death came as a severe shock to his large circle of friends in this city. Socially he was quite active. Only recently his engagement to Miss Logan, a popular society young lady of Newton Highlands, was reported. For a number of years the young man had presided at the organ of the Newtonville Methodist Episcopal church. In the affairs of the Central Congregational society he was quite prominent.

THE FUNERAL SERVICES.

The funeral took place Tuesday afternoon from his late home, 32 Washington park, Newtonville. The services, which were held at 2 o'clock, were attended by a large number of relatives and business associates. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. The service consisted of prayer and scripture reading by the Rev. J. B. Butters of Somerville, and music by the quartet of the Newtonville Methodist church. The burial, which was private, was at the Newton cemetery. The pallbearers were N. B. Buxton, Jr., Charles L. Smith, Charles W. Davidson, Arthur W. Vose, Ernest Booth and Edward A. Greene.

Examinations for corporals were held last Friday evening. Monday evening it was announced that Private John Ryan and Musician Geo. M. Henderson, having the two highest per cents, had been appointed.

Private Bernard English was appointed musician, vice Henderson appointed corporal, last Monday.

A letter has been received by a member of the company from John Boyce of the 54th Infantry, U. S. A., telling that he had been appointed senior corporal of Co. M., and in a few days he expected to receive a sergeant's company.

The company received its pay from the state last Monday, for its tour of duty last August.

HOLD-UP AT NEWTON LOWER FALLS.

EXPERIENCE OF EDWARD FITZPATRICK MAKES BUSY NIGHT FOR POLICE—HIS ASSAILANT FINED ON TWO COUNTS.

The actions of a quartet of young men furnished considerable excitement in the villages of Newton Lower Falls and Wellesley Lower Falls shortly before midnight last Friday and for a time taxed the energy of members of both police departments.

About 10:30, while Patrolman Charles Tainter of Newton department was standing on the bridge which crosses the Charles and connects the city of Newton with the town of Wellesley, he saw coming toward him at a rapid gait, a young man who appeared greatly excited.

Upon reaching the officer's side the young man nearly collapsed, and was so out of breath that he could scarcely speak for a few minutes. As soon as he recovered himself he told Patrolman Tainter that he had been the victim of a hold-up, and pointed to a wagon occupied by four young men which, at the time, was hurrying across the bridge towards Wellesley.

Seeing it was impossible to stop the horse and the occupants of the wagon, Patrolman Tainter notified police headquarters and immediately secured a vehicle to pursue the quartet in the wagon.

Lieut. Mitchell of police headquarters notified the Wellesley police to be on the lookout for the wagon.

Patrolman Tainter and his companion, who proved to be Edward Fitzpatrick, jumped into a vehicle and started in pursuit of the quartet.

The young men in the wagon had not been idle in the meantime. Is was not long before they arrived in Wellesley. Just north of town hall they were stopped by Patrolman McMahon.

The officer is one of the largest men in the department. His experience with Ralph C. Frye had made him well known. Patrolman McMahon had been apprised of the affair by Newton police and detained the four young men. Later Chief of Police Fred A. Tarbox arrived with the patrol wagon and took the party to police headquarters, Newton. They were booked as George A. Ford, Joseph A. Purcell, Andrew E. Purcell and Charles Gaudar.

In court last Saturday morning they were charged with assault upon Edward Fitzpatrick and also with being drunk. Fitzpatrick told the court that he was returning home from Norumbega park and while on a Lower Falls bound car saw the four young men in a wagon.

Fitzpatrick alighted from the car near the footbridge at Newton Lower Falls, he said, and was accosted by Charles Gaudar. The latter called him "Pat Moran," he declared, and asked him for "the money you owe me." Later, he alleged, Gaudar struck him.

There were two other witnesses who were near at the time of the trouble, and did not see any blows struck. The four young men told their stories to Judge Blaney and said they were fruit and vegetable peddlers on their way to Worcester.

Judge Blaney acquitted George A. Ford on both counts. Joseph E. and Andrew E. Purcell were fined $3 each for drunkenness and found not guilty of assault.

Charles Gaudar was fined $5 for assaulting Fitzpatrick and $3 for being drunk.

BOSTON FOOD FAIR.

OPENS OCTOBER 2 FOR ONE MONTH—MORE EXHIBITS, MUSIC, SILVER SOUVENIRS, NOVEL ENTERTAINMENTS AND PRETTY GIRLS THAN EVER—MECHANICS BUILDING UNDERGOING A TRANSFORMATION—SEVERAL SURPRISES IN STORE FOR VISITORS.

"All around them and below
The sound of hammers, blow on blow," presages, not "The Launching of the Ship" in this instance, but the Launching of the Great Food Fair of 1899, about which all New England is talking. From the very first it was known that the policy of the management would be one of progressive enterprise and open-handed liberality in securing the very best features and talent in the line of demonstration and entertainment. With Sousa, Godfrey, Reeves and Missud at the head of the musical programs; Nellie Dot Ranche in charge of the Woman's Department; The New England Sportsman in control of the "Sportsman's Paradise," and Caterer Row of Norumbega fame presiding in the cafe, it can be seen that the '99 Food Fair has many pleasures in store for visitors. Then, too, may be mentioned the Komany Rye gypsy queen and her suite of dark-eyed attendants; the Penobscot Indians in their picturesque dresses of embroidered buckskin; the "Judgment of Paris," starting in its realism; the "Charge of the Red Brigade" and a host of other attractions.

The booths, with their varied decorations and brilliant illumination and bevy of pretty girls will suggest a glimpse of fairyland; many of the exhibits will give pleasure and surprise. Three thousand silver souvenirs will be given away each morning by the management, and a new system of distributing these gifts so as to avoid crowding and delay has been adopted.

The entrances this year are also arranged so as to prevent confusion in admitting the throngs of visitors, and a special entrance for members of the press, through the managers' office, has also been provided.

The doors of the exposition will be opened to the public Monday, October 2, at 10 a. m., and the inaugural exercises will occur at 3 p. m.

A WONDERFUL CURE OF DIARRHOEA.

(From the Times, Hillsdale, Va.)
I suffered from diarrhoea for a long time and thought I was past being cured. I had spent much time and money and suffered so much misery that I had almost decided to give up all hopes of recovery and await the result, but noticing the advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and also some testimonials stating how some wonderful cures had been wrought by this remedy, I decided to try it. After taking a few doses I was entirely well of the trouble, and I wish to say further to my readers and fellow sufferers that I am a hale and hearty man to-day and feel as well as I ever did in my life.—O. R. Moore. Sold by A. Hudson, Newton; E. F. Partridge, Newtonville; B. Billings, Newton Upper Falls; J. H. Green, Newton Highlands.

High School Notes.

A lecture will be given tomorrow evening, Sept. 30, to the Assembly hall, by Mr. A. J. George, A. M., on Rugby and its traditions. It will be illustrated with the stereoscopic from slides made at Rugby especially for Mr. George. As the proceeds will be used for the High school association, it is hoped that a large number will attend, especially the past members of the school. The general admission is 50 cents. Pupils 25 cents.

A Word to Mothers.

Mothers of children affected with croup or a severe cold need not hesitate to administer Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It contains no opiate nor narcotic in any form and may be given to children of any age as to an adult. The great success that has attended its use in the treatment of colds and croup has won for it the approval and praise it has received through out the United States and in many foreign lands. For sale by A. Hudson, Newton; E. F. Partridge, Newtonville; B. Billings, Newton Upper Falls; J. H. Green, Newton Highlands.

The Fringes of the Outings.

One of the distinct and charming pleasures of the year is to keep up, after return from the rest and mingled delights of the summer vacation, the same outing spirit that pleasantly animated the June preparations for going, and gathered strength and force while we were away.

Not but that the spirit of work is not just as pleasant in its way. Yet, to keep out of old ruts, the healthy, happy and free outing spirit may well be cherished and exercised in many scattered short local trips, to keep up the strength and spirits for work that were gained while away.

Fortunately, we happy Newton people are blessed with local rustivating places so numerous, accessible and beautiful, that one can never tire of them. Among such, are Chestnut Hill Reservoir, reached by West End cars via Westgate. Nothing is more delightful, often even till November, than to sit there under the pitch pines, with reading, needle-work, or note book in hand, from about ten o'clock till three o'clock and with a bit of luncheon, and enjoy the balmy air and the shining silver crested wavelets and graceful landscapes.

Like pleasures, in accessible variety, are found at Hemlock Gorge near Echo Bridge, at the pine grove around the corner of Beacon and Washington streets, near the comely and beautifully landscaped Newton Hospital; at several spots on both sides of the railroad, in the region of "Indian Spring" at Wellesley Farms (formerly plain, but no less attractive "Rice's Crossings" at Prospect Hill, now that it has been made into a delightful rustic park; and at Arlington Heights, to which one can have a pleasant open car ride for the mere laughable trifle of five cents. Verily, and soberly, to have such an outing for ten cents apiece for the round trip, by the mystery of electric power, seems as if the smiling Father of all said to us, His children, "You make a car to ride on, and then grasp my finger, and I will take you wherever you want to go." Those who have received this kindness ought surely to gratefully acknowledge it in God's house. But not to sermonize, when the facts are their own sermon. The State Reservation at Waverley Oaks, now easily and pleasantly reached by electric from Mt. Auburn, is another beautiful local resort, while City Point, South Boston, is worth mentioning. Those who can spare the time to go a little further will find Lexington, Stony Brook, Lincoln Reservoir, Milton Blue Hill, Middlesex Fells, and Plymouth, delightful places; while, if one can be absent a night or two, hardly anything could exceed in beauty and interest the Lake Memphremagog, Vt. All these pleasures, it may be said in passing, help, rather than hinder sound night's sleep, and growth in some of the finest points of character.

Of course, as we all know, peaceful and futile boxed up caricatures as it were, of all the beautiful scenes here touched upon, and others more grand, can be seen in the clearing, suffering, wearisome and generally down dragging places, so strangely misallied places of amusement. But the appeal of this brief sketch is to the lover of nature, reality and life at first hand.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. NEWTON FOR CHRIST.

AN APPEAL FROM THE OFFICERS OF THE NEWTON PRAYER UNION.

What are you doing to advance the interests of Christ's Kingdom in Newton?

A Prayer Union was formed in Newton last December, of Christians from different churches, who have wholly consecrated themselves to the Lord. The object of this Union is daily prayer and earnest work along special lines for the Master, and it is desired that those Christians of other Evangelical churches, who have given themselves to God, should join with us in these daily petitions, that united prayer may prevail with our God to grant the desires of our hearts for our beloved city.

Although not possible or needful that we leave our homes in the different villages daily to meet personally, we can offer our petitions in spirit at nearly the same time, which is from seven to nine a. m.

A great amount of work has already been accomplished, and much more is under way. It is wished in the months to come, that enough Christian workers will join this movement to enable us to reach each inhabitant in Newton of reasonable years, with a personal appeal upon salvation. Pray for this, also for an out-pouring of God's Holy Spirit upon our ministers and church members this fall and winter.

The Master's blessings come in answer to prayer. "If ye shall ask anything in my name I will do it." With this fact and promise before us, let us begin to pray that God will create in the heart of each of His disciples a hunger and thirst for the deepening of the spiritual life of the church, the quickening of church members, and the conversion of the unsaved. The latter includes that cruelly deceived people, the Roman Catholics. Pray that God will raise up laborers to work in this neglected part of His vineyard, who will bring "glad tidings" to this perishing people, that they may put their trust in Christ, and their priests become preachers of righteousness.

With loving insistence must Theosophists, Christian Scientists and Spiritualists in our midst, and all those who trust in their own merits and good works be challenged with Bible truth.

Church members in large numbers neglect that appointed means of grace, the Friday evening prayer meeting. Many never testify from year to year of their conversion, or to the power of Christ in their daily life. These need to be awakened out of their sleep. They are as salt that has lost its savor.

Unconverted people as temporary or permanent supplies, teach classes of our young in our Sunday schools, the way of salvation and other blessed truths which these teachers have not themselves accepted, and persons with wrong ideas upon salvation are given in charge of Christian work in our churches. Let there be a weeding out, and a watchfulness maintained.

As a rule, with a few notable and happy exceptions, young converts are not looked after as they should be and instructed. Churches even over to false and unscriptural methods of raising money may expect to be remonstrated with, both pastors and people, and urged to honor the plain teaching of God's Holy Word. They will also be asked to take a stand against all the forms of worldliness that have crept into the church, and have gained such a stronghold, for truly, it is getting difficult to detect any difference between some church members and the worldling, but for the fact only of the name being on the church roll.

Surely if we "sow to the flesh" we shall "reap of the flesh," if we put temptation before worldly people to come, eat, drink, and be merry in our churches that we may take from their pockets the money we want for the Lord's work, that we may get otherwise from them, for how can the unconverted "eat and drink to the glory of God?" "Gain is not godliness." "Freely ye have received, freely give," does not mean getting something back in payment therefor.

We mock God when the unconverted are invited to give entertainments in the House of God, and who present us with those melodies used as accompaniment to the dance and "cake walks" by the world; as a result of this our innocent and confiding church members are made the laughing stock and objects of scorn and derision by those who know these things to be so.

Let us be more jealous for God's house and God's glory, than to allow even unspiritual church members to give entertainments and advertise their business, whether it be musical or commercial, for there is not much of the spirit of "Not I, but Christ," in these things.

We would kindly ask those church members who are appointed on visiting committees, not to be ashamed of the Gospel of Jesus Christ when calling with their good and acceptable gifts to the suffering or needy poor, or the "shams," but to read the Bible and pray with those upon whom they call, and to devote some part of the time to a talk upon personal religion, for oftentimes for some reason these people are deterred from attending church and receiving the benefits of a helpful sermon, and the cheer and uplift of prayer, songs of praise and association with others. It is not "what we give, but what we share" that binds hearts together in Christian love.

Let us urge our respective pastors to occasionally preach to Christians upon our once having been alienated from God, like unto those for whom we now labor and pray, that whatever progress we are conscious of having made in the Christian course, we may thereby be admonished to keep humble, meek, thankful and free from spiritual pride and all presumptuous sins.

It may be necessary for the Union to take several weeks to examine and pass upon the tracts and books adapted to the work in hand. A list will probably be published, not later than December 1st, for circulation among pastors, church members and the unsaved; meanwhile, the recording secretary sends this message to each true disciple of our Lord, in Newton:

"Thou mayest not measure out thine offering unto Me by what others have done or left undone; but it is thine to seek out, even at the latest moment of thine earthly life, what is the utmost height of pure devotion to which I have called thine own self. Remember, that if thou fall short of this, each time thou utterest in prayer, the words, 'Hallowed be Thy name, Thy kingdom come,' thou dost most fearfully condemn thyself, for is it not mockery to ask for that thou wilt not seek to promote even unto the uttermost, within the narrow compass of thine own heart and spirit?"

John Ruskin says, "If you do not wish for His Kingdom, don't pray for it. But if you do, you must do more than pray for it; you must work for it." J. M. F. Newton, Sept. 21, 1899.

A Thousand Tongues

Could not express the rapture of Annie E. Springer of Philadelphia, when Dr. King's New Discovery cured her of a hacking cough that for many years had made life a burden. She says: "After all other remedies, and doctors failed it soon relieved the pain in my chest and I can now sleep soundly, something I can scarcely remember doing before. I feel like sounding its praises throughout the Universe." Dr. King's New Discovery is guaranteed to cure all troubles of the Throat, Chest or Lungs. Price 50c and $1. Trial bottles free at all drug stores.

BUNYAN'S FIFTH SUCCESSOR.

SERMON OF REV. DR. JOHN BROWN OF BEDFORD, ENGLAND, AT ELIOT CHURCH LAST SUNDAY EVENING.

Rev. Dr. John Brown of Bedford, England, a delegate to the International Council of Congregational churches now being held in Boston, occupied the pulpit of the Eliot church last Sunday evening. The edifice was completely filled, the congregation including delegates to the council and prominent Newton men and women.

Rev. Dr. Brown has now charge of the pulpit, formerly occupied by John Bunyan, being the fifth pastor in charge of the parish since Bunyan's death 250 years ago. His subject was "John Bunyan," and he said in part:

"Among God's greatest gifts to a nation are the great men whom he sends to it. God enriches the nation with the metal of the mine, the harvest of the field, but the dearest riches with those men of genius."

"He sent to the earth Dante with his poems, Milton with his songs, and Bunyan with his wonderful dream. Bunyan was born in 1628 and died in 1688. During the sixty years of his life he wrote sixty books. All his works were valued, but those which even now stand pre-eminent are 'Grace Abounding,' 'The Pilgrim's Progress,' and 'Pilgrim's Progress.' 'Grace Abounding' was written with a pen of fire. It set forth most plainly God's dealings with his soul. 'Pilgrim's Progress' was in a real sense autobiographical. He was himself the pilgrim, and knew what it was to despair, what it was to lose hope, and what it was to give himself up to God."

"It reaches every heart because it tells so truly what was in his own heart. Bunyan's gift was that gift of genius, the solemn gift of God. 'If I could take you to the village that was Bunyan's home during the greater part of his life, I should take you to a 17th century village. There are those signs and tokens about the grave of Bunyan that seem to draw you back to the days of the great man's life.'"

"At sixteen, Bunyan was drafted into the army. His country at that time was in the throes of a great civil war. The muster rolls were to the region of reserve, but recently found, and by it was shown that Bunyan served three years. It was doubtless that during these years he came in contact with those military preachers, whom he immortalized in his 'Holy War.'"

"Before their marriage Bunyan and his wife would walk together and talk of the virtues of her father. It was this woman's father that moulded the good woman, his child proved to be, and it was this good woman who moulded John Bunyan. 'The bringing-up of child by man is like an arrow in the hands of the Almighty. You may send that arrow where you cannot go yourself, that it may accomplish the good you cannot do yourself. 'Bunyan's sins sometimes reproached him, because he realized the presence of him from accomplishing his purpose. Whatsoever stand between us and the realization of a noble life purpose is a dreadful thing. Bunyan was cast into jail for preaching in defiance of the magistrate's edict, he was thankful that he was permitted to serve God by remaining in jail. There is always golden compensation for the man who will be faithful to his conscience and faithful to his God. 'Often Bunyan, while in prison, thought of those at home, whom in his prayers, he placed in God's keeping. It is that thought of committing all to God that builds up the ramparts of liberty in every man. 'Those years of dark imprisonment were to Bunyan, years of divine revelation. During his second imprisonment he wrote 'Pilgrim's Progress.' That book has been read by those of every nation. Its popularity has caused it to be translated into ninety different languages. 'The influence of that book are still with us. It is a bond between the Christian of all nations. It seems to fit into hearts of all people. 'Its characters we still have with us and we yield to their influences as we see them around us. This book makes us realize the great things of the Kingdom of God.'"

THE ills of women overshadow their whole lives. Some women are constantly getting medical treatment and are never well. "A woman best understands women's ills," and the women who consult Mrs. Pinkham find in her counsel practical assistance. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

PRACTICAL HELP FOR SUFFERING WOMEN

MRS. MABEL GOOD, Correctionville, Ia., tells how Mrs. Pinkham saved her life. She says:

"I cannot thank you enough for what your medicine has done for me. I can recommend it as one of the best medicines on earth for all women's ills. I suffered for two years with female weakness and at last became bedfast. Three of our best doctors did me no good so I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking a few bottles of your medicine, I was able to do all my housework. I know that your medicine raised me from a bed of sickness and perhaps death, and am very thankful for what it has done for me. I hope that every suffering woman may be persuaded to try your medicine."

Get Mrs. Pinkham's advice as soon as you begin to be puzzled. The sick headaches and dragging sensation come from a curable cause. Write for help as soon as they appear.

Mrs. DOLE STANLEY, Campbellburg, Ind., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I was troubled with sick headache and was so weak and nervous, I could hardly go. A friend called upon me one evening and recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, saying that she knew that it would cure me. I then sent for your medicine and after taking five bottles of it, I was entirely cured. I cannot praise it enough."

—Prof. Horatio W. Parker's "Honor Novimus" at its recent performance at the Worcester festival in England, under the direction of the composer, was an artistic success, and was well received by the large audience.

—Riverdale lodge N. E. O. P. members resumed their meetings this week and gathered in large numbers at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Furness of Auburn street last Monday evening. Already an active social season is planned.

—The last of the series of fall concerts under the auspices of the Newton Boat Club was held last Saturday evening at the club house, Riverdale. The interior of the clubhouse was handsomely decorated, and the grounds and floats were lighted with hundreds of Chinese lanterns. More than 100 of the younger society set of the Newtons were invited. Entertainment was from 8 to 10:30 o'clock in the club assembly hall.

—Dr. Edward G. Parker has been transferred to the U. S. S. Hartford, Admiral Farragut's old flag-ship, which has been refitted at an expense of $400,000. She goes into commission Oct. 24, and will sail before January from Mare Island, California. She goes around Cape Horn and is to be present at the World's Fair in Paris in 1900. Dr. Parker is receiving many congratulations as the new position is a very desirable one.

—Fair skies and the pleasantest of September days favored the Boston Bank Officers Association on the occasion of their ladies' field day last Saturday afternoon at the Riverdale Recreation Grounds. More than 500 members and friends were present. The events of the afternoon were the sports which were enjoyed by a concert by the cadet band, and at its close a collation was served at the outdoor dining hall. From 6 to 10 o'clock dancing was enjoyed in the clubhouse hall, music being furnished by the band.

A BIRDLESS COUNTRY.

The scarcity of birds has been a common subject of remark this summer, and it is to this, according to Mr. C. J. Maynard, the naturalist of Newton, that the great destruction of grass on the lawns about the city is due. He gave at a recent meeting of the Maynard chapter of the Newton Natural History Society, many instances of seeing robins and bronze grackles feeding upon the grubs, which are those of the June beetle. But the grubs have been so numerous and the number of birds so few that but little could be done to stop the destruction, and the result is that many handsome lawns have had to be dug up and reseeded.

The same story comes from other places, and in the country where formerly bird songs filled the air, there is now a painful silence, with only an occasional note. One reason for the scarcity of birds is said to be the general use of Paris green and other insecticides, which kill off the birds as well as the insects. There has also been a general destruction of birds because they pick up a few seeds or sample fruit, in the midst of their war upon insects, and now that the birds have been driven away, the farmers find themselves overwhelmed with all sorts of insect pests.

Here in Newton, birds used to be plentiful, but the same story holds true, and the few birds that remain are warred upon by boys, who want to kill something, and in order to follow out that brutal instinct, are helping to drive the birds from the city.
Parents who have bought their boys guns, are now paying for it in seeing their lawns destroyed by grubs, and the loss to the city is not easy to estimate.

Mr. Maynard gave an instance of wanton killing of birds that came under his notice a few evenings since. There is a bird roost in the vicinity of his laboratory, and on the way to visit it with some pupils, he heard a shot and saw a large flock of birds rise into the air. Another shot followed, and hastening to the spot, he found two boys with guns, who had killed six of the birds, and he talked to them seriously of the harm they were doing in killing birds that were of no use to them. The result of this shooting by these and other boys was that the birds were driven away, and they were the bronze grackles, whose principal food is the grubs that have been destroying our lawns, and other noxious worms and insects.

The Newton Natural History Society is making an earnest effort to have the city authorities take the matter up and adopt measures to protect the birds, and incidentally their own lawns and gardens. There is now a law against discharging fire arms within the city limits, and this could be strictly enforced by the police, and some law should also be passed to restrict the use of air guns by the boys. It should be made a misdemeanor, punishable with a heavy fine, for any one to be caught with a dead bird in his possession, or to be found trying to shoot one, and a close season should be established that would last all the year. Besides, the children should be taught the value of birds, and inspired with humane instincts, and they would then join in the efforts to protect the birds.
Probably methods of fighting the worms that infest our trees could be adopted that would not also be fatal to the birds, and then when the birds were once plentiful, the insects would be easily kept down by the birds themselves. A former general had no such trouble with insects as we are having today, but they had not succeeded in killing off all the birds.

THE CAUCUSES.

Newton had a great surprise Wednesday night, as instead of the usual dozen or so in the Republican caucuses, nearly the whole strength of the party was represented. The unusual interest was due to the contest over the Lieutenant governorship, and it seemed to be in the main a good natured affair, with no hard feelings over the result. Col. Guild was handicapped at the start by the support of the state machine and also by the folly of his active supporters, but he has never had the mass of the people back of him, and they supported Speaker Bates, because they thought he was a more solid kind of a man. Col. Guild has done a good deal of political speaking, and ornamental soldiering, but his achievements so far have not been of a nature to win him the confidence of the thinking portion of the people.

Mr. Bates has on the contrary made a very good record as Speaker of the house, and given evidence of possessing a substantial character and well founded convictions. The chief argument used for Mr.
Guild was that he had never bolted a party nomination no matter how bad it was and though this is a favorite argument with politicians, it is surprising that they do not learn that it has very little force with the people. They think that if a man never bolts he must have no convictions on any question and no sense of right or wrong when party measures are concerned. The great majority rather respect a man who has the strength of character to refuse to support a man or a policy of which his conscience does not approve, and politicians make a mistake in not recognizing this.

The caucuses in two of the wards were tied up over some of the complications of the ballot law, and have sent the riddle to the ballot commissioners to have them guess upon it. Ward Three, which went for Guild by a large majority, had a very lively caucus and it is reported that local politics had more to do with the matter than any preference for Bates or Guild.
A former chairman of the ward and city committee seems to have lost his grip as every thing he supported was voted down, and the caucus was notable for the large proportion of the younger party men who were present. The same was true also of most of the other wards and it is an encouraging feature and one that it is hoped has come to stay.

The Bates men seem to be in a great majority all over the state and the contest is regarded to be as good as settled. It is fortunate that we had something of the kind this year to give a little life to the campaign.

The attention of the whole country has been centered on New York, this week, where Admiral Dewey has been given such a vociferous welcome. He can be in no doubt as to the place he holds in the hearts of his countrymen, and in spite of all the adulation the man seems as modest and manly as before the battle at Manila. It is evident enough that the people are ready to give him any honors in their gift, because the more they find out about him the more things they see to honor and esteem.
In an interview, when the reporter said something about the presidency, Admiral Dewey laughed and seemed to think all such talk was ridiculous, as he was not a politician. But have we not had enough of mere politicians in high office with their vacillating and uncertainty, and their efforts to ride on every wave of popular sentiment without any real convictions of their own. With such a man as Dewey at the head of affairs, how all this doubtful atmosphere would be cleared at once and the people would have the utmost confidence in the government. Even if he did make mistakes the people would know that they were the result of an honest effort to do his duty, and Washington would be benefited from one end to the other. It would be impossible for the politicians to defeat the nomination of Dewey if he would only give even a silent encouragement to the movement, and there would be no party lines in the campaign either, and no need of an enormous campaign fund.
What a relief it would be to all good citizens to see such a man nominated, without any buying up of delegates, or promises or pledges, or anything of the kind, with which we have grown so familiar, and which make such a national scandal of a presidential campaign.

Just what was responsible for the defeat of Curtis Guild is being discussed, but the circular gotten out in his favor must be credited with a good deal of the responsibility. A more unwise collection of arguments was never gotten together, and whoever concocted them must have peculiar views of the way to get up an appeal to influence the rank and file of the voters.
Think of asking the average voter to support a candidate because he has never been ashamed of his father, and the fact that the old gentleman began life without a dollar! Or the other appeal for the votes of the people because the candidate has friends in every walk in life, and "makes no discrimination between them!" What must be the condition of mind of the man or men who think such arguments will get votes? If his friends were of this character it is no wonder that Mr. Guild got so badly left.

A LETTER printed in the GRAPHIC last week seemed to strike a popular chord, as it has been copied into a dozen or more other papers, with only one line changed, the line making it appear to have been written for each paper in which it appeared. It was the brightest article someone of them have printed for some time, so we do not wonder at their forging the line in question.

THE MILFORD JOURNAL is a very bright and sharp paper, but its editors should not put so many political editorials in their weekly edition. By the time it gets round to the readers most of the statements so positively made have proved to be untrue, and this casts a doubt upon the whole collection.

MONEY is reported to be very tight in New York, but after they have squeezed the last cent out of the Dewey visitors, it ought to be plentiful enough. It is a great patriotic occasion, and evidently New York is afraid it will never get another show, and so is bent on making all it can out of it.

The Mazet inquiry into New York city politics is doing quite as much damage to Platt as to Croker. Readers of the testimony are inclined to the opinion that either machine is a little more corrupt than the other, and that there is no choice between the rival bosses.

THE SPRINGFIELD REPUBLICAN unkindly says that "It will have to be confessed that 'Back Day influence' is on the wane. With Crane and Bates there will be a new infusion of common folks into Massachusetts Republicanism."

The Socialist Labor party held its State convention in Worcester, and after a rather heated quarrel divided and each faction put up a separate ticket. Evidently the Socialist Labor party does not expect to win this year.

The Symphony tickets seem to be in greater demand than ever, this year, and the premiums amount to a gorgeous sum.
Evidently prosperity has visited those who buy Symphony tickets.

The bills for real estate and personal taxes will be sent out this week. Poll taxes to the number of 6444 were sent out some weeks ago.

CAMBRIDGE has fined a man for spitting on the sidewalk, and the example is worthy of emulation in other cities.

THE SCHOOL BOARD.

He recommended that a carpenter be regularly employed to attend to needed repairs on buildings throughout the city.
There were, the superintendent said, children of arrested mental development in some of the schools, which are now hindrances, and will have to be put in a separate room under the care of a special teacher. The superintendent's report and his recommendations were accepted.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

The finance committee reported expenses for September to have been $13,187. The same committee recommended that the sum of $1750 be added to the budget, which will later be offered to the city government that the teaching force for 1900 in the Adams, Claffin and Williams schools might be increased. Subsequently an order increasing these figures to $1800 was introduced by a Ward Five member that the efficiency of the Wade school force might be increased.

The Ward Two committee reported it inexpedient to change the temporary arrangement of accommodation of Bigelow school pupils as requested by those Newtonville residents who felt the Adams school school-ars were being crowded into a corner. The committee added, evidently wishing to pacify its constituents, that in its opinion the change should be made as soon as it appeared convenient.

CLAFFIN AND HYDE SCHOOL SEWERS.

It was recommended by the Ward Two committee that the city government take immediate steps to connect these schools with the city sewer.

Mr. Avery told how the board of administration had favored it and how Mayor Wilson had turned it down. Also how he felt that there was a crying necessity for these sewers. The present sanitation was thought to generate disease and cause illness among the pupils.

Mrs. Ayer emphatically endorsed her colleagues' views, as did several of the members. Incidentally Mayor Wilson and the board of health were "roasted" in a manner which would have brought tears to the eyes of their friends had they heeded it.
After further discussion it was decided that the committees of Wards Two and Five should interview Mayor Wilson and request him to connect the Claffin and Hyde buildings at the earliest opportunity.

NEW BUSINESS.

Among the new business was the school budget for 1900, in which the modest sum of $186,730 is requested of the city government to meet the school department expenses during the coming year.

It was also voted to request the mayor to provide in the 1900 budget for an additional appropriation of $10,000 for the addition of rooms at the Williams school, Auburndale.
It was voted also to request the public buildings commissioner to employ a school carpenter, as recommended in Superintendent Field's report, and also it was voted to secure a box in the Newtonville post office for the use of the school department.
Adjourned at 9:40.

Lassell Notes.

The morning services of the Congregational church of this village were largely attended by the students who embraced this opportunity of hearing the Rev. John Brown of Bedford, England, preach. In the evening again a number attended to hear the Rev. Joseph Robertson of Adelaide, Australia, principal of the Congregational College of South Australia.

The Sunday evening meeting of the Lassell Christian Endeavor Society was led by the Rev. Joel S. Ives of Stratford, Conn., whose daughter is a student here.

A Sunday class in the study of foreign missions has been organized by Miss Kendrick, the subject first to be taken up being Japan.

The Monday excursion to Charlestown, Bunker Hill and the Navy Yard was a pretty large one, and was very much enjoyed by all who went. Mr. Bragdon, one of the best to conduct an excursion of this sort, accompanied the party, as did also Miss Ransom.

C. H. PORTER,

Porter's Market, 151 Summer St., Boston.

"Why don't you want our engagement to be announced?" he asked. "Why, you foolish boy," she replied, "can't you see it would spoil the fun?" If our engagement was announced I probably wouldn't have another proposal this year, and that late-ful Mamie Bradley would hold the record."—Chicago Post.

He was taken to the Newton hospital in the police ambulance.

—The name of the man who made the trouble at the ward caucuses, by voting when he had not been registered, is known, and it may result seriously for him. The penalty is said to be six months in jail and a fine of $100, which would be a decidedly unpleasant ending to what may have been intended only as a practical joke. He is said to have told a friend that he was going to vote the Bates ticket.

—Mrs. Martha S. Elkins, wife of Mr. Richard C. Elkins, died Tuesday evening at her home on Highland avenue. Death was due to heart failure. Mrs. Elkins was a woman of fine characteristics and was much beloved by a large circle of friends. She was an active member of the Women's Educational Society and well known as a member of the First Unitarian church. The funeral was held this afternoon at 2.15, Rev. J. C. Jaynes officiating, and the interment was in the Newton cemetery.

—Mr. Alfred L. Barbour of this place, the secretary and manager of the Cambridge Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and for twenty years secretary of the Mass. Mutual Fire Insurance Union, announced on the twenty-seventh Mutual Companies of the state, was the recipient of an elegant testimonial from the members of that organization at a meeting on Friday last at Young's Hotel, Boston. He expressed his desire to retire from office and read his resignation. The members, however, declined to consider it, and at the dinner Vice President Richard F. Barrett, who presided, presented to Mr. Barbour an elegant morocco case containing twenty five-dollar gold pieces, and in a few remarks expressed the feeling and regard that the members have for the secretary. Under these conditions Mr. Barbour withdrew his resignation and accepted the secretaryship for another year.

How Ward 7 Voters Entertained Themselves.

A newspaper reporter always appreciates a lively political caucus because of the amount of news it furnishes. When such a gathering of politicians is remarkable for its harmony, however he displays but little interest and is inclined to say "Oh that was dead slow."

In Ward 7 last Wednesday evening there was nothing to excite more than common interest so far as the Bates-Guild contest was concerned, yet the informal remarks of the chairman, Mr. Samuel L. Powers, and several others of the large gathering, furnished about twenty minutes of, to use showman's phrase, "high class entertainment."

It happened this way. There were 88 Ward 7 voters present. At 8 o'clock the polls were declared open but by 8.12 all ballots had been cast.

While every one knew whoever won would have but a slim majority, it was impossible for any one to leave without hearing the final result announced.

So he said "Admittedly the evening was nothing in the form of special business to be a red upon and felt those present who had been subjected to his ruling should be amused for the balance of the session."

So he said "Admittedly the evening was nothing in the form of special business to be a red upon and felt those present who had been subjected to his ruling should be amused for the balance of the session."

During these remarks of Mr. Powers there was general laughter which grew into loud exclamations and demonstrations of applause as Mr. Powers said "We all extend a cordial greeting to Admiral Dewey, although unable to meet him in New York. I think it only proper at this time that we should receive a response which I will ask the great admiral's nearest Newton relative to make. Mr. Daniel Dewey will you not say a few words?"

Mr. Daniel Dewey probably had some intimation of the chairman's intention to call upon him, and was soon at his feet. He spoke of the greatest of the Dewey family's characteristics which he declared was modesty. After Mr. Dewey had paid a high tribute to the great admiral, Mr. W. R. Dewey was called upon. He briefly endorsed the remarks of the first speaker and called attention to the extreme modesty of the Dewey family.

Mr. Powers then said he would like to hear something about the Boston & Albany lease from Mr. James French. Mr. French replied "I have had no claim in that quarter for some time." "He rides in the electric, came a voice from the rear of a hall. Then was more laughter, and after several others had been called upon it was announced that a motion to close the polls was in order.

To accommodate those who are partial to the use of atomizers in applying liquids into the nasal passages for catarrhal troubles, the proprietors prepare Ely's Liquid Cream Balm. Price including the spraying tube is 75 cents. Druggists or by mail. The liquid embodies the medicinal properties of the best preparations. Cream Balm is quickly absorbed by the membrane and does not dry up the secretions but changes them to a natural and healthy character. Ely Brothers, 36 Warren St., N. Y.

—Mr. Edward LaCroix and family have returned from a three weeks' visit to Canada.

—On account of increase of business the Nonantum Worst Company have advertised for help.

—Reuben Farknall returned Monday from Detroit, where he attended the I. O. O. F. convention.

—Mr. Ernest Greene and Mr. Willard Frye returned yesterday to Harvard to resume their studies.

—Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Frye have returned from their wedding trip. They will make their home on Bridge street.

—The French Lodge of Foresters, Quebec Court, No. 148, held a basket party, Wednesday evening, in the Athenaeum building, Dabney street.

—Monday afternoon at the Benis bridge, an Italian, No. 13, was struck by a gravel box, which fell off a derrick boom, and was instantly killed.

—A Sunday school concert was held at the Beulah Baptist Mission last Sunday afternoon. It being the children's dedication concert, there was singing and recitations by them. There will be a praise service every Sunday evening at 7.15. Next Sunday, the Sunday school commences at 2 o'clock, instead of 4 p. m. as formerly. Rev. Clarence E. Tallier of Newton Centre, will speak at the 3 p. m. service.

NEWTON LOWER FALLS.

—Mr. Nelson Paine and family are to remove to Allston.

—Conductor F. A. Hobart is spending a vacation of two weeks at Wiscasset, Me.

—Mr. Frederic and Miss Helen Curtis have returned from a trip to the White Mountains.

—Division 25, A. O. H., gave a concert in Freeman hall, Thursday evening, that was largely attended and very entertaining.

—Officer Talmer made two arrests for drunkenness late Saturday night. Both were fined $3 at court, Monday morning.

—Marshall Spring met with a serious accident last Friday night by the breaking of the fork of his bicycle on the long Washington street hill. He was taken to his home by parties who discovered him through a lighted lantern on his bicycle, and suffers from many wounds about the face.

—A public meeting was held in Freeman hall, Monday evening, for the purpose of organizing a court of Foresters in this place. William Calkins, who has been active in completing the work of the court, presided, and a good-sized number were present. Addresses were made by Grand Junior Beadle M. J. O'Brien and Supreme Representative Joseph Jacobs, both of Boston. It is probable that a court with a charter list of about 50 will be organized in this place within a month.

NEWTON UPPER FALLS.

—Mrs. W. W. Beverley of Chestnut street has returned from a visit with her parents in Maine.

—Mr. David Isley of this place is visiting in Providence. He is reported as improving in health.

—A large gathering enjoyed the address of Rev. Samuel Fuller of Watertown, who spoke at the Methodist church last Sunday evening.

—Prof. Marshall Perrin of Wellesley Hills, and attached to the Boston University, delivered an address on "Gleanings of the Past," before a large gathering of local Christian Endeavorers, Tuesday evening.

—For greater convenience to my patrons I desire to announce that all calls for my services may be left with Mr. John W. Howe, High street, who will forward them to me with the greatest possible dispatch. Respectfully, HENRY F. CATE.

—William Tierney, an employee at the Pettie & Saco machine works, had a narrow escape from death while at work there last Saturday afternoon. He was passing through the moulding room when a mass of iron weighing 400 pounds fell, striking him on the leg. His right leg was broken, but otherwise he escaped serious injury. He was taken to the Newton Hospital.

Calkins-Lathrop.

In the Church of the Ascension, in Buffalo, New York, on Thursday, Sept. 14th, took place the marriage of Rev. Raymond Calkins, son of Rev. Wolcott Calkins, D. D., to Miss Emily Blackwell Lathrop. The ceremony was performed by Bishop Gillespie, assisted by Dr. Calkins. The best man was Mr. Leighton Calkins of New York, brother of the groom, and the maid of honor, Miss Anna B. Lathrop. The bride was gowned in white lace, the tulle held up by orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of white roses. The maid of honor was in white organdy. The attendants were Miss Ruth Sherrill and Miss Margaret Lathrop, in white muslin, over yellow taffeta, with yellow ribbons, and the two little nieces of the bride, Anna and Margaret Rochester, both in white muslin. The bride entered the church with her mother, and the ushers were Messrs. Grosvenor Calkins, De Lancy Grannis, Harvey Putnam and Dr. Charles Jewett. A reception followed at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. De Lancy Rochester. Rev. Mr. Calkins is the pastor of the Congregational church in Pittsfield, where the bridal couple will make their future home.

REAL ESTATE.

Charles F. Dow reports the sale of a nine-room house and 5300 feet of land on Prairie avenue, Auburndale, assessed for $4000, to George H. Cooke of Athol, who buys for investment. He has sold the estate of Dr. Frank Guilford a seven-room house, stable and 4900 feet of land, No. 223 Melrose street, Auburndale, to C. E. Hill of Boston; it is assessed for $3250. The same broker also sold for George H. Cooke a two-family house No. 9 and 91-2 Wedgewood street, Everett, to Georgia E. Guilford of Newton, who buys for occupancy.

Gordon L. Sawyer has bought of John J. Smith and wife a frame house and 8400 feet of land, and a lot of the same size, on Bradford road, near Eliot station, Newton Circuit railroad.

A lot of 7500 square feet on Arlington street, Newton, has been purchased by Audelia E. Hyde from Edwin W. Gay, for $1875.

Edward J. Coleman has sold to Stella D. Bates a frame house and 4953 feet of land on Chaska avenue, Auburndale.

Grain-O Brings Relief

to the coffee drinker. Coffee drinking is a habit that is universally indulged in and almost as universally injurious. Have you tried Grain-O? It is almost like coffee but the effects are just the opposite. Coffee upsets the stomach, ruins the digestion, effects the heart and disturbs the whole nervous system. Grain-O tones up the stomach, aids digestion and strengthens the nerves. There is nothing but nourishment in Grain-O. It can't be otherwise. 15 and 25c per package.

A BATES MAJORITY.

HE GETS 15 OF THE 25 VOTES AND 30 WARDS HAVE TROUBLES OF THEIR OWN.

The Republican caucus Wednesday evening was unusually well attended, and Mr. Bates secured 15 out of the 25 delegates. Some of the wards had a rather exciting time of it, notably Wards 1 and 3, where things got tangled up, and an appeal is to be made to the ballot commissioners. As usual Ward 6 was with what is known as the state machine, and the ward gave Guild a great majority.

In Ward One, J. C. Ivy, listed as a Guild man, tied with J. T. Langford, D. F. Barber and E. J. H. Estabrook, all Bates men. The chair ruled that only H. E. Cobb and I. T. Fletcher, both Guild men, whose names remained on the ballot, were chosen as delegates. Regarding the four who had tied, he said, a decision from the ballot commissioners would have to be received before it could be decided which were legally chosen. This caused a howl from the Bates faction, but those present finally decided to abide by this ruling.

In Ward 3 it was rumored that the real fight would be Wilson and anti-Wilson, with Bates and Guild only incidental. The caucus was a large one, and the Bates forces were led by Mr. Geo. W. Staples, who was Mayor Wilson's manager in the last campaign. Mr. Staples was voted down on every motion, and the Guild delegates carried the day by about two to one. Chairman Sheldon, however, found a complication, it being claimed that a man had voted whose name was not on the list of voters, and sent out after the man, desiring to have him make a sworn statement, for whom he voted, but the man could not be found. This decision did not meet with unanimous approval, as one vote would have made no difference in the result, but Mr. Sheldon decided to refuse credentials and refer the case to the ballot commissioners.

In Ward 2 Bates led by 23, in Ward 4 by a vote of 33 to 43, and in Ward 7 by eight votes. In Ward 5 the Bates majority was small and Thomas White and Alexander Davidson are tied for fourth place. The interpretation of the caucus laws is that the three already chosen will elect the fourth man. The results follow:

Ward 1—State, Henry E. Cobb, I. T. Fletcher (for Guild); senatorial, Dr. Waldo Stearns, J. W. Fisher, L. E. Coffin; councilor, George Angier, Thomas Whitehead, J. M. Briggs; county, William H. Emerson, Edward F. Barnes, Alexander Blue; representative, H. S. Potter, F. O. Barber, W. E. Harding, William B. Weldon, W. S. Bowen, C. D. Kepner; ward and city committee, M. E. Cobb, D. F. Barber, R. Farknall, F. W. Stone, E. O. Childs.

Ward 2—State, N. H. Chadwick, A. R. Mitchell, H. A. Boynton, F. L. Nagle (for Bates); senatorial, W. S. Stearns, J. W. Fisher, H. M. Chase, D. Frank Lord; councilor, J. W. Kimball, J. M. Team Golf Match Halved.

The golf match Wednesday, at the Allston club, between teams of five players from that club and the Newton Centre Golf Club was halved.

George A. Sprague of the home team played with Allen and won on five holes up. He played finely throughout and his work on the fair greens was particularly good. Another interesting match was the Wright-Noyes. The former won, one hole up, after some very even and excellent golf.

Royce of the Newton Club played the best for his team. He beat Pratt four holes up by some excellent work. Green of the visitors and Wilkie of the same team evened things up by winning from Phinney and Jones, each one hole up. The course was in excellent condition after the recent rains, and the day ideal for golf.

The teams will play again on the Newton Centre course next Wednesday.

FOR THE LADIES.

THE BEAUTIFUL DISPLAY OF NEW FALL AND WINTER GARMENTS, AT SPRINGER BROS., NEW TREMONT STREET STORE.

The ladies of Newton find Springer Brothers' new store much more convenient than the old one, as it is nearly opposite the Boylston street station of the subway. The store itself is finely adapted for the display of ladies' garments, as it is unusually wide and spacious, and allows plenty of room for the multitude of styles exhibited by the firm. There is also a very large and well lighted basement, in which are the work rooms, fitting and trying on rooms, the wholesale department, the dining room and coat rooms for the many employees of the firm.

There are outside garments in great variety. The popular jackets will be either very long or very short this year, and capes promise to be in great favor. The handsome cape shown in the cut is of black velvet, trimmed with applique embroidery of chenille and jet over silk. The fronts are rounded off so as to give a graceful sweep.

Many different materials are used and the new golf capes are especially becoming, being a marked departure from former styles.

In fall street suits there is a very natty costume illustrated below, consisting of a stylish dark blue plaid skirt, and jacket of jersey to match the blue of the skirt. The jacket is of entirely new cut, fitting snugly in the back and shaped to the form in front, with a single dart on either side. It is rounded over the hips and extending to a decided point in the back, the extreme shortness being relieved by a trimming of three straps along the back. The sleeves extend in a scallop over the hand, the collar is of blue velvet, and the lining of blue satin. The skirt has the new babit bore, opening at the left side of the front gore, and is very long of course.

There are many other styles of outside garments shown, and furs promise to be even more popular than usual. The velvet of those who have visited the store is that the variety and styles are much ahead of any former season, while the prices range from modest sums up to figures that would alarm the men of the family.

called Grain-O. It is a delicious, appetizing, nourishing food drink to take the place of coffee. Sold by all grocers and liked by all who have used it because when properly prepared it tastes like the finest coffee but is free from all its injurious properties. Grain-O aids digestion and strengthens the nerves. It is not a stimulant but a health builder, and children, as well as adults, can drink it with great benefit. Costs about 1-4 as much as coffee. 15 and 25c.

Picture Framing.

The well known picture framing establishment of Mrs. Eben Smith, was removed this week from its old place on Lincoln street, Boston, to the corner of Summer and South streets, over Jaynes' new drug store. There is a convenient elevator, so that the patrons do not have to climb any stairs, and the new rooms are well lighted and spacious and give opportunity for needed extensions. Mrs. Smith has carried the business since the death of her husband, and has brought to it much taste and artistic feeling, so that all the old patrons have been retained and new ones added. All work entrusted to her is carefully and promptly done. See adv. on first page.

"Mercy!" exclaimed Mrs. Chugwater, who was looking over the newspaper headlines. "Stabbed in cold blood!" "Then the person who was stabbed," observed Mr. Chugwater, "must have been a Boston anti-expansionist."—Chicago Tribune.

"Isn't it awe-inspiring?" said the youth with tendencies toward the sublime, "to think of this earth rushing forever forward on its track, superior to all human direction and beyond all restraint?" "Yes," answered the girl softly, after a long pause. "It makes me think of my new automobile."—Washington Star.

THE FEELING IN ENGLAND

WITH REGARD TO THE UNITED STATES AND ITS NEW PROBLEMS.

Parts of a recent interview with D. E. Sanford, principal of the Brookline High school, who is home from 15 months spent abroad, are worth quoting. "What is thought abroad of the results of the Spanish-American war?" asked the reporter.

"The open hostility toward America manifested at the beginning of the war has disappeared, but no sympathy is felt for us in our difficulties in the Philippines, and little or no faith in our motives or professions. In England, the people are almost gleeful over the results of the war. There seems to be a very general satisfaction that we have become involved in foreign complications, a feeling based not upon ill-will, but upon a desire for fellowship in operations in the Orient, which are sure to provoke the jealousy of foreign powers, but which are less likely to be challenged if the two great branches of the Anglo-Saxon race are engaged in the same business. Others, less influenced by selfish considerations, rejoice in the newly emphasized kinship. 'You know we are all of one race,' said such a one effusively, so when Germany felt like interposing, of course we resented it. We didn't know or care whether you were right or wrong in your fracas with Spain, but we didn't propose to have any outsider interfere with a member of the family."

"There are others still, a smaller class, who honestly believe that we are doing our duty in taking up the white man's burden." "You will find the work well worth doing," remarked a member of the Indian service to me. "It will take blood and treasure and no end of time and patience, but it's worth while, as we have found in our experience in India."

"When questioned, however, he frankly admitted that there was nothing in England's methods of dealing with oriental people which prepared the way for self-government. It left them as helpless as it found them."

"Still another opinion was expressed to me by a gentleman with whom I dined at the National Liberal club in London. A journalist of experience and a literary man of recognized ability, a student from his youth up of international politics, he was altogether the best informed man upon American affairs that I met during my sojourn abroad. This gentleman, who had twice traveled in America and was acquainted with leaders of both political parties, could scarcely find words to express his astonishment at the growth of imperialism in the United States. That we should be willing to sacrifice our great national advantages, become embroiled in international politics, increase our army, and tax ourselves for the prosecution of a war to conquest 7000 miles away seemed to him to be a little short of national suicide."

"What has become of our traditional shrewdness?" "Why should we not profit by Europe's experience?" These were his queries. Or, said the man of letters, seeing higher ground, how could we square it with our political creed? How could such a one (the journalist named a member of the cabinet, with whom he was acquainted, and for whom he had the greatest respect) countenance such a departure from America's traditional policy? He referred, with enthusiasm, said Mr. Sanford, "to Senator John A. Cullum, and said that no recent American utterance had commanded more respect from thoughtful English statesmen."

It was Mr. Sanford's good fortune to be at Oxford Commemoration week, and to be present when degrees were conferred upon Lord Kitchener and Cecil Rhodes. "This brought me to the storm center of English opposition to an aggressive foreign policy. It will be remembered that 90 prominent members of the university signed a paper expressing their regret that Oxford should confer a degree upon one who had been guilty of questionable actions for the extension of the empire," continued Mr. Sanford. "The atmosphere that day was charged with electricity, and all in authority felt relieved when the exercises had passed off with no other disturbances than the usual chaffing from the under-graduates. England as well as America is dividing into two camps, and upon similar questions. Fortunately there is no precedent in either country for the suppression of moral minorities."

A Happy Mother

Frolicking with her baby makes one of the prettiest spectacles ever seen in the home. But nothing is sadder to see than the unhappy mother, weak and nervous, striving in vain to hush the cries of her weak and nervous babe. There can be no happiness for either mother or child without health. Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription "has done wonders" for many a woman, by restoring her health and opening for her the way to happy motherhood. This really wonderful medicine is not a cure-all. It is a preparation specially designed to cure diseases peculiar to women. It cures all the debilitating drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, cures female weakness, and removes the causes which generally make women nervous and sleepless.

There is no alcohol in "Favorite Prescription" and it contains no opium, cocaine or other narcotic.

Mrs. James W. Blacker, of 629 Catherine Street, Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "Your medicines have done wonders for me. For years my health was very poor. I had four miscarriages, but since taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery' I have much better health, and now I have a fine healthy baby."

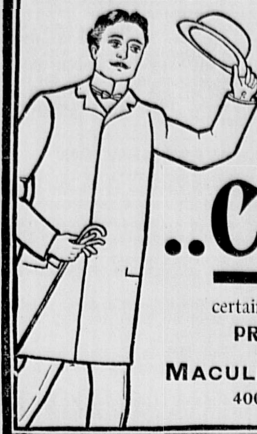

Use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets with "Favorite Prescription" if the bowels are inactive or irregular.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

TREMONT THEATRE—Playgoers residing outside Boston will no doubt be interested to learn that "Way Down East" will be presented nowhere in New England except at the Tremont Theatre this year, as Mr. Brady's Company, after concluding its engagement in Boston, will go to the Academy of Music, New York, for the remainder of the season. The play is now in its last month at the Tremont and the final performance will be given on October 21. The house is crowded nightly, and out-of-town people intending to witness the performance will find it to their advantage to attend the Wednesday matinee and thus avoid the crush in the evening. On October 23, Manager Knowles' Fifth Avenue Theatre Company will occupy the stage of the Tremont for the presentation of "Three Little Lambs," Mr. R. A. Barnett's musical play that was originally produced with great success by the Boston Cadets, under the title of "Queen of the Ballet." This piece is pronounced Mr. Barnett's best, and a worthy successor to "The Girl in the Red Velvet Gown," "The Girl in the Red Velvet Gown," and "The Girl in the Red Velvet Gown." The cast includes Miss Adele Ritchie, and will include Miss Nellie Bragins, Miss Marie Cahill, Messrs. W. E. Philip, W. T. Carleton, Tom Hadaway, Edmund Lawrence, Raymond Hitchcock, Harold Mizan, and other well-known singers and comedians, the company numbering over sixty people.

BOSTON MUSEUM—Next Monday evening the Boston Museum will bring forward a comedy farce novelty. This is a three-act "comedy-farce" entitled "The Cuckoo." Adapted by Charles Brookfield from Melville's "Decor," it made its way from Paris to the Avenue Theatre, London, where it created such a stir that the end of last Spring saw it on this side of the ocean and upon the stage of the Theatre, New York, where it continued to lagoon houses until the close of the season. The English version of it is not called "The Cuckoo" after the bird of that name, but after a newspaper that figures conspicuously in the plot. Briefly the latter concerns the misdeeds of Mr. and Mrs. Penfold, who are so decidedly ill-matched (he is commonplace and she is quite a beauty) that each finds some one else more companionable. One day Mrs. Penfold takes an outing at Maidenstone-on-the-Thames with her admirer (Hugh Farrant) who incidentally distinguishes himself by recapturing a lion that has escaped from a traveling circus. Unfortunately, Mrs. Penfold is recognized by someone, who draws the very natural conclusion that Farrant is Mr. Penfold. "The Cuckoo" is published on account of the supposed Penfold's bravery, and then, having offered as a prize for such deeds, a medal, seeks to bestow it upon the real Penfold, who, of course, does not know what it all means. In the resultant confusion Mrs. Penfold sees a way out of her escapade by turning the tables on her husband, which she accomplishes by showing him a picture of "The Cuckoo," and accusing him of having been at Maidenstone with another woman. This makes more complications, but assists eventually in the general straightening out. There are a dozen other characters in the play, one of which, an African king, furnishes a great deal of amusement. "The Cuckoo" is, on the whole, a good offering of this season of the year, when many theaters are hardly ready for comedy plays, and it will doubtless find at the Museum that same favor that it met with at Wallack's. It will be presented by an excellent company, headed by Mr. S. C. St. Aubrey, David McCarthey, H. S. Lewis, Joseph A. Weber, Fulton Russell, Harry Lewis, Nellie Butler, Nora Dunblane, Annie Wood and others.

Literary Notes.

Sir William Magnay, author of the new novel of London society and politics, "The Heiress of the Season," is the second baronet, having succeeded his father in 1871. He was born in November, 1855, and resides at Sussex Place, Regent's Park. His novel, which is described as a brilliant and caustic study of modern social and political life, will be published shortly by D. Appleton and Company.

According to the London Chronicle, "A Double Thread," the new novel by Geoffrey Fowler, is the most successful novel of the summer in England. D. Appleton and Company are the American publishers of Miss Fowler's novels.

The Richard Mansfield Calendar for 1900, which is now appearing on the bookshelves, contains thirty-two good-sized pages. An etching of Mr. Mansfield forms the frontispiece. On the right-hand pages of the book the eminent actor is shown in twelve of his favorite characters. The portraits are from half-tones. Many of the photographs from which the half-tones were made were supplied by Mr. Mansfield from his private collection, and are here given to the public for the first time. In the wide margins of the other pages are reproductions of appropriate pen-and-ink drawings. Here, too, are good wishes for each month and bright selections from the various plays—reproductions of Mr. Mansfield's own hand. The cover-page bears a beautifully printed representation, in two colors, of Mr. Mansfield in the role of Cyrano de Bergerac. It is understood that there is to be a beautiful edition de luxe also, in which the frontispiece etching is on India paper and is signed by Mr. Mansfield. This edition is to be bound in leather, and will be inclosed in a box. The publishers of this unique Calendar are D. Appleton and Company.

A Gastronomic Surprise.

"Good cooks are born, like poets," said Major J. B. Quinn, "but upon a time I bought a lot of turkeys for a government snagboat on one of the interior waterways, and, visiting it not long afterward, was surprised to find lemon pie being served out to all hands for dinner. I ate a piece myself, and, although it was delicious, I felt it my duty to call down the steward for squandering government funds.

"Where did you get the lemons for those pies?" I asked sternly.

"You sent 'em up with the others, sah," he replied, grinning.

"Why, I didn't send anything except turkeys," I said in surprise.

"Well, that's what them pies is made of," he admitted reluctantly. "The men didn't like turkeys no other way, sah, so I just made 'em up in lemon pies."

"It was strictly true, and beyond the fact that he had used some sort of chemical to secure the flavor I was never able to ascertain how he did it,"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

An Intelligent Horse.

A Scotchman has telegraphed a story of an intelligent horse that needs a Caledonian stolidity of belief. The animal noticed while grazing that it had cast a shoe. It at once galloped to a smithy at some distance off, held up the foot in question, was duly shod and then galloped home again. It is a nice question if the blacksmith will get the canny owner of the horse to pay the bill. Presently we may expect to see in the papers that Mr. So-and-so does not hold himself responsible for any bills which his horse may incur.—London Globe.

ONE OF SOTHERN'S JOKES.

The Irrepressible Actor's Prank In an Ironmonger's Shop.

Mrs. John Wood, one of the veterans of the English stage, appeared with the older Sotherns in the same troupe for several seasons in the old days. She enjoyed her companionship highly, she says, and loves to tell of the many humorous tricks he played in private life. On one occasion, while the company was playing in Birmingham, Mrs. Wood met Sothern in the street. They were near an ironmonger's shop, when he shook hands with her and bade her good morning.

"Would you mind going in here with me?" he wanted to make a small purchase," he said.

She accompanied him.

He went up to the counter and said, "I want 'Macaulay's History of England.'"

The assistant said: "We do not sell books, sir. This is an ironmonger's shop."

"Well, I'm not particular," said Sothern, pretending to be deaf. "I don't care whether it is bound in calf or Russia."

"But this is not a bookseller's!" shouted the assistant.

"All right," said Sothern. "Wrap it up neatly. I want to have it sent down to the hotel. It's for a present I wish to make to a relative. Put it up nicely."

"We don't keep it!" shouted the assistant, getting red in the face, while Mrs. Wood stepped aside and took a chair in another part of the shop, almost overcome with suppressed laughter at the cheerful, frank expression of Sothern's face and the mad, puzzled look of the shopkeeper's assistant.

"Do it up as if it were for your own mother. I don't want anything better than that," said Sothern. "I would like to write my name on the fly leaf."

"Sir," bawled the assistant at the top of his voice, "we do not keep books!"

"Very well," said the actor, quite undisturbed at the emotion he was creating. "I will wait for it."

Under the impression that his customer was either stone deaf or a lunatic, the assistant bounced off to the lower end of the shop and asked his master to come, saying: "I can do nothing with the man. I think he must be off his head." Whereupon the principal marched up to the spot where Sothern was standing and asked very loudly: "What is it, sir? What do you desire?"

"I want to buy a file," returned Sothern quietly—"a plain file, about four or five inches in length."

"Certainly," said the principal, with a withering look at his assistant and producing at once the article which had been asked for.

How Remyen's Playing Once Broke Up a Scotch Congregation.

A good many years ago Remyen visited Grand Haven, Mich. He and his company gave a concert there on a Saturday night, intending to take the Goodrich boat for Chicago the following Sunday evening. His wonderful playing so greatly pleased his audience that the next morning, just before service commenced in the Presbyterian church, the members of the choir decided it would enhance the programme to secure his services.

The church was only a few doors from the hotel, without consulting the trustees or elders, the leader sent an usher with a polite note of invitation to Mr. Remyen to join the choir. The violinist seemed much pleased, and willingly consented to help swell the music with his Cremona. Little thinking how it would stir the "bluid" of the Scottish members of the church.

He received a broadside of angry and horrified glances as he passed up the aisle behind the usher, and when he began to tune the "viol" Brother Thomson arose, gathered his family and fled from the "wrath to come." Then Percival did likewise, followed by Johnny Boogie and all the Macdonalds, McLeods, McDougalls and Robertsons. Captain Looit waited until the first hymn was sung with the violin obligato, and he, too, joined the gathering clans outside, saying:

"Hoot, mon, what a scareelege, tae think I hae leaved tae hear a faddle playin' in the kirk. Eh, Thomson, d'ye no think it's blasphemous?"

"E'en sa," said Thomson, "an it'll be a lang day afore I'll daur tae set my foot inside the kirk agin; I'll be a meercle if a' the kirk's struck by lightning."

Remyen watched the exodus without a shade of annoyance on his smiling face and seemed to put as much soul into his music as though he were playing for money. After service was over the members of the choir, who were a bit embarrassed at the turn Caledonian sentiment had taken, began to offer apologies and try to smooth matters over, but he only laughed.

It was months before any of the highlanders began to enter the fold again, and some of them never came back. But to this day, among the older members, Remyen is known as "the mon who played the faddle in the kirk."—Detroit News.

Journalism Under Difficulties.

"Talk about newspaper work. Why, you fellows who work on model papers with plants costing you into the hundreds of thousands of dollars don't know anything about it," said a superannuated editor. "Let me tell you something about early enterprise. It was during the war down in Tennessee. I was running a weekly, and Grant kept everything out. There wasn't a sheet of paper in the town, and our Washington hand press had broken, and the new casting necessary to make it work was somewhere on the road, with Grant's army between us.

"But I got there. A fellow smuggled in a wagon load of four down in paper bags. The rest was easy. There was a stranded circus in town. It had been there a year, and I used the elephant for a press. I put the form on the ground and placed a flour bag over it. The elephant's keeper then caused the brute to sit down on it, and we got 28 first class impressions, two more than our circulation required."—National Labor Tribune.

Robbed The Grave.

A startling incident, as narrated by John Oliver of Philadelphia, is as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters, to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50c., guaranteed, at all drug stores.

—A private letter received recently in this city from Manila contains a graphic picture of some of the great victories which were reported from time to time through the Orix bulletins, which the war department edits for publication. "There have been," says the writer, "three 'victories' announced by the official bulletins since I reached here, all based upon the fact that the most insignificant character, if you had gone into your back yard at night and had driven three tom-cats off the fence, and you had then returned to your house and the tom-cats had returned to the fence, your exploit would have been about as much of a victory as any of these affairs was here." We are aware that it is "treason" to publish such information, but, truth is, might is might and prevail—New York Evening Post.

—Colonel Cody was not averse to church-going, though he was liable even in church to be carried away by the rollicking spirit that was in him. Instance his visit to the little temple which he had helped to build at North Platte.
His wife and sister were in the congregation, and this ought to have not only kept him awake, but it should have insured perfect decorum on his part. Mrs. Cody's hymn commenced with the words: "Oh, for ten thousand tongues to sing," etc. The organist, who played "by ear," started the tune in too high a key to be followed by the choir and congregation and had to try again.

—A second attempt ended, like the first, in failure. "Oh, for ten thousand tongues to sing, my great God," came the opening words for the third time, followed by a squeak from the organ and a relapse into painful silence. Will could contain himself no longer and blurted out, "Start it at 5,000, and mumble some of the rest of us can get in."—"Last of the Great Scouts," by Helen Cody Wetmore.

—It Depends.
"Can dogs find their way home from a distance?" is a question frequently asked. It is according to the dog. If it's one you want to get rid of, he can find his way back from Africa. If it's a good one, he's apt to get lost if he goes around the corner.

THE BANK CASHIER.

His Interesting Story of How He Did Not Rob the Bank Vault.

"I was cashier of a bank in Pennsylvania a good many years ago," said the man who was traveling on a dead-end pass, "and after a couple of years I made up my mind that things were too slow for me. In other words, I decided to gamble with what money I could and skip for Europe and go into business on my own hook. I bided my time, and one night, when I knew I could lay my hands on about $50,000, I prepared to bid the town goodby. I had a key to the bank and another to the vault, and as we had no watchman inside I had no trouble in getting in. It was about midnight when I made my raid, and I hadn't opened the vault yet, when the bank door was unlocked, and the president entered. He had an empty carpetbag under his arm and got weak in the knees when he saw me. We hadn't passed a question when another key clicked, and the manager entered. He also had an empty carpetbag, and he also got weak in the knees. The three of us sat down, each with an empty bag at his feet, and looked at each other for a long time. It was the president who spoke first, and he said: "I was worried about the funds in the vault."

"So was I," said the manager.
"So was I," I added.
"And hadn't we better see if they are safe?"

"I think we had."
"So do I."
"Then the president unlocked the vault, and the three of us stepped inside and assured ourselves that the funds were all right. As we came out and the doors were locked behind us he said: "I found this old carpetbag on the street as I came along."

"And I found this," said the manager.
"And I found this," I added.
"There was an interval of painful silence, and we all walked out together. The outside watchman came up as we did so, and the president observed: "Special meeting, you see, James. You'd better go inside for the rest of the night."

"Yes, inside," said the manager.
"Yes, inside, James," I added.
"James was locked in the bank," continued the ex-cashier, "and we bade each other good night and separated. It was an even up thing so far as it went, and it ought to have been so to the end, but the honest man is always the one to suffer. Next day I got the bounce. The president said that he and the manager had been thinking things over and had come to the conclusion that I had been tempted to rob the bank and would have got away with every dollar if they hadn't happened to show up. I was honest in acknowledging it and had to go, and I believe they had their salaries raised for their zeal and solicitude."—Chicago News.

The Alert Little Chipmunk.

An acquaintance surprised me the other day by the question, "What is a chipmunk—how does he differ from a squirrel?" I thought everybody knew this gay sprite of the roadsides. He is a true squirrel, about the size of the common red one and of the same reddish tone, which, like the brother of the trees, is much brighter in winter than in summer, when the long, warm, handsome fur, suitable for cold weather and the nuptial time, is replaced by a warm weather suit of a cooler, shorter and paler sort. His distinguishing marks are two white stripes along the side of the back from the fore shoulder to the root of the tail, each bordered by a black line, making him the prettiest of our lesser quadrupeds and giving to him, as with ercets and trailing, bushy tail he scuds along the fence or scampers in and out of a brush pile—for he is a true ground squirrel, rarely going even upon the trunk of a tree—an air of dandy pride and alertness that is most engaging. In the far west there are four lined and checkered ones.

Our chipmunk is the familiar of the old stone walls, and where in some parts of the country these are disappearing the chipmunk is disappearing, too, while many a skunk and woodchuck still find themselves dispossessed.—Lippincott's.

Colds and Rare Hands.

Many people marvel why they suffer so frequently with cold in the head. The matter has puzzled even the omniscient doctor, and his only explanation was that some persons were constitutionally inclined that way.

Investigation shows, however, that it is all due to the hands. No matter how warmly you clothe the rest of the body, you readily catch cold if you leave the hands exposed.

The reason is very simple after all. Of course every one knows that the blood and blood vessels contribute a sort of hot water warming apparatus for the body. As the hands are more exposed than other parts, they receive a more liberal supply of the heating fluid. But this blood is immediately chilled and returned in an icy state to the lungs. Here it sets up inflammation with the natural consequences of congestion, which is commonly called cold. If you take care to wear gloves on any day that is rather chilly, it is astonishing what a lot of colds you will ward off.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Wanted a Run For His Money.

An Austrian, coming up on a recent steamer, fell in with two sharpers, who led him into many wagers. They were so invariably successful that he became suspicious that they were "fixing" the bets, but each new proposition was so tempting that he could not resist it. At last, as they approached the Golden Gate, he counted up the remnants of his roll.

"Gentlemen," he said to them, "I find I have lost $22 in American money left. Now, I will risk it all if you will name this last bet."

The others were curious, and, knowing they could not lose much, consented, and asked what his proposition was.

"It is this," he said. "I'll bet you $22 that I can yell louder than the ship's steam whistle. Of course I'll lose," he added, "but, by jingo, I know the whistle can't be fixed."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Siamese Customs.

Siamese paupers and criminals are not cremated when they die, but taken to a temple, where their bodies are cut in three places and laid out in the temple inclosure, where they are devoured by pariah dogs and a flock of vultures kept there for that purpose.

The Siamese count their years by sets of 12, each year bearing the name of some animal. Persons born in years the animals of which are hostile must not marry. Thus a union between a man born in the year of the tiger with a girl born in the year of the rabbit would be very unfortunate for her.

Do You

Appreciate reliability in the goods YOU purchase?

In these days of striving to sell goods at the lowest possible prices do not lose sight of the fact that there are differences in both texture of the materials sold and used as well as in the manner of construction of the garments worn.

Stand on any street corner for five minutes, you won't have to be a close observer to note the difference and see if you think that Dixie struck near the truth when he jestingly remarked, "That 50c. might be high for oyster stew, but he didn't believe it would be for Todies."

By virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Daniel Manning to George G. Brewer, dated August 24th, A. D. 1898 and recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds, book 2294, page 281, for breach of the condition of said mortgage, and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, will be sold at public auction upon the premises hereinafter described, on Monday the twenty-third day of October, A. D. 1899, at ten minutes past four o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, and therein described substantially as follows: A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon situated in Newton in the County of Middlesex and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, being lot G, as shown on a "Plan of Lots belonging to G. G. Brewer, Newton," by Aspinwall and Lincoln, Civil Engineers, dated August 24, 1898, and to be recorded herewith, and bounded and described as follows: Southeasterly by Manet Road, as shown on said plan, fifty-five (55) feet; Southwesterly by lot F, as shown on said plan, one hundred and nineteen and 41-100 (119.41) feet; containing according to said plan six thousand eight hundred and twenty-seven (6827) square feet, and being the same premises conveyed to said Manning by said Daniel Manning to said George G. Brewer by deed of even date with said mortgage and therewith recorded. Said premises will be sold subject to a mortgage for $4000 given by said Daniel Manning to said George G. Brewer, to restrictions of record, and to all unpaid taxes and assessments.

$200 will be required in cash at time and place of sale. For other terms apply to Wm. H. White, 87 Milk street, Boston.
